The first Episcopal services were held in Lawrence, in the summer of 1857, by the Rev. C. M. Callaway, then a missionary, residing at Topeka. He was succeeded by the Rev. C. Reynolds, during the same year, and who afterward became Chaplain in the United States Army. He remained until 1858, when a parish was organized, with its present appellation. A charter was granted to this organization by the Territorial Legislature, February 8, 1859. A small stone building was erected, which still remains as the chapel, and on the 29th day of July, in the same year, it was solemnly consecrated to the worship and service of Almighty God, by the Right Rev. J. Kemper, D. D. This was the first Episcopal church consecrated in the State. Under the rectorship of Dr. Reynolds, a rectory was purchased on Tennessee street, which was occupied until his resignation took place, November 26, 1863. He was succeeded by the Rev. R. W. Oliver, D. D., who continued in charge until October, 1867.

Under the administration of Rev. Mr. Oliver, additional ground was purchased; the chapel was enlarged and repaired; a transept was added to it for school purposes; the old vestry was sold and the one now existing was built. From October, 1867, to June, 1868, when the Rev. J. K. Dunn took charge of the parish, the pulpit was temporarily supplied by the Right Rev. Bishop Vail, D. D. It being found necessary to provide a larger building, subscriptions were raised for a new edifice. The ground was broken for the foundations in May, 1870, and the corner stone laid November 10, 1870. The building, which is a beautiful gothic edifice, with a tower and spire, was completed in April, 1873. It is built of stone, the interior being handsomely finished in native woods, the total cost being $25,000.

In March, 1875, the Rev. J. K. Dunn resigned and the church was supplied with occasional services by the Bishop and other clergymen until September of the same year, when the Rev. Paul Zeigler entered upon his duties. In April, 1879, he resigned, and the parish remained without a rector until the following October, when the Rev. A. Beatty, D. D., took charge of it.

In the erection of the church edifice, a debt of several thousand dollars was incurred, but by various efforts was liquidated, and being free from all incumbrances, was consecrated April [21, 1881, by the Right Rev. Thos. A. Vail, D. D. LL. D., Bishop of the Diocese. Under the rectorship of its present pastor, Rev. A. Beatty, D. D., the membership of the parish, which is steadily increasing, now numbers over 100.

Society of Friends.—In 1865, several families of the Quaker persuasion, settled in and near Lawrence, and formed the nucleus of what is termed a "Quaker settlement." In 1866, a church organization was formed with forty members, at the residence of W. Hadley. Religious services were held for a short time in Miller's Hall, and in 1867 what is now known as the Park School Building was occupied. In 1872, a two-story stone building, 60x80 feet, with wings, 20x26 feet on each side, was erected at a cost of $22,000. This building was erected for and is used as the yearly meeting house of the State, and is well adapted for the purpose.

Mrs. M. Cox was the first preacher, and occupied the pulpit from 1867 to 1879, during which time she was assisted by Mrs. Mary Cox and William Nickelson. W. Nickelson and Dr. W. F. Harvey are the present occupants of the pulpit. State membership, 5,000. Lawrence membership, 250.

The United Presbyterian Church was organized June 18, 1867, with twenty members, by Rev. J. C. Herron, who remained in charge of the church until 1877, when he was succeeded by Rev. J. S. Nelson, who is the present pastor. Prior to the erection of a church edifice, services were held, first at Miller's Hall, second at court room, and third in the chapel of the Lee, the church building located on the corner of Warren and Ohio streets, by virtue of a legal process, came into the hands of the aforesaid Lee, who had previously resigned. Under the administration of Rev. R. T. W. James, the erection of a frame edifice, 30x50 feet, on the corner of Connecticut and Berkley streets, was commenced and completed at a cost of $1,200, actual value $1,800. CITY CEMETERIES.

The resting places for the dead are unsurpassed for their location, natural surroundings and artificial improvements. The first cemetery was established soon after the first settlement of Lawrence, on the high lands west of the city. In this cemetery were first buried the victims of the Quantrill massacre. In 1865, the city authorities purchased a tract of forty acres, southeast of the city, and named it Oak Hill Cemetery. Early in 1872, the unfortunate victims of the "raid" were re-interred in this cemetery, and a monument erected in their memory. One of the actions of the city government of North Lawrence was to purchase a tract of twenty acres, to be used for burial purposes, under the name of Maple Grove Cemetery. Improvements have been made, from time to time by the city, on Oak Hill Cemetery, to the extent of several thousand dollars.

THE PRESS.

October 15, 1854, the first number of the Kansas Pioneer was published in Ohio, by John Speer, who had previously visited Kansas and prepared his editorials in that Territory. Returning to Kansas with his material, he found that a Pro-slavery paper called the Pioneer had been established at Kickapoo. He therefore changed the name of his paper to the Kansas Tribune, and published the first number in Lawrence, January 5, 1855. S. N. Wood became a partner, and the paper was published until November, 1855, when it was removed to Topeka. In July of that year, it was published as a daily for one week. The publication of the Tribune was continued at Topeka until February, 1857, when Speer sold out to Ross Brothers.

The Herald of Freedom was established by G. W. Brown, the first number being dated "Wakarusa, K. T., October 21, 1854," and being printed in Conneautville, Crawford County, Penn. Of this first number there were printed 21,000 copies. The second number was dated "Lawrence, January 6, 1855." The paper was an eight-column folio, almost entirely without advertisements, the subscription price being $2 per annum. May 21, 1856, the office was destroyed by the border ruffians, and the publication suspended. It was re-established in the following November, and continued until 1859, when it finally expired.

The Kansas Free State was started at Lawrence by J. Miller and R. G. Elliott, in January, 1855, and continued until May, 1856, when the office was destroyed by "border ruffians." Its publication was continued at Delaware, Kan., for a short time, by R. G. Elliott.

The first number of the Lawrence Republican was issued May 28, 1857, by Norman Allen and T. D. Thacher. In the summer of 1858, T. D. Thacher, S. O. Thacher, S. M. Thacher, bought Allen out. In 1859, S. O. Thacher retired. In 1860, John Speer purchased the entire establishment, and took as a partner V. Nicholas Smith, who married Ida, a daughter of Horace Greeley. Smith identified himself with the paper three months, and was succeeded by Rev. H. M. Moore, who also remained three months. Mr. Speer continued the paper alone until September 4, 1862, when he sold it back to T. D. Thacher. During the last session of the Territorial Legislature, in 1861, the paper was published as a daily by Speer & Smith. Mr. Thacher continued to publish the paper in connection with S. M. Thacher until the Quantrill massacre, August 21, 1863, when the office, and everything pertaining thereto, were totally consumed, February 1, 1868. The Republican was re-established by Mr. Thacher, and continued until March 4, 1869, when it was consolidated with the State Journal and the Ottawa Home Journal in the Republican Daily Journal and the Western Home Weekly.

The Kansas State Journal succeeded the Herald of Freedom. It was established by J. C. Trask and H. E. Lowman in February, 1861, on the material of the Herald of Freedom. Mr. Trask was killed in the Quantrill raid in 1863. In the spring of 1864, Mr. Lowman sold out to S. C. Smith and W. S. Rankin. In May, 1865, James Christian and M. W. Reynolds purchased Smith's interest, and the paper was published in the name of Christian, Reynolds & Co. In the winter of 1866, Reynolds bought Christian's interest, and in 1868 George A. Reynolds purchased the interest of Mr. Rankin. March 3, 1868, the paper was consolidated with the Lawrence Republican and the Ottawa Home Journal, under the firm name of Kalloch, Thacher & Reynolds. The Daily State Journal was started by Christian & Reynolds, July 6, 1865.

The Republican Daily Journal and Daily Kansas Tribune was started March 3, 1868. It was a consolidation of the Daily Lawrence Republican, published by T. D. Thacher, the Daily State Journal published by M. W. Reynolds, and the Western Home Journal, a weekly paper published at Ottawa by I. S. Kalloch. The firm was known as Kalloch, Thacher & Reynolds. In 1871, Mr. Thacher bought the interest of his partners and became the sole proprietor. In 1874, F. E. Simpson became a partner in the concern. In December, 1874, Messrs. Thacher & Simpson purchased the good will, subscription list and franchises of the Kansas Tribune, and consolidated it with the Journal, the name of the paper becoming the Republican Daily Journal and Daily Kansas Tribune.

In 1876, Mr. Simpson retired, and Mr. Thacher became the sole proprietor.

Lawrence Journal.—In 1876, the Lawrence Journal Company was organized. The Western Home Journal is the name of the weekly edition. The Lawrence Journal Company had charge of the paper until September 1, 1882, when W. M. Thacher and F. Webster leased, enlarged and improved it, and are its present editors.

The first number of the Congregational Record was published in January, 1859, at Lawrence, R. Cordley, S. Y. Lum and H. M. Simpson, a committee of the Congregational Association, having charge of its publication. Rev. R. Cordley had editorial charge. It was published quarterly until January, 1862, after which it appeared monthly. It was destroyed by the Quantrill raid, as was the house of its editor, Mr. Cordley. The next number, September and October combined, was printed by T. D. Thacher at the office of the Journal of Commerce, Kansas City, and contained a full account of the raid. It was printed at Kansas City under the supervision of Mr. Parker as chief editor until December, 1864, when it was suspended until June, 1865. It was then revived under the editorial care of Rev. J. D. Liggott and Rev. F. McVicar, and was printed at Leavenworth one year. It was then transferred to Topeka, with McVicar and Cordley editors. In May, 1867, its publication was abandoned. When published at Lawrence, it was printed at different times by T. D. Thacher & Co., Speer & Smith, and Speer & Moore.

The Kansas Weekly Tribune was re-established at Lawrence by John Speer in January, 1863. It was continued till August 21, following, when the office and material were destroyed by Quantrill. John M. and Robert Speer, sons of John Speer, and Charles Palmer, a journeyman printer, were murdered at the same time. In November, 1863, the Tribune was re-established as a daily and weekly, by John Speer, who continued its publication till February 1, 1871, when it was sold to J. S. Emery, John Hutchings and J. H. Shimmons, Emery acting as editor for a short time, when he sold his interest to his partners, who conducted the paper until August 30, 1873. At this date, I. S. Kalloch purchased the interest of Shimmons, and edited the paper until April 6, 1874, when he sold out to Hutchings, the latter being sole proprietor and editor from that time until July 7 of that year. Hutchings then sold the office to E. H. Snow, L. Meitus and John Bain. These parties continued the publication of the paper, with Meitus as editor, until November 15, 1874, when the paper again fell into the hands of Hutchings, and the publication was suspended December 6, following. It was revived October 29, 1875, by John Speer, J. E. Covel & George M. Richards, with John Speer as editor. Richards retired January 24, 1876. Speer & Covel continued the publication till March 16, 1877, when Speer withdrew, and Covel continued its publication until October 20, 1879, when he retired and the paper was leased to N. Z. Strong, C. F. Strong and N. W. Pinneo, who published under the name of the Tribune Company until January 1, 1881. Mr. Hutchings then leased it to L. D. Bailey and E. Saveage. Saveage remained but a short time. Bailey was succeeded in October, 1881, by M. W. Avery, who continued as publisher until November 16, 1881, when Hutchings sold the paper to A. K. Johnson. Johnson ran it a few days and leased it to P. Bell & Co., who ran it until April, 1882, when John Speer took charge, and is the present editor.

The North Lawrence Courier was started July 28, 1866, by J. S. Broughton. In September following, the name was changed to the Kaw Valley Courier. February 9, 1867, George N. Broughton became associated in the publication, and continued until June 8, following, when he withdrew. H. C. Whitney took an interest in and became editor of the paper September 14, 1867, and the name was changed to the Clarion. In November following, Mr. Whitney withdrew and Mr. Broughton sold the paper to John Speer, of the Lawrence Tribune. Mr. Broughton's paper was printed a part of the time at the Journal office and a part of the time at the Tribune office. After the suspension of the paper, Judge H. H. Howard started and for some time published the North Lawrence Journal.

J. D. Skiff purchased it. They published it till August, 1876, when E. Moore was substituted for Skiff, and the paper was continued by Ross & Moore till October 12, 1876, when Ross became sole proprietor and having admitted his son, P. LITERARY AND OTHER ORGANIZATIONS.

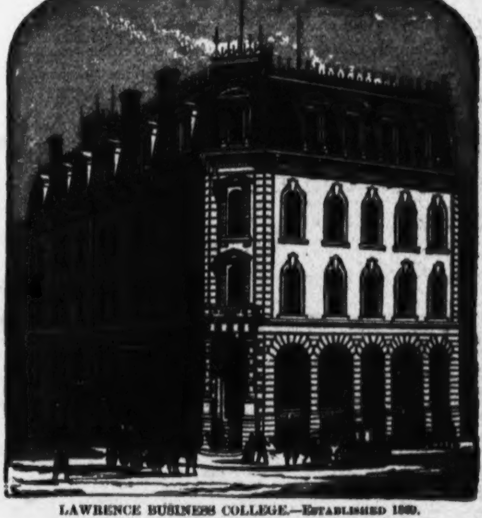
Lawrence possesses educational culture and social refinement that is unsurpassed by few Eastern cities, and is the Athens of Kansas, built up and settled as it has been by a class of people largely composed of the best educated and highest cultured classes of New England and New York, it well deserves its sobriquet, the "City of Learning." Its people, in order to pursue social and literary advantages, have, as of yore, organized societies by which more rapid progress could be made in the advancement of science, art and literature.

Lawrence Business College, an institution for the theory and practice of commercial business, was established in Lawrence by H. W. McCully, in 1869. Mr. McCully was succeeded in 1878, by Bridge & Barringer, who remained in charge until the spring of 1882, when the present proprietors, Boor & McIlravy, assumed control. Since the college was first established, it has been in successful operation, and to-day ranks among the best in the country. The student can here become familiar with all the branches pertaining to a business education. Faculty for 1882 are E. L. McIlravy, Superintendent of Actual Business Department and Professor of Penmanship; V. F. Boor, Principal of Book-keeping Department; W. H. Ames, Principal of Telegraphic Department and Professor of Commercial Law; M. A. Rankin, Principal of English Training Department; W. Hoys, Principal of Phonographic Department. Accommodations for 175 students may be found in the college. From forty-five students in 1881, its membership is constantly increasing, now numbering 125 members.



LAWRENCE BUSINESS COLLEGE.—ESTABLISHED 1869.

Old and New Club.—In 1875, a company of gentlemen met and formed what was known as the "Old and New Club." A peculiarity of the organization is that since its first meeting no officers have been elected, the club at each meeting going in a "committee of the whole." Meetings are held from October to April of each year. Average membership fourteen. Social science, in all its phases, forms the principal subject of discussion.

Friends and Council No. 2.—An organization composed of the ladies of Lawrence, was organized in 1871, by Mrs. E. P. Leonard, a member of the Quincy, Ill., Society, No. 1, as the oldest literary organization in the city; it ranks second to none from a literary point of view. The society is in possession of a fine library, which includes many of the best works on English literature.

The nucleus for a public library was formed in the summer of 1865, by J. S. Broughton, who, with sixty volumes, opened and established what was then known as the Lawrence "Circulating Library." It occupied a small back room on the second floor of the Hortman Block and was opened to the public Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. The books were loaned out at 15 cents per week, and such was the demand for them that frequently the supply was inadequate to the demand. In the fall of the same year the library was moved and occupied rooms over Leis' drug store. A free reading room supplied with the leading periodicals of the day, was established in connection, and donations made to the library, to the extent of 1,000 volumes. During the winter of 1865-66, a society composed of some of the leading citizens was formed, and called the "Lawrence Library Association," with a view of purchasing the library and fixtures, and extending its usefulness. The purchase was made in 1866.

In the fall or winter of 1871, the association transferred it to the city, in consideration of which the city agreed to liquidate a debt of $900, and keep the library in running order. In 1876, elegant and commodious rooms were obtained on the first floor of the National Bank building, corner of Massachusetts and Winthrop streets.

Additions have been made to the library from time to time until it now contains upward of 6,000 volumes, embracing many works by the most eminent authors. The reading room in connection is supplied with all the leading American magazines, and a large number of daily and weekly papers, and is largely patronized by students and others. Present Librarian, Mrs. J. C. Trask.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

In pursuance to a call made by the Mayor, the Fire Department of Lawrence was inaugurated by the organization of Republican Engine Company No. 1, February, 1859, with forty-three applicant members. First officers were A. J. Sutten, Foreman; A. Love, First Assistant; G. L. Chandler, Second Assistant; W. W. Woodruff, Third Assistant; A. J. Miller, Secretary; M. D. Baldwin, Treasurer.

Prior to the organization of the company, the city purchased in the winter of 1858 the fire engine, "Washington," and a hose cart, "the Lady of the Lake," from the city of St. Louis. The engine and apparatus not giving satisfaction, was returned.

After an existence of a few years, the "Republican" Company No. 1 was disbanded. Hook, ladder and bucket companies were organized at different times and constituted the fire department of the city until 1869, when the "Head Center Hose Company" was organized. During the year prior to 1869, the city purchased a "steamer," hose cart and other fire equipments at a cost of $6,625.

"Head Center Hose Company" was organized in March, 1869, by E. B. Chadwick, twelve members, under the following officers: E. B. Chadwick, Foreman; H. Lonara, First Assistant; G. Thomas, Second Assistant; H. D. Whitman, Secretary; R. Johnson, Treasurer. Headquarters for the department were in what was then known as the "old engine room." In June, 1869, the station was moved to its present quarters—City Hall.

The company is at present composed of sixteen members, who are under the leadership of the following chief officer, E. Manter, Foreman.

Lawrence, in proportion to its size, has had but few serious conflagrations, the principal one of which, was the destruction by fire of every building on Massachusetts street, with one exception, in August, 1863.

MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES.

Owing to the peculiar facilities for transportation, combined with its close proximity to the raw material, and its superior water-power, Lawrence is destined to become the leading manufacturing city in the Missouri Valley. The cable "system" of transfer power, is largely used, it being claimed by competent authority that the power may be transferred a distance of five miles with a loss of power not exceeding two per cent.

The total power approximates 1,500 horse-power, 350 of which being in daily use. Three flouring mills, two elevators, four wire fence factories, one shirt factory, two machine shops, one paper mill, and the chemical works, use the cable system, with the exception of one flouring mill which receives its power direct. Power is now successfully carried more than one-half mile, by means of the "cable system."

Douglas County Mills.—The only mills using the water-power direct, were erected in 1878, by a company composed of J. H. Gower, J. Gower and J. W. Houghtellin. Owing to the death of the three partners, the mill passed into the hands of J. D. Bowersock, its present proprietor, in 1880. The mill is a stone structure, 50x60 feet, four stories high, and with its eleven run of buhrs, and five sets of rolls, has a capacity of four hundred barrels of flour every twenty-four hours. In connection with the mill, a three-story warehouse, 40x50 feet, and an elevator 30x100 feet, with a capacity of 80,000 bushels of grain, have been erected, the total outlay exceeding $74,000. This mill is one of the largest in the West, and controls a large per cent of the grain shipped into the city.

Pacific Mills.—The Pacific Mills originally occupied the building now used by the Kansas Basket Manufacturing Company, but in 1879 moved their machinery into the building now occupied by them, which was originally used as a box factory. This building, a three-story stone structure, 40x40 feet, was erected in 1874 at a cost of $20,000. In September, 1880, a stock company was incorporated, five names appearing on the charter. The mill has five run of buhrs, and one set of rolls, with a capacity of one hundred barrels every twenty-four hours. Four grades of flour are manufactured, among which are several popular brands. Under its present officers, H. Tisdale, President; W. F. March, Secretary, and J. D. Bowersock, Treasurer; the mill is one of the successful business enterprises of the city.

Pierson's Roller Mills.—These mills, comparatively a new venture, were erected in 1880-1881 by S. P. Pierson, and started February, 1882, under the management of Pierson Bros. The building, a four-story stone structure, 50x60 feet, is one of the most completely equipped institutions of its kind in the State. Its machinery is of the most costly and latest design, and embraces fourteen sets of rolls, and four run of buhrs, which give the mill a capacity of two hundred and fifty barrels every twenty-four hours. Four grades of flour are manufactured, each one of which is securing an enviable reputation. In the autumn of 1882, a brick building, 34x30 feet, was erected, in which a 100 horse-power engine was placed, to be used as a "reserve" moter.

Hamilton Straw Lumber Factory.—The manufacture of lumber out of straw, was first investigated and experimented upon, by S. H. Hamilton, of Lawrence, who discovered that by a peculiar process straw lumber could be manufactured successfully. After many discouragements and difficulties, one of which was the burning of his building and new machinery, an incorporated stock company, with a capital of $150,000, was organized under New York laws, in September, 1881; one-half the stock is owned by New York and Chicago parties. The new building, which is a stone structure, 30x125 feet, was erected in 1881–82. An addition 30x80 feet made of straw lumber, is used for storage purposes. The factory at present, has a capacity of 10,000 feet of "four-ply" per day. The straw lumber is not susceptible to atmospherical influences, and can be treated the same as natural lumber. The manufacture of this lumber, yet in its infancy, is constantly on the increase, and is becoming a valued substitute for the natural woods. Present officers: S. H. Hamilton, President, and General Manager; C. W. Hillard, Secretary and Treasurer.

Lawrence Paper Mill.—An important industry to the list of the manufacturing institutions of the city, commenced operations under the management of Messrs. Edwards, Gardner and Higley, in the summer of 1882. A brick and stone structure was erected, the main building being 40x60 feet, with a wing 35x90 feet, at a cost of $5,000. In October, 1882, a stock company was incorporated with a capital stock of $30,000, with the following officers: J. D. Bowersock, President; H. K. Edwards, Vice President; L. C. Gardner, Secretary and Treasurer. Board of Directors: H. K. Edwards, W. F. March, L. C. Gardner, H. E. Benson and J. D. Bowersock. The mill has been supplied with the latest and most improved machinery, at a cost of $20,000, and has a daily capacity of four tons of wrapping paper.

Lawrence Foundry and Machine Shops, were established in the summer of 1858, by the Kimball Bros., consisting of Samuel, Frederic, Franklin and Edward Kimball. Prior to 1858, S. Kimball erected a saw mill and commenced preparations for establishing a machine shop. A planing machine, an iron lathe, and some other machinery was purchased and put in operation, but owing to the disturbances of the times the machine shops were not in full operation until 1858. In 1870–72, the present buildings were erected and new machinery purchased, causing an outlay of $30,000. The machine shops, or main building, is a two-story brick structure 40x45 feet. The foundry, which is also built of brick, has an area of 2,300 square feet. A force of from fifteen to twenty-five men is constantly employed.

Douglas County Iron Works, was established in the spring of 1882, by Messrs. Savage & Lightcap, two machinists of experience, who erected on the corner of New Hampshire and Pinckney streets, a two-story brick building, 30x84 feet, and fitted it with the latest improved machinery, at an expense of $12,000. A foundry is in process of erection. All kinds of general machine work and repairing is done and special attention paid to boiler work. Comparatively a new firm, it is rapidly building up an immense trade.

Lawrence Barb Wire Manufactory.—This establishment was the first to manufacture barb wire in the State. Commencing operations under a company representing a capital of $20,000, organized in 1878, it soon had the control of an extensive business. The company, under the management of A. Henley, manufactures the celebrated Henley four-pointed steel barb, and operates nine machines, which have a capacity of 10,000 pounds per day. With its recent additions to buildings and machinery, the institution is becoming a successful business enterprise.

Southwestern Barb Wire Manufactory.—The establishment now operated under this name was first established by Messrs. Mackey & Warren, but in a short time an incorporated company was organized with a capital stock of $10,000. The names of M. W. Warren, A. D. Mackey, J. D. Bowersock, Charles Chadwick and Mrs. C. M. Warren, appear on the charter. The institution employs on an average fifteen hands, and is licensed to manufacture three hundred tons, or 300,000 pounds of plain or galvanized wire per year. The wire manufactured by this company is widely known throughout the country and gives satisfaction.

Western Steel Fence Factory.—In November, 1881, a partnership was formed by Messrs. J. W. Harbaugh, J. N. Shimmons and D. G. Alford, for the purpose of manufacturing the Harbaugh Steel Fence. The fence material is a Bessemer steel band one-half inch in width, and contains three longitudinal ribs. The barbs are formed by cutting and bending on either edge, and are cut in pairs, one each way every two and one-half inches. The advantages of this fence are appreciated by those who have it in use.

The Frye Combination Fence Works were established in June, 1882, by G. N. Denning & Son, with a capacity of one hundred rods per day. The fence is composed of five two-strand cables of steel wire, firmly interwoven with lath, at a uniform distance of three inches apart. The laths are saturated with alkalies, making them equally durable with the wire, which is supplied with 588 barbs to the rod. This fence, since the time it was introduced, has met with remarkable success, and is rapidly growing into universal use.

Lawrence Canning Factory.—A company known as the Lawrence Canning Company was incorporated February 22, 1881, with a capital of $50,000, and purchasing the buildings owned by the Lawrence Packing Company, commenced canning all kinds of perishable fruits and vegetables. Among the principal stockholders are, S. O. Thacher, O. E. Leonard, George Noble, A. Lewis and D. H. Robinson. The officers of the company are, O. E. Leonard, President; Mr. Atkins, Vice President; A. Lewis, Secretary; J. M. Wood, Treasurer. They have every facility for doing as large a business as any factory in the United States, their machinery having all the latest improvements. In the year 1882, twenty-five thousand cases, or six hundred thousand cans of fruit and vegetables were put up.

Kansas Fruit Vinegar Factory.—A company was incorporated with a capital stock of $15,000, May 10, 1882, for the purpose of manufacturing pure cider vinegar. Its board of directors are, D. B. Hunnicutt, R. Carpenter, J. E. Studebaker, F. H. Osborn, L. B. L. Tosh. Officers, D. B. Hunnicutt, President; F. H. Osborn, Secretary; R. Carpenter, Treasurer; M. Flora, Superintendent. The company employ twenty men, and manufacture one hundred barrels of cider vinegar per day. The building in use is a three-story frame structure, 40x100 feet, and was formerly used as a soap factory. Tanks have been built with a capacity of two hundred thousand gallons. The latest improved machinery is used, with a Plummer evaporator that has a capacity of one hundred bushels every twenty-four hours.

Kansas Basket Manufacturing Works.—This immense manufacturing establishment is an outgrowth of the efforts of J. N. Roberts, who in 1879 commenced the manufacture of baskets from native cottonwood. In November, 1881, a stock company was organized with a capital of $50,000, its incorporators were C. W. Babcock, G. W. E. Griffith, J. N. Roberts, S. A. Gillette and N. E. Russell. A three-story stone building, 50x100 feet, formerly occupied by the Pacific Mills, and complete machinery was purchased at an outlay of $24,000. New machinery has been added with which three car loads of black walnut veneering is turned out each week. From a small beginning, the business has rapidly built up until now the company manufactures 50,000 dozen baskets, and 2,000,000 berry boxes each year. The mill employs fifty skilled hands, and consumes $30,000 worth of raw material every year, the greater part of which is obtained in Douglas County. With constantly increased facilities, the mill is turning out more wooden-ware each succeeding year. Its present officers are G. E. Griffith, President; C. E. Tuthill, Treasurer, and C. W. Babcock, Secretary.

Lawrence Agricultural Works—In 1863, Messrs. Wilder and Palm established what is now known as the Lawrence Agricultural Works. The motive power is a genuine Holland wind mill, erected in the same year by mechanics brought over from Sweden by Mr. Palm. This mill, which has to be seen to be appreciated, is an octagon-shaped building four stories high, with stone basement and a frame superstructure, the wind mill proper having an eighty foot sweep. At an outlay of $9,700, the mill was completed and put in operation as a grist mill, with two run of buhrs, or a capacity of twenty bushels per hour. The mill proper is still operated as a flouring mill, and does a general custom business. Additional buildings were erected for the manufacture of agricultural implements. The building in which the wood is prepared is a two-story stone, 40x60 feet; a blacksmith shop, one-story stone, 30x70 feet, and an iron room, one-story frame, 26x40 feet.

An incorporated stock company with a capital of $100,000 was formed June 11, 1880, by the following gentlemen: J. H. Wilder, A. Palm, P. J. Peterson, Mr. Reese and N. J. Sherwood. Its present officers are, A. Palm, President; J. H. Wilder, Treasurer; W. H. Kemmerer, Secretary.

The Holland wind mill, furnishing a power equal to eighty-horse-power, has proved a success in every particular. The agricultural works employ a force of twenty-five men, and turn out $50,000 worth of wagons and agricultural implements annually.

Carriage Works—The manufacture of carriages in Lawrence has been in operation since the year 1866, when O. Carlson turned his attention in that direction. In 1867, he erected a substantial two-story brick building, 45x60 feet, in which he carried on his business until 1878, when he enlarged his storage capacity by an addition, 25x50 feet. The works employ ten to fifteen skilled mechanics, and manufacture one hundred carriages of all grades annually.

Shirt Factory—The manufacturing firm of J. E. & C. E. Wilder was established in the spring of 1873, they then employing eight hands. Their present buildings were completed in 1882, at a cost of $9,000. The main building is a massive stone structure, three stories and basement, 50x80 feet, with a wing, 18x36 feet, two stories high. The machinery is run by water-power, transferred from the dam by a wire cable. During the busy season, twenty-five machines are in use, employing sixty-five hands. From a small beginning this institution has grown to be one of the most important manufacturing enterprises in the State. Their business extends all over Kansas and into Texas Colorado and New Mexico, and is rapidly increasing.

Lawrence Coal, Coke and Gas Works—The introduction of gas into the city of Lawrence, occurred in 1869–70, when on the 19th day of August, 1869, a stock company was incorporated with a paid up capital of $100,000. Weer, at Fort Scott, to Gen. Lyon, at Springfield, Mo. He returned to Kansas, and soon afterward received the appointment of First Lieutenant under Col. Root, who was authorized to raise a regiment of cavalry. At the organization of Col. Davis' regiment in November, 1861, as the Ninth Regiment of Kansas Cavalry, he was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel. On the consolidation with the Second Regiment he still retained this command. He participated in all the engagements of the regiment, commanding in most of the important engagements. At Prairie de Anne, he commanded a Cavalry Brigade covering the retreat of the Seventh Army Corps to Camden. During the winter of 1863-64, he commanded a brigade at Waldron, Ark., and in Gen. Steel's Camden expedition he commanded a cavalry brigade, and from May, 1865, until January, 1866, he was Chief of Staff for the frontier division at Fort Smith, Ark. At the close of the war, he returned to Lawrence and engaged in the business of prosecuting claims against the Government. PAUL R. BROOKS, County Treasurer of Douglas County, was born in York, Me., July 22, 1834. His grandfather was Solomon Brooks, and his grandmother Lois Brooks, and he is one of the sixth generation on both sides; from Thomas Brooks, of Concord, Mass. Thus: Thomas, of Concord,-father, Noah, Ebenezer, Peter, Solomon, mother, Daniel, Job, John, Lois, Jeremiah, Paul R. His father's name is Jeremiah Brooks, and his mother's was Eveline Parsons. They are both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are still living (1883) at York, Me. Paul R. received a good common school education, qualifying him for the ordinary avocations of life, which has been vastly increased by a judicious and extensive course of reading. He has stored his mind with valuable information on all the subjects that have agitated the public mind since he became an actor on the stage of life. After leaving school, he spent about two years in a country store, followed by three months in a Boston printing office. The printing business was not suited to his tastes, and he returned to merchandising, and spent two years in a dry goods store in Boston. During these years of business activity, he has not been an idle spectator of the political agitations that distracted the country, and his mind was directed to the great struggle in Kansas, sympathizing with the Free-State men, as well as desiring to improve his own fortunes. He started for Kansas, arriving in Lawrence in September, 1854. He soon after embarked in mercantile pursuits, and purchased of the lamented Caleb S. Pratt, who fell at Wilson's Creek, a small stock of goods which had just been opened, and really started the first store in Lawrence. His store-house was a small, unchinked log cabin, which for a long time stood at the north end of Massachusetts street. The house was without a floor, about 12x16 feet in size, and was the first house of any description erected in Lawrence. He chinked and daubed the house, and occupied it for the first winter, bringing his goods by team from Kansas City. In what was known as the Wakarusa war of 1855, he was an active Free-State participant. Like all other Free-State men, he aroused and encountered the hostility of the Pro-slavery party, and in the early part of 1856, his goods were captured by the enemy, leaving him utterly bankrupt. His pluck and credit, both of which were good, enabled him to revive his business in a short time, and up to 1862, he was among the most reputable of the Boston merchants. He was a member of the City Council of Lawrence, celebrated in the history of that place as the city organization against which Gov. Robert J. Walker marched 500 United States troops with the threat of annihilating it. The troops were encamped on the west side of town for several weeks, and the Council held its regular meetings, with no serious results, the latter expressing utter contempt for the military, in which he fully concurred. In 1859, he was elected a member of the Territorial Legislature, in which he became a useful, working member. In 1863, he was elected County Clerk of Douglas County, being then, as now, the second in importance and population in the State. He conducted the business of the office with such efficiency and satisfaction as to secure his re-election for five more terms; sometimes without opposition. He became a Mason, and has taken the degrees up to Royal Arch. He subscribes to the general principles of the Republican party, and has never changed his politics since he attained his majority. He was married October 3, 1858, to Miss Mary A. Boughton, whose parents reside in Cayuga County, N. Y. Her father, Rev. Alanson Boughton, is a Baptist minister, eminent in his profession. His religious views are what would be called very liberal, and he is in no sense a sectarian. Mr. Brooks is a man of fine personal address, good social qualities, positive in his convictions, without being dogmatic, a useful citizen in all his relations in life, with an extensive acquaintance in business and politics throughout the State. Removing to Lawrence while in his minority, he has been so completely identified with every movement for the advancement of his town as to have made him prominent among the useful, enterprising business and public men of the city and State. His name has become well-known throughout the State as the synonym of integrity and efficiency in a public officer, while his character as a citizen is above reproach. Mr. Brooks, after serving as Deputy County Treasurer, was elected in 1881 to the office of County Treasurer, which he now holds.

DAVID CHASE BUFFAM (deceased), son of Edward Buffam of Salem, Mass., was born November 11, 1822. He was among the early settlers of Kansas, coming to Lawrence with the second party of emigrants. While guarding a fort in the night he was accidentally shot in the fleshy part of the thigh, which crippled him for life. In this maimed condition he was overtaken between Lawrence and Lecompton, September 17, 1856, by a large party of border ruffians who were returning from one of their expeditions into Kansas; they shot Mr. Buffam, inflicting a mortal wound, stole his horses, and left him to die. He sent to his father, as his last words, "I am willing to die for Kansas and liberty." His younger brother, George Buffam, who was a deaf mute, but an excellent carpenter, was living in Kansas, and doing a good business. His brother's terrible death made him hopelessly insane, and he was taken back to his father's home in Salem.

JAMES H. CANFIELD, A. M., Professor of History and Political Science, Kansas State University, was born in Delaware, Ohio, March 18, 1847. The subject of this sketch graduated in the Brooklyn Collegiate and Polytechnic Institute in 1864, the same year entered Williams College, where he took the full classical course, and graduated in 1868, with the degree A. B. In 1876, he had the degree of A. M. conferred by his Alma Mater. From 1868 to 1871, he was engaged in the construction of railroads in Iowa and Minnesota, at the same time being engaged in reading law. Was admitted to the bar in Michigan, in 1872. Immediately afterward, opened an office in St. Joseph. He engaged here in general practice, until 1877, when he moved to Lawrence, to take the chair of English Language and Literature and History in the State University. The chair was divided in 1881, Prof. Spring taking English Language and Literature. Prof. Canfield taking his present chair. During his residence in St. Joseph, Mich., Prof. Canfield was requested to take the superintendency of the city schools, they being at that time in a disorganized state. He held the office long enough to thoroughly systemize the schools, and then resigned. Prof. Canfield was married in Clear Lake, Iowa, June 24, 1873, to Miss Flavia A. Camp. They have two children—James and Dorothea. The Professor is a member of the Episcopal Church; of the Douglas County Bar Association and several literary societies.

ROBERT CARPENTER, Treasurer of the Kansas Fruit Vinegar Company, was born at Portage, Wyoming County, N. Y., October 29, 1828. In 1831, his parents moved to Farmersville, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., where he received his education, and afterward engaged in teaching school. In 1854 he went to Sparta, Monroe County, Wis. There his business became varied. First as contractor and builder, next as superintendent of a saw mill and its accompaniments, looking after the logging parties engaged in cutting logs for said mill, as well as the sales of the lumber after it was sawed. His health failing, he next engaged in the teaming business, hauling goods for the merchants from the nearest shipping point, a distance of twenty-eight miles. This business he followed during the summer months, teaching school during the winter months; after this, he went to farming, and followed this for two years. Then, he, in company with two other men, erected a tannery, having a large harness shop attached to it. This business he followed up to, about October 20, 1861. When the war breaking out, or rather it becoming certain that we were to have a prolonged war, he enlisted as a soldier, and assisted to raise a company in his town and its surroundings. He was elected First Lieutenant of the company. He cleared out his stock in his tannery, in contract with the Government for saddles and cavalry equipments. His company was one known as Company A, Third Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry. In 1862, he was promoted to the Captaincy of same company, which he commanded until January, 1865, when his term of service having expired, he requested the Governor of Wisconsin to have himself and those of his men whose terms of service had expired mustered out of the service. The Governor complied, and notified the Captain of said compliance, but when it became known to the commander of the military district in which his command had been doing duty, while he let the men go, he would not consent that the Captain should leave, contending that the service could not afford to spare the Captain, that his services were of vital importance to the Government. Hence, his retention. The Captain was offered commissions of Major or of Lieutenant Colonel of his old regiment, many of its members having re-enlisted as veterans, and had been re-organized as a veteran regiment, but he would not accept of promotion, when the war was to all intents and purposes at a close, so the Governor of Wisconsin sent him another commission of Captain, and in this capacity he served the balance of his time in the service. He really acted as Captain scarcely any of the last two years of his service, having never less than two and, a greater part of the time, five companies, under his immediate command, doing the duties of Major and Lieutenant Colonel more than of Captain. In 1864 he was detailed to collect the Osage Indians together, or so many of them as were friendly, and settle a difficulty with them that threatened to cause them to desert our cause and go over to the enemy, and it was advised that a large sum of money should be paid them to settle the matter. Capt. Carpenter called the chiefs together and the matter was discussed, and the Captain succeeded in making it apparent to the Indians that the blame in the matter all rested with them, and not with the Government. That instead of their receiving restitution as they demanded and fully expected, they might consider themselves well off to be allowed to go quietly to their camps, and hereafter to be allowed to do the duties of soldiers for the Government. This put a stop to further troubles from this source. Prior to this, the Indians had habitually gained their demands upon almost any pretext, whether fancied or real, that they saw fit to set up. In 1864, the war was fast drawing to a close, and the entire country in the West having been so entirely under military rule for three successive years—and especially in the State of Missouri had this been the case—that there were no civil courts or officers to enforce civil law in some of the counties. The Captain having command of territory comprising nearly all of Bates and Vernon Counties, in Missouri, re-organized the courts in Vernon County, Mo. He advised with the Governor of the State, and solicited and obtained the appointment of all the officers requisite to re-establish civil law, and its enforcements in said county. In 1865, he was appointed by the Military Commander of the District of Kansas, Superintendent of the collection of Government Trains for the Plains, and furnishing them escorts to Fort Kearney, Nebraska. This was done to protect said trains from the predatory attacks of the wild Indians. His headquarters were established at Marysville, Marshall County, Kan.; he continued in this line of service up to August 15, 1865, when he came to Lawrence, Douglas Co., Kan., and up to 1870, was engaged in the cattle and grain trade. In 1870, he established the wool, hide and fur business, which business he has followed up to the present time. In 1875, he added to his business the wholesale trade of leather, saddlery, hardware and shoe findings. He was elected Treasurer of the Kansas Fruit Vinegar Company (a joint stock company) at its organization in June, 1882. Mr. Carpenter was married in Vernon County, Mo., in 1868, to Miss Mary E., granddaughter of the Rev. Mr. Dodge, a minister of the Presbyterian Church, and a missionary to the Osage Indians, at an early day. They have two children—James and Walter S. He then returned home, and engaged in house painting in Roxbury, Mass. In 1854, he again started for California overland, landing at Lawrence, Kan., in September. The high-handed proceedings of the border ruffians aroused his indignation, and he determined to remain and assist the Free-state people. He organized a company of men; this company was afterward known as the "Stubbs," and he continued the command of this company until he was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel of the First Kansas Regiment under Gen. James Lane, and continued with the regiment until the troubles ended, when the Free-state army disbanded, the members returning to their homes. The following is a true copy of the reply of the company to his letter of resignation:

"STUBBS ARMORY, August 11, 1859.

LIEUT. COL. JOSEPH CRACKLIN, Post Captain of the Stubbs:

Dear Sir—In accepting your letter of resignation, we tender you our sincere thanks for the manner in which you have discharged your duties as commanding officer of our company for so long a time; and while we regret that your duties should compel you to retire from an office which you have filled with honor to yourself and credit to the company, we are happy to know that your name is still attached to the roll of your company among the names of those who battled so manfully for the right in 1856. It is pleasing to us to refer to the part you took in those engagements with our company. Your conduct at Franklin, in August, and at Lawrence, when Reed besieged our town with 2,800 hirelings, and at all other places where the company was engaged while you were in command, elicits our warmest applause. We are grateful for the advice conveyed to this company in your letter, feeling that your experience in military affairs may be of great advantage to us, and believe that by following it with our efficient present officers (Capt. F. B. Swift and First Lieut. N. W. Spicer), we may be able to hold the position we have heretofore occupied among the military companies of Kansas. Be assured, however, that the Stubbs will always be steadfast supporters of the right and defenders of the oppressed. And it is our desire that the law-makers of our country may be composed of such men that when called upon, we can, with a right good will, sustain their enactments. In placing you upon the retired roll, we would request that you be present occasionally at our meetings, and by your advice and counsel aid us in arriving at a greater degree of military perfection. With assurances of the highest esteem, we remain,

Yours respectfully,

A. I. BLANCHARD,
A. CUTLER,
I. G. CROCKER,

He went East in 1860 on a visit to his native town, and was induced to take charge of the Southampton Academy. He held the position of Principal here until 1862, when he enlisted in the Thirty-seventh Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and was commissioned First Lieutenant of Company D; was subsequently commissioned Captain, and retired at the close of the war as Major of his regiment, having served in all the campaigns of the Sixth Corps, participating in the battles of Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Mine Run, Winchester, Petersburg and others, including Sailors Creek, the final battle of the war. He employs in the season about 300 men, and will cut in the aggregate from 35,000 to 40,000 tons of ice. Mr. Eidemiller was born in Frederick City, Md., August 22, 1833. His parents moved to Troy, Ohio, about 1837, where he received his schooling. At the age of twelve years he commenced clerking in grocery stores. When about nineteen he went into business on his own account, and continued in the mercantile business until he moved to Kansas in 1867. During 1870 to 1872, he transferred his ice business to Kansas City, Mo., returning to Lawrence in the latter year. Mr. Eidemiller was married in Troy, Ohio, in September, 1854, to Miss May J. Simmons, of Troy. They have four children living—Mary A., Helen E., Maggie R. and George K.

JOHN ELDRIDGE, livery. Established the livery business in North Lawrence in 1875, since which time he has continued to keep some fine turnouts. Mr. Eldredge seldom makes a mistake, being one of the best guessers in the State, and his keen eye will detect a fraud at first sight. Mr. Eldredge was born in Pennsylvania, August 22, 1840. He came to this State in 1853, and settled in Prairie City, where he lived up to the time of coming to Lawrence in 1860. In 1861, he responded to the first call of his country, and enlisted in Company G, Seventh Regiment Kansas Volunteers, and served until the close of the war. He was in several engagements, but came out without a scratch or a wound. He was married, in 1875, to Miss Frank Hawkins, of Lawrence; has three children—Lelia B., Harry and Stella May.

THOMAS B. ELDRIDGE, one of the tried and most faithful friends of Kansas in the territorial struggle, died in Lawrence Sunday, December 3, 1882. His funeral occurred on the Tuesday following, and was largely attended by old settlers, who, with him, had together borne the burdens of the day, and by whom he was held in universal respect and esteem. The following sketch appeared in a Lawrence paper at the time of his death: "The hearts of many old settlers of Kansas will be saddened to learn that the gentleman whose name heads this article died in Lawrence, last Sunday morning, the 3d inst. On the previous Thursday he experienced a slight attack of rheumatism, from which, however, he had sufficiently rallied, last Sunday morning, to enable him to sit at the table and partake of a hearty breakfast. Subsequently he laid down on a sofa, and in a few moments thereafter he was discovered in the embrace of death. He died of rheumatism of the heart. His funeral will be held to-day at Lawrence. Mr. Eldridge was one of the early pioneers of Kansas, and was a prominent actor in the struggles incident to our pioneer history. He was one of the lessees of the Free-State Hotel at Lawrence, at the time of its destruction by the border ruffians in May, 1856. In September, of that year, he was the agent at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, of the National Kansas Committee, and his business was to purchase transportation and supplies for emigrants to Kansas. He was clothed with full authority to use what money his judgment deemed was necessary for the successful prosecution of his business. Mount Pleasant was, at that time, the terminal point of the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad, the westernmost railroad point in Iowa. It was the rallying point for overland Free-State emigrants to Kansas, the Missouri River having been blockaded against them by border ruffians. As an inducement for Free-State men to go to Kansas, during that troublous period, the National Kansas Committee offered them arms, transportation and subsistence. Mr. Eldridge purchased horses, wagons, arms, subsistence and camp and garrison equipage, involving an expense of about $40,000, and so faithfully did he discharge his duty, in his purchases and disbursements, that, upon the conclusion of his labors, he was presented by the Committee with a fine horse and corresponding equipments, and also a brace of revolvers. Under his outfitting at Mount Pleasant, several hundred Free-State men came to Kansas in 1856, much to the relief and encouragement of those who were already here, struggling valiantly and manfully against numerically superior forces. Upon the return of Mr. Eldridge to Kansas, he became a member of the Kansas Stage Company, composed of the Eldridge Brothers, and he was also associated with many of the companies that were locating towns all over the Territory in 1857. The Broadway Hotel (now the Coates House), in Kansas City, was erected by Mr. Eldridge, and was for some time operated by him. A short time during the war, he did staff duty in some of the western armies, with the rank of Major. For several years, he was engaged in the banking business at Coffeyville, and while living there he represented one of the districts in Montgomery County in the Legislature in 1873. He was last employed on the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas Railroad, in the capacity of stock agent."

He then returned home and was connected, until he moved West, with the engineering department of coal mines in Northumberland County, Penn. In 1866, he moved to Kansas and settled in Wyandotte County, where he became connected with the engineering department of the Eastern Division of the Union Pacific Railroad. In 1868, he moved to Lawrence, still connected with the engineer's office, having charge of supplies in that department. The office was moved, about 1876, and Mr. Fincher then turned his attention to mercantile pursuits. Mr. Fincher was married, in Lawrence, Kan., March 22, 1872, to Miss Lena, daughter of William Melvin, Esq. Mr. Fincher was appointed Postmaster by President Garfield's administration in May, 1881. He then settled in Lawrence and engaged in clerking in the mercantile establishments in the city until about 1870. He then moved to Humboldt, Allen County, where he opened the Landreth House which he operated about one year and then returned to Lawrence, and shortly afterward engaged in his present business. HON. GEORGE FORD (deceased), was born December 18, 1811, in Westerlo, Albany County, N. Y. His grandfather, Jacob Ford, was a soldier in the war of the Revolution. His father, Sylvester Ford, was an extensive farmer, and for some time held the position of County Judge in New York. He served his country in the war of 1812, becoming an Adjutant during the war. George Ford's boyhood was spent on his father's farm, but at the age of fourteen he entered his brother's store at Oneonta, N. Y., as clerk. Here, however, he remained but a short time, after which he went to New York City, where he worked as clerk until he reached his eighteenth year. He then returned to the farm, where he remained until he attained his majority. At that age, he removed to Akron, Ohio, where he lived about a year. His next move was to Berkshire County, Mass. Here he was married to Miss Rachel Hall Wightman, March 22, 1835. Soon after this event he returned to New York and engaged in farming in Delaware County. In 1847, he left his farm and changed his residence to Jersey City, N. J., where for ten years he managed a general mercantile business. In 1857, he moved to Kansas and located in Lawrence. In the same year he became a member of the City Council, a body which Gov. Walker pronounced revolutionary, and which he suppressed with a battalion of United States soldiers. He was elected a County Commissioner, in 1858, and made Chairman of the Board. He was, in 1862, elected a member of the Kansas House of Representatives, where he made an active, useful and efficient legislator, reflecting honor upon his constituents, whose partiality had chosen him. As a business man Mr. Ford stood in the foremost rank in Lawrence. He began the business of general merchandising. He was thus engaged for several years, gradually changing his business to an exclusive dry goods establishment; but in January, 1867, he changed his plans and began dealing in groceries exclusively, in which he continued until his death. I

1860, he was placed in charge of the distribution of aid goods from the Emigrant Aid Union. He was a member of the Baptist Church from his youth, and held the office of Deacon for many years. He was also prominently engaged in the Sabbath school work, being a pioneer of that cause in Kansas. When the first slaves fled from Missouri to Kansas, he was one of a few Christians who defied public opinion, opened a school, and taught both children and adults the rudiments of an education. He was a liberal contributor, not only to his own church, but to all religious institutions. Mr. Ford departed this life November 12, 1880, universally lamented. He was one of those strongly marked characters so difficult of delineation in pen portraiture. His countenance betokened firm and unyielding convictions. In his friendship and in his thinking he was remarkable for his constancy. He laid hold of all subjects that concerned him with an undying tenacity. His nature was granitic. All the laws of his being were as the statutes of the Medes and Persians. His will power and energy were marvelous. No reverses of fortune, no obstacles disheartened him. Full of vigor and hope through all mishaps and difficulties, his course was onward, right on. The life of business, the soul of social life, the factotum of the church. His was a felt presence everywhere. Nor shall we soon forget his droll humor. He was not without his scruples about it, but his utmost sobriety of purpose could not check the bubbling fountain of fun in his nature. It sallied forth at everybody in prose and rhyme, and quick retort. But most marked of all his traits was the kindness of his heart. It transfigured his face like an Aurora. To look upon him was to read his benevolence. In unmistakable lines it went out from him as a benediction upon the poor and needy. None of this description sought him in vain. There were lamentations among that class when he died. A colored man exclaimed, "Our Moses is dead!" We need workers like him to-day. The memory of him chides us all. He proved that men can be successful in their business whilst positive and uncompromising in their principles. He hated the whisky business with a perfect hatred; despised its threatenings; gave it no quarter, and instead of suffering in trade compelled even the rum traffic to yield to him a reluctant patronage, constrained by the manliness and genial good will of the man. He illustrated what could be accomplished by fixedness of purpose, steadiness of application, and by the magnetic thrill of a kind heart. He pushed and shinned his way through all opposition. His was an example of man's fidelity; whether it was in business or the church, or temperance or election day, he gave himself to it with enthusiastic constancy. He fought every issue straight through to the end. Death found him at a post of duty where he loved to be—in the house of God. Although full of years, it seemed as though his departure was premature. But if the memory of him shall cause the mantle of his good qualities to descend upon others, it will be well for temperance, well for the State, well for the church and well for humanity.

Gleason, senior member of the firm, was born in Cheshire County, N. H., April 20, 1824. He was educated in his native county, and after leaving school was engaged in clerking until 1844, when he moved to Baltimore, Md., where he established himself in the manufacture of soda water, etc. About 1846, he moved to Pittsburgh, Penn., where he continued the same business. Two years later he sold out and returned to New Hampshire. In 1850, he located in Rochester, N. Y., where he resumed his manufacturing business, and continued until he moved to Kansas. He landed in Lawrence May 7, 1857, and immediately took a claim in the southwestern part of Douglas County, which he afterward pre-empted, and continued to reside on his farm until 1863. In that year he moved to Lawrence, having been appointed United States Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue, an office he retained until about 1869 or 1870. Shortly afterward, he associated himself in partnership with J. N. Roberts in the manufacture of woodenware. His next active business in the city was the organization of the firm of Noyes & Gleason, in the interim being interested in Colorado mines, spending several summers in that region. At the time of the Quantrell raid he was living opposite Gen. Lane's residence, and was awakened by the firing. His wife, eldest daughter and son were in the country at the time, his two youngest daughters being with him. These he dressed and sent to Mrs. Hoyt's, a neighbor, for safe keeping. He then buckled on his revolver and sallied out into the street. At the distance of two blocks he could see the enemy riding through the streets and looking up to the site of the windmill saw a man shot and fall into the cellar of the mill. He then made a flank movement to the residence of J. S. Brown, where he found some twenty-five or more fugitives. After remaining there an hour or two he returned to a cornfield for concealment and shortly afterward went down town in time to see the rear guard of the retreating enemy going out of town. He then moved to Lawrence, where he secured a position in a brick yard at $50 per month. In this latter business he did not long continue, exchanging his claim for a grocery and bakery, which he conducted about eighteen months. During this time he also did business as an auctioneer, which has been his general occupation, and in which he has been very successful, being one of the most humorous and efficient auctioneers in Kansas. In 1860, he went to the Rocky Mountains, where he spent three years in trading, etc. In 1870, he entered into partnership with R. W. Sparr, and purchased 220 head of Texas cattle. This proved an unfortunate venture. Large numbers of them perished in the severity of the winters. Not dismayed by his failure, he went to Texas and bought a large drove of cattle which he drove to Kansas, in the latter venture making a success. Shortly after this he was employed by the Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad to direct the carrying trade in Texas cattle from the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad to the Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad. In this work he was very successful, turning every drove from Pierce City, then the terminus of the Atlantic & Pacific to Baxter Springs, on the Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad. He also dealt extensively in stock on his own account, and has dealt largely in real estate in addition to his regular business. HON. DUDLEY C. HASKELL. So far as is now ascertainable, this family had its origin in the province of Anglise, in ancient Saxony. The name of the family at this early day was spelled "Hieskel." From Saxony, the family migrated to Scotland, where numbers of them still reside, spelling the name as do those now living in America. The first settlement by any of the Haskell family was made in Massachusetts, in 1635, at Gloucester or Beverly. In 1706, Roger Haskell left Beverly and purchased an extensive tract of land near Norwich, Conn., where many of his descendants still reside. His son Elijah subsequently removed to Tolland, Conn. He served in the Revolutionary war, as did also his son Elijah—the latter of whom was killed at the battle of Trenton, and the former of whom died soon after leaving the army, of hardships and exposures which had compelled his retirement therefrom. Upon his widow, whose maiden name was Sarah Read, devolved the responsibility of rearing and educating her family of seven children—five boys and two girls. She kept the elder ones upon the farm, and apprenticed the younger ones to trades. Soon all were able to care for themselves, and when the proper time came, Mrs. Haskell, in 1789, rode up the Connecticut River on horseback, and purchased a farm near Weathersfield, Vt., and returned for her five sons, who all bought farms in the same vicinity. The five boys and one of the girls settled in the same school district, and subsequently, in a school of about ninety pupils, thirty-two of the pupils were children of these six. One of these thirty-two was Franklin Haskell, the father of Dudley C. Soon after the birth of Dudley, Franklin Haskell left Vermont, and settled in Massachusetts, whence, in 1854, soon after the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, he removed to Kansas, and settled near Lawrence, upon the land still owned by the family. Mrs. Haskell, the mother of Dudley, previous to her marriage with Franklin Haskell, was Miss Almira Chase, a member of the well-known New England family of that name. Mrs. Haskell moved to Kansas in 1855, bringing with her Dudley C., then thirteen years of age. He was born in Springfield, Vt., March 23, 1842. Witnessing the early struggles between slavery and liberty in Kansas, the spirit of the man that was in him soon began to manifest itself. As an incident of his youthful courage, the following is related: An armed Pro-slavery man approached his father and attempted to compel compliance with certain demands, by means of a cocked revolver. Young Dudley quickly brought out of the house the old musket already loaded, and leveling it at the head of his father's assailant, promptly brought about a cessation of hostilities. When not engaged in the more important work of aiding to defend his father's or some neighbor's home, he attended school a portion of the time in a building standing on the present site of Miller's Hall, and a portion of the time in the basement of the Unitarian Church. In January, 1857, his father died, and upon the arrival from the East of his elder brothers, to care for their mother and the family affairs, he went to Springfield, Vt., to attend school, remaining there until 1858, when he returned to Lawrence. In the spring of 1859, he went to Colorado, where he prospected for more than two years, gaining considerable valuable experience, but very little gold. In 1861, he returned to Kansas, and entered the army of the Union, as "Master of Transportation" in the Quartermaster's department. As master of transportation, he became chief of foraging parties. In charge of ambulance and ammunition trains, he was present at the battles of Newtonia, Cane Hill and Prairie Grove. In every position in which he was placed, his conduct was that of a cool, intrepid and courageous man. At the termination of a long campaign in Arkansas, in January, 1863, Mr. Haskell retired from the army, and entered Williston Seminary, in East Hampton, Mass. After successfully completing a preparatory course in the seminary, he entered Yale College, and completed a scientific course there in November, 1865. He now returned once more to Lawrence, Kan., and engaged in merchandising. While so engaged, he devoted his leisure hours to the study of political economy, and to those social problems which underlie our national polity, and soon found himself locally in the front rank of political opponents. In 1872, he was elected to the Kansas House of Representatives, and was re-elected in 1875, and in 1876. During this year, he was elected Speaker of the House. In the fall of 1876, he was elected to the Forty-fifth Congress, from the Second Congressional District of Kansas, by a majority of 4,680. In 1878, he was re-elected to Congress, as also in 1880 and 1882. As a public man, he is very popular, and as a public speaker, strong, logical and convincing. Mr. Haskell's physical constitution is exceptionally fine and strong. He is six feet three inches high, and weighs, when in full health, 210 pounds. His distinguished exterior lends to his oratorical efforts an effectiveness rarely excelled. Mr. Haskell was married, at Stockbridge, Mass., in December, 1865, to Miss Hattie M. Kelsey, a descendant of that distinguished New England divine, Cotton Mather. Mrs. Haskell is a lady of exceptional culture and accomplishments. They have had three children, two daughters and one son. The son died in infancy. JOHN SPEER, was born in Kittanning, Armstrong Co., Penn., December 27, 1817. He was the oldest son of Capt. Robert and Barbary (Lowrey) Speer. His father was a farmer in moderate circumstances when rich men were few, and industry, abstemiousness and frugality were numbered among the virtues, and honest poverty was no disgrace. John was bred a farmer, and received only the early educational advantages which the district schools of the vicinity afforded. His father while he was a small lad bought a farm near Kittanning, and to insure the payment for it took a contract for carrying the United States mail between Kittanning and Curwensville. The distance was seventy miles, and the entire route was sparsely settled with long reaches of unsettled wilderness. Over this lonesome route John was put to carrying the mail, on horseback, at the early age of twelve years. For several years, he continued faithfully to perform the weary work. His mother died while he was yet a lad. At the age of eighteen years, he was indentured to the printing trade, with William Morehead, of the Indiana Register, Indiana, Penn. Having served his time, he returned home, and after six months' work as a journeyman on the Kittanning Gazette, in 1839, made his first journalistic venture, publishing for six months the Mercer and Beaver Democrat, at New Castle, Penn., and vigorously supporting Harrison for the Presidency. He was identified with journalism in the States of Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio for fifteen years thereafter, during which time he was connected with the Portsmouth, Ind., Tribune, the Harrison Gazette (which he established at Corydon, Ind.), the Mount Vernon, Ohio Times, and the Democratic Whig, which he established September 12, 1843, and which he edited and successfully published for nearly twelve years thereafter. On the passage of the Nebraska bill, he sold out his paper and other effects, and, with his brother, Joseph L., came to Kansas. He arrived September 27, 1854. Here he established the first Free-State newspaper published in the Territory—the Kansas Pioneer, afterward the Kansas Tribune. Tracing the history of Kansas journalism through the pages of this work, it appears that he has been constantly identified with it up to the present time (1882). He was one of the most fearless and able champions of the Free-State cause in the early days, and has held consistently and faithfully through a long political career to his early affiliation with the Republican party. He has been deservedly honored with many positions of honor and trust by the community in which he has lived, and by the State he did so much to bring into life. He was a member of the first Free-State Territorial Legislature in 1857. In 1864, he was a member of the national convention which nominated Lincoln and Johnson, and the same year was a member of the Kansas State Senate. He was also elected State Printer under the Topeka Government. He held the office of United States Revenue Collector from 1862 to 1866. The general statutes of 1868 were printed by him. He was elected State Representative from the Lawrence district in the fall of 1882. Few men have labored harder or suffered more than the subject of this sketch for the good of the commonwealth. In addition to the ordinary sacrifices and hardships which fell in common upon all the outspoken Free-State men during the early struggles, the last vengeful stroke of the slave power in Kansas fell with cruel force upon him. In Quantrell's raid on Lawrence August 21, 1863, he lost two promising sons, one cruelly shot and his body recovered; the other never found, and supposed to have been burned in the conflagration. Further, the Government vouchers of the office he then held were destroyed, adding the burden of anxiety and business troubles to his already overburdened soul. He married Miss Elizabeth Duplisses McMahon, daughter of John and Martha (Withers) McMahon, at Corydon, Harrison Co., Ind., July 14, 1842. She died at Lawrence, Kan., April 9, 1876. Their children were John, murdered by Quantrill's men August 21, 1863; Robert, missing at the same time, supposed to have been burned; Joe, accidentally shot by a playmate when seven years of age; living—William, Mary (Mrs. Woodneff), Eva, Rosa and Hardin. The life of John Speer is interwoven with that of his State. He still carries sturdily the weight of labors and troubles calculated to crush men of less stern mold, and deserves the best of the State to which he has given his best.

In 1862, was Judge of the Washington Gulch Judicial District, and on the organization of the Territory of Colorado was appointed Justice of the Peace of Washington County, which position he declined on account of his enlistment in Company C, Third Colorado Infantry, October 5, 1862. The regiment marched on foot, in March, 1863, from Denver to Fort Leavenworth, and by boat to Pilot Knob, Mo., where they remained till winter, when they were consolidated with Second Colorado Infantry into Second Colorado Cavalry. He served as Clerk at headquarters, Fourth Subdistrict of Missouri, at Kansas City, Mo., until the Price raid, in which the regiment took an active part, meeting Price at Lexington and following him to the Arkansas river; had several engagements with him. After the raid, he was detailed as Field Adjutant to Brig. Gen. J. H. Ford, commanding District of Upper Arkansas, with headquarters at Fort Riley, in his Indian campaign of 1865. In September of that year, he was mustered out with his regiment at Fort Leavenworth, and locating at Clinton, in Douglas County, bought a grist and saw mill, which he operated until 1870. He then removed to Lawrence, where he engaged in the practice of law. Was appointed Police Judge and Justice of the Peace in 1878, to fill vacancy, and was elected in 1879 for two years. He was married, in 1857, to Miss Harriet Stathem, of Des Moines County, Iowa, who died in 1859, leaving one daughter, now married to a physician and living in Iowa. His second wife was Mrs. L. A. B. Steele, authoress of "Rev. Adonijah" and other works of same character, besides a large amount of contributions to religious and other periodicals. Her father was Rev. A. Blakely, who came to Kansas from New York to help uphold the standard of liberty, and died in 1864. Their children are Charles A., John M., James L. and Horace E. The two oldest are attending the Kansas State University. Mr. Steele has been from his early youth a member of the Presbyterian Church. He has long been an active temperance worker and connected with the Good Templars and Ancient Templars, and a strong advocate of Prohibition.

When on his way back to Philadelphia, he met in Cincinnati a Mr. Sawyer, of the firm of McIlvane & Sawyer, Government Architects and Superintendents. In this year Mr. Sterling joined his family and put up a large house, etc., on his place and kept horses for the Kansas Stage Company. He served until the close of the war, a large part of his service being on staff duty with Gens. Morris Carr, Grover and Ricketts. Was attached to the Army of the Potomac, and participated in all the principal battles with that army, and with Gen. Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley campaign. On the close of the war, he returned home. In 1866, he moved to St. Louis, where he engaged in mercantile business. In 1869, he settled in Topeka, Kan., where he was connected with the land department of the A., T. & S. F. R. R. While in this position he located and appraised all the railroad lands between Topeka and Emporia. In 1871, he took charge of the land department, at Peabody, Kan., laying out and starting that town. Mr. Tabor was married in Lawrence, June 15, 1871, to Miss Lou E. Gleason, of Lawrence. They have one child, Roy B. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., of Peabody, and the A. O. U. W. of Lawrence, Kan.

ROBERT L. TAYLOR, A. B., Instructor in Elocution and English Literature, Kansas State University, elected and took charge of present department in September, 1882. He was born in New Rochelle, N. Y., November 21, 1861. His father, Rev. J. H. Taylor, D. D., had charge of the Presbyterian Church in that town. In 1869, he moved to Chicago to accept a call, remaining in that field until 1876, when he accepted a call from Rome, N. Y., where he still resides. The subject of this sketch pursued his preparatory studies at Lake Forest Academy, Chicago, Ill., and in the high school, at Rome, N. Y. He entered Hamilton College in the fall of 1878, graduating in the class of 1882. He made a special study of English literature, and was a successful competitor for the Pruyher medal, offered as a prize on that subject.

J. M. & LUCY TAYLOR, dentists. Mrs. Taylor, née Miss L. B. Hobbs, was born in Franklin County, N. Y. She received her schooling in Clinton County, where her father moved when she was a child. She began her professional studies in 1857, at Cincinnati, Ohio, when she entered the office of Dr. Wardell. In the spring of 1861, she commenced practice in Cincinnati; shortly afterward she moved to Clayton County, Iowa, where she engaged in successful practice about four years. During her residence here she was invited to join the State Dental Society, though that membership necessitated her being a graduate. At a meeting of the State Society, held in 1865, they informed Prof. Taft, the Dean of the Faculty at Cincinnati Dental College, and who was in attendance at the society meetings, that he must permit Miss Hobbs to take a course of study at the college. This had previously been refused on account of her sex. Prof. Taft finally decided to do justice in the matter, and Miss Hobbs was admitted to the college, where she took a full course, and graduated in March, 1866. Shortly after, Miss Hobbs settled in Chicago, where she engaged in practice, and where she married Mr. J. M. Taylor in 1868. In the same year, they moved to Kansas, and settled in Lawrence November 26, where they have since engaged in practice with the exception of about nine months, which were spent (on account of Mr. Taylor's health) in a pleasure trip to California.

During the war, he enlisted in the one hundred day call, Company H, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Ohio, and served out term of enlistment, the regiment being engaged in the protection of the Ohio border. In 1871, he moved to Kansas and settled in Douglas County, where he engaged in farming until he established his present business. JOSIAH CHAPIN TRASK. Among the 180 lives of martyrs sacrificed in the terrible massacre by Quantrill, at Lawrence, there were few of more promise than that of the young editor and publisher whose name heads this sketch. Josiah C. Trask was born in Warren, Mass., May 9, 1837. His parents were Rev. George Trask and Ruth Freeman Trask. His father was born in Beverly, Mass., in the year 1795. At an early age he became converted, passed through a collegiate course at Brunswick, Me.; graduated at Andover, Mass., was ordained to the ministry in 1829, and was settled in Farmingham, Warren and Fitchburg, Mass. During the early part of his life, he formed the habit of using tobacco. After years of indulgence, his health became very much impaired, and obeying the advice of a physician, he renounced its use, and his experience so impressed him that he began to relate it publicly. In this way he commenced the anti-tobacco reform, of which he was the acknowledged leader until death closed his labors in 1875. He was a man of keen sensibilities, active in every reform, a faithful friend, and an earnest preacher of the Gospel. His death was triumphant. Although believing firmly in salvation by Jesus Christ, he had liberal views on all religious topics. The mother of Josiah Trask was born in Marlboro, Mass. She was the daughter of Rev. Asa Packard, of the Bridgewater family of Packards. Her father enlisted in the army of the Revolution, was wounded, and died at the advanced age of eighty-five years. The ball wounding him was extracted after his death, and it is now in the possession of his relatives. Her mother was the daughter of Col. Josiah Quincy, of Quincy, Mass., a descendant of noble ancestry; she did honor to her birth. The mother of Josiah C. Trask was living in 1879 at the advanced age of seventy-nine years. She is a remarkable woman in many respects, and co-operated fully with her husband in all his efforts to elevate humanity. Josiah C. Trask pursued an academic course at Fitchburg, Mass. He left home at the age of sixteen, going to Boston to seek employment in a printing office. As he had but $1 above his fare, he said he could not afford to have his trunk taken to the depot, so he carried it in his arms. As he was about to start, his father proposed to give him a letter of recommendation, to which he replied: "No, sir, I thank you; I'll recommend myself." After reaching Boston he went up and down the streets until he came to the Yankee Blade office. He went in, and said to the proprietor: "I don't exactly like your paper, sir, but I want to get something to do, and if you can give me anything, I will work here until I can get something better." He stayed there one week and then found work in the Recorder office, where he remained until he became connected with the New York Evangelist. His starting out in life was significant of his honesty and independence, traits which strengthened every year of his life. In the fall of 1857, he first met Miss R. T. Hibbard, of Cortland, N. Y., then attending school in the city. Their interest in each other was mutual, and in the fall of 1862, they were married by Rev. Mr. Lord. Miss Hibbard was the daughter of Joel B. and Eliza Hibbard. Left an orphan, at the age of sixteen she went to New York City to finish her education. Mr. Hibbard was a strong anti-slavery man, of large intelligence, undoubted integrity, and commanding business capacity. He died suddenly, while absent from home, in Milwaukee. He was one of the founders of Cortland Academy and was deeply interested in the cause of education, and so was his amiable and intelligent wife. In February, in company with his brother, he left New York for Kansas, stopping and securing employment in the office of the Herald of Freedom. He also worked at the printing business for some time at Lecompton. In 1861, Mr. Trask entered into partnership with Hovey E. Lowman, bought the Herald of Freedom and changed the name of the paper to the Kansas State Journal. In 1861, Mr. Trask edited the paper in Topeka. In 1862, he was twice at Yankton, Dakota, where he published a paper. He was there during the Indian outbreak, detained at Yankton, and pressed into service for a month, when he left in November, hardly escaping from the Indians with his life. He sold his paper at Yankton, and after finishing the State printing, he went to New York to be married to Miss R. J. Hibbard, and returned with his bride to Lawrence the last of December. He was one of the delegates to the Canal Convention held in Chicago in the spring of 1863. The following July, in company with his wife, he visited Junction City, where they spent the 4th of July, Mr. Trask taking part in the public exercises of the day. At the commencement of the Agricultural College he was one of the speakers. He made many friends during his trip by his genial manner. He joined the Masons a few months before his death, and had been an Odd Fellow for several years. Though not a communicant of the Episcopal Church, he was chosen a vestryman and attended regularly. The arrangements had been completed for adding a daily issue to the Journal, and the press had arrived a few days before his death. As one of the editors of the Kansas State Journal, he had passed through the early troubles of that stricken country, and was throughout the struggle an uncompromising supporter of liberty in that Territory. Perhaps no man of his age was more intimately identified with the political life of Kansas. He held a high position for ability for his devotion to friends, his love of the principles of freedom and his social qualities. For a number of years he did a large portion of the printing of the laws of Kansas, and his imprint will be found on many of the early works of the Territory and the State. Although eminently patriotic, with a military turn of mind, he was never regularly in the United States Army, but turned out frequently for defense, and was efficient in drilling and organizing troops, being a drill-master. He was a man of fine personal appearance and address, tall, commanding, erect, conscientious in his conduct, and firm in his convictions. The death of Mr. Trask was murder under the most horrid circumstances which can be contemplated. On the morning of the Lawrence massacre, a band of men appeared at his boarding house and demanded the surrender of the inmates, under the most solemn promise of honorable treatment as prisoners. Mr. Trask was the first to step out, when they were overpowered, and almost instantly Trask, Thorp, Griswold and Baker, were shot down. Trask and Griswold were instantly killed, Thorp mortally wounded, and Baker severely. He was left for dead, but recovered. The widow of Mr. Trask still resides in Lawrence, an educated, accomplished lady, holding the position of City Librarian, universally esteemed by a large circle of friends. Mr. Trask's funeral was attended by a large concourse of citizens, and Rev. E. Davis, once his pastor, in his eloquent sermon on the occasion, alluded most feelingly to the noble character of his murdered friend, summing up his salient points and most marked traits of industry, nobleness of aim, straightforwardness, temperance, regard for freedom and unselfishness.

ULRICKSON & CRUM, dealers in stoves, tinware, gas pipe and fittings, pumps, hose and drive-wells. Their specialty is plumbing, gas and steam-fitting of all kinds and the general manufacture of brass, iron, copper and tin roofing, guttering, etc. In stoves, they control the Crown Jewel, Harvard, and other heaters, and the Universal Range, Eleycut, and other cooking stoves. The firm was organized in 1880. They carry a stock of $10,000, and employ from eight to fifteen men. P. Ulrickson was born on the Island of Ficuo, Denmark, April 7, 1845. After leaving school he served his time at the plumbing, gas and steam-fitting trade. About 1865, he immigrated to the United States, spent some time in New York, and then settled in Lawrence, Kan., where he worked at his trade. He was connected with the Lawrence Gas Company about thirteen years, during the last seven of which he held the position of Superintendent. On leaving there, he bought out their plumbing and gas-fitting stock and shortly afterward established the present business. Mr. Ulrickson was married in Lawrence, to Miss A. M. Benson, a native of Sweden. They have three children living—Charles F., Mamie and Arthur.

ISAAC N. VAN HOESEN, Vice President of Leis Chemical Manufacturing Company, was born at Kinderhook, Columbia Co., N. Y., December 25, 1841. His father moved from Hudson, N. Y., to Mount Vernon, Ohio, in 1854, and in 1856, settled in McDonough County, Ill. The subject of this sketch was engaged in studying dentistry on the breaking-out of the late war. In August, 1861, he enlisted in Capt. W. F. Baynes' company, which rendezvoused at St. Louis, and was incorporated into the Tenth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, which command was engaged in performing duty on the Missouri, Pacific & Northern Missouri Railroad, operating against guerrillas. In April, 1862, the command was sent to Cape Girardeau, thence to Pittsburg Landing. He was detailed for duty as Acting Sergeant Major in 1862; was promoted to Second Lieutenant of Company B, January 2, 1863, and to First Lieutenant in August of the same year, and for gallant services at the battle of Mission Ridge, was promoted to Captain of Company G, same regiment, November 28, 1863. He was mustered out at St. Louis August 24, 1864, on the expiration of his term of enlistment. During his services he participated in the battles of Iuka, October 3 and 4, 1862, Raymond, Jackson, Champion Hills, Black River, Vicksburg, Chattanooga and Mission Ridge. After severing his connection with the army, he was engaged as agent for C. H. & L. J. McCormick, manufacturers of harvesting machines. He came to Kansas in 1866, locating at Manhattan, removed thence to Leavenworth, where he resided from 1869 to 1871. In the latter year, he settled in Lawrence and built a warehouse, where he engaged in the managing of the interests of C. H. & L. J. McCormick in the State of Kansas until 1882. Mr. Van Hoesen was elected Mayor of the city in 1878, and has been President of the Chamber of Commerce for a number of years.

GEN. SAMUEL WALKER, of Lawrence, was born October 19, 1822, near London, Franklin Co., Penn. Gen. Walker's grandfather, Samuel Walker, came to the United States from the north of Ireland previous to the war of the Revolution, and served during that war as a private soldier. His father, James Walker, served in the war of 1812 as a private soldier in a Maryland regiment, and was by occupation a farmer. His maternal grandfather, Archibald Rankin, also came from the northern part of Ireland, and also served in the Revolutionary war. His mother, previous to her marriage with James Walker, was Miss Mary Rankin. Gen. Walker, when one year old, was stricken with disease of the hip; and in consequence, was unable to attend school, and received but little education. Until fifteen years of age, he lived upon the farm, a constant sufferer from his disease, and without hope of relief. At this time, a remedy was discovered, which brought the leg to its proper length, but there still was some lameness and weakness. Unable for this reason to perform heavy manual labor, he was apprenticed to learn the cabinet-maker's trade, at which as apprentice and journeyman, he worked eleven years. In 1848, he moved to Ohio, and there began the business of cabinet-making on his own account, continuing in it six years. In 1854, in company with Thomas W. Barber, Oliver Barber and Thomas Pierson, he went to Kansas, arriving at Westport, Mo., on the way, on the 1st of May. On the 10th of May, this little party reached the present site of Lawrence, and took a view of the country from where the State University now stands. After seeing other points in the Territory, he returned to New Paris, Ohio, and in the spring of 1855, with quite a large party of emigrants, returned to Kansas. The party all settled in different parts of Kanwaka Township, Gen. Walker pitching his tent seven miles west of Lawrence, on the 12th of April. About six weeks afterward, "Sheriff" Jones, at the head of a body of 150 men, rode through the country, burned the cabins of some "d—d abolitionists" in the vicinity of Lecompton, and on his return told Gen. Walker that he would give him two weeks to get out, and that at the end of that time he was "coming up to drive all the d——d nigger-stealers from the Territory." Gen. Walker notified the settlers all around. The next day, eighty-six men assembled at his house and organized themselves into a military company, calling it the Bloomington Guards, and choosing for it the following officers: Captain, Mr. Reed; First Lieutenant, Mr. Vermilya; Second Lieutenant, Dr. Miller; First Sergeant, Samuel Walker. In 1856, he was promoted to the Colonelcy of the Fourth Cavalry, under Maj. Gen. Robinson and Brig. Gen. Lane. He participated in all the campaigns of the Free-State men; was present at the siege of Lawrence, did a great deal of scouting service, was at the siege of Ft. Saunders, commanded at the siege of Ft. Titus August 16, 1856, when he recaptured the Abbott Howitzer, took thirty-four prisoners, including Col. Titus, and burned the fort. In March, 1856, he was elected a member of the Lower House of the Topeka Legislature; on the 16th of December, he was elected by the Legislature a Brigadier General of militia; on the 2d of February, 1858, he found in a woodpile at Lecompton the candle box, containing the returns of the elections of December 21, 1857, and January 4, 1858, under the Lecompton Constitution; on the 29th of May, of the same year, under orders from Gov. Denver to arrest the band of lawless men acting under Montgomery, he went to Ft. Scott and arrested Montgomery, George W. Clarke and others. At the breaking-out of the civil war of 1861-65, he enlisted in the first company of the first regiment that was raised in Kansas for the defense of the Union; and on the 1st of June, 1861, was mustered into the service as Captain of Company F, First Kansas Volunteer Infantry; on the 24th of May, 1862, he was promoted to be Major of the Fifth Kansas Company, serving in that capacity until the regiment was mustered out; on the 8th of October, 1864, he was made Lieutenant Colonel of the Sixteenth Kansas Company. He was the first officer to lead a command through the Black Hills, and in 1866, for gallant services against the Sioux, on Powder River, he was brevetted Brigadier General of volunteers. He was married October 20, 1842, to Miss Marian E. Lowe, daughter of Hon. James Lowe, a prominent merchant, and State Senator of Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Walker have nine children, four sons and five daughters, whose names in order of their birth are as follows: Elizabeth E., James L., Mary R., Harriet R., Fannie, Minnie B., Oliver B., Charles and George. Gen. Walker is a Mason and an Odd Fellow. In politics, he is a Republican, and has always acted with the Republican party. He has four times been elected Sheriff of Douglas County, and in 1872, was elected State Senator from that county. He was appointed Major General of Kansas Militia in 1866 and in 1873. An incident in the life of Gen. Walker, though out of its proper connection, may be given here, as showing upon what a slender thread life sometimes hung in those troublous times. When Gov. Shannon had proclaimed war upon the Free-State men, and was himself leading a party which was hunting them as guerrillas, Gen. Walker, on account of his influence and ability as a leader among them, was an object of special hatred on the part of the Governor. He was for a time hunted like a wild beast. On one occasion, the Governor at the head of a party of soldiers was in pursuit of Walker, who, fortunately for himself, discovered his pursuers before they discovered him, and promptly concealed himself behind a clump of bushes by the side of the road. In this position he stood with his rifle ready to fire at any moment upon the Governor, in case the latter should, in passing, discover him in his concealment. But now, fortunately for the Governor, his attention was diverted from Walker by some object on the other side of the road, as was that of Spicer and Col. Titus, who were riding ahead of the Governor. Capt. Sturges and the thirty soldiers who followed, all saw and recognized him, some smiling, some nodding and others giving the military salute, but being in sympathy with the Free-State men, passed quietly by. Had the eye of Gov. Shannon fallen upon him, the form of the Governor would have fallen to the ground a corpse, as Walker was determined to kill the Governor at least, if he himself was discovered.

WAKARUSA TOWNSHIP.

The little hamlet of Wakarusa, now but a suburb of the city of Lawrence, was one of the first points settled in the State. One of the colonies sent out by the New England Emigrant Aid Society settled here. The name was conferred by the settlers, and was afterward given to the township including the city of Lawrence, when these divisions of the county were organized. The name also became historic in the Wakarusa war, concerning which the reader will find full account in the general history of the State.

Douglas was situated on the Kansas River ten miles above Lawrence. The first settlement was made here in 1854, by Paris Ellison, who had there several slaves. It never attained to much size. When it was at the height of its prosperity, it contained only about five inhabitants, all of whom lived in one house. It was incorporated by the bogus Legislature in 1855, with the following Board of Trustees: John W. Reid, George W. Clark, Charles E. Kearney, Edward McCarty, Paris Ellison, M. W. McGee, their associates and successors. A ferry was established here during the same year, the same individuals being authorized to keep it, and for the term of twenty years, as were appointed trustees of the town.

In the year 1855, the Legislature authorized James Findlay to establish a bridge across the Wakarusa River at the crossing of the Territorial road leading from the Missouri line to Lawrence and Tecumseh requiring him to complete the bridge within three years.

The city of Lawrence now claims all the commercial importance of the township, but there are several small villages besides Wakarusa, pleasantly situated, and having a more or less distinct individuality; these are Sibley and Franklin in the eastern part, and Grover, Washington Creek and Lake View in the western.

The Washington Creek German Baptist Church, of Wakarusa Township, was organized in 1858, with the following members: Abraham Rithuck and wife, Jacob Ulrich and wife, Daniel Studebaker and wife, Stephen Studebaker and wife, David Kinzie and wife, Christopher Shank and wife and Isaac Hoover, thirteen in all. Since then the church has grown to 205 members. They first bought a small frame house which was used for a meeting house. In 1878, they erected a large church at a cost of $2,700 on the corner near Samuel Baker's. The same year M. Broombaagh built a meeting house at a cost of $800, and donated it to the society, so that now they own two meeting houses. Recently, about forty members have withdrawn from the church under the influence of what is known as the Miami Resolution, and style themselves the old school, in contradistinction to the more progressive wing of their brethren.

The present officers of the church are: James E. Hilhey, Bishop; Samuel Baker, Thomas E. Winsey, ministers; John Ulrich, Eph Hutchler, John Herr, Deacons; John Herr, Clerk.

Fairview Methodist Episcopal Church, of Wakarusa Township, was built in 1881. The building is 30x50, a stone basement and frame superstructure. The materials were all hauled by "bees," many of the farmers taking part in the work. The church is valued at $2,500, the furnishings all having been brought from Chicago. The present membership of the church is forty-five. The trustees are W. B. Kennedy, G. E. Leary, V. S. Reese, Lewis Howard, Andrew Douglass. The present pastor is Mr. Dearborn, of Douglas County.

Pleasant Valley Library Association, Wakarusa Township, was organized in 1879, with twenty-seven members, their first installment consisting of thirty-two books. They have now a membership of fifty-two, and the library contains some 300 books and pamphlets. The present board of officers are: Scott R. Halloway, President; Miss Lorry Chadwick, Vice President; L. J. Kennedy, Secretary; S. H. Carson, Treasurer; A. E. Hitchcock.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

G. C. BRACKETT, Secretary of the Kansas State Horticultural Society, Section 27, P. O. Lawrence, was elected to his present position at the first organization of the society in 1867, and has since been unanimously elected at the meetings. Mr. Brackett was born in Unity, Me., near the eastern line of the State, October 26, 1832. His parents afterward resided for short intervals in different parts of the State. About 1837, they moved to Lynn, Mass., and about five years later settled in Lee County, Iowa. The subject of our sketch received a preparatory education at the Denmark Academy, taking a full course, and in September, 1854, entered Amherst College, Mass. On account of inflammation of the eyes, caused by over-study, he was obliged to resign in his Sophomore year and return home. In 1856, he left home with the intention of making an overland journey to California. He landed in Leavenworth April 1, and the next day proceeded to Lawrence and decided to settle there. His first intention was to engage in Government surveying, but the political enmity of the officers in charge of that department prevented the realization of this plan. He then, in company with O. A. Bassett, engaged in surveying and land speculations. In 1859, he bought twenty acres of raw prairie west of the city and started his experimental fruit farm; since that time has tried all the hardy, large and small fruits as they appeared, with a view of finding those adapted to Kansas culture. He now has forty acres entirely devoted to fruit culture. About one-fifth is in small fruits, the balance in apples, pears, peaches, plums, grapes, etc. In addition to the regular horticultural studies, etc., Mr. B. has also made a careful study of entomology so far as it applies to insects, etc., that are injurious to fruit. Mr. B. married, in Dundee, N. Y., in 1859, Harriet Gabriel, a daughter of one of the participators in the battle of Lundy's Lane. They have three children—Milla E. (now Mrs. J. E. Pearson, of Douglas County), Edith E. and Harold G.

WILLIAM BROWN, proprietor Pleasant View farm, Section 1, P. O. Lawrence; the home farm comprises sixty acres, and other parcels of land bring up the aggregate to 260 acres. The principal business is the breeding of full-blood Jersey cattle. His herd consists of forty to fifty head of all ages; with few exceptions they are all registered stock. The heads of his herd are "Island Lord" (A. J. C. C. Reg. 3322) and "Allandale" (A. J. C. C. Reg. 6307). At the Topeka and Bismarck fairs of 1882, the herd took $600 of the $1,200 offered in premiums, also premiums at both fairs on domestic and premium butter. William Brown was born in Cavin County, Ireland, November 16, 1839. In 1854, he immigrated to the United States and located in Monmouth County, N. J. In 1858, he moved West, stopping for a time in Illinois and Wisconsin. In 1859, he settled in Douglas County, Kan., was at first working on farms, then rented for a time, and finally became owner of a small farm; this he sold, and in 1865 bought present place. During the war, he was connected with Capt. Hineman's company of militia. He was married in Sharon, Wis., January 8, 1859, to Miss Jane Shields, of Sharon. They have four children—Thomas R., Elmer E., Willard and Emma. Mr. Brown has been Township Treasurer a number of years, and a member of the District School Board.

HUGH CAMERON, farmer, southeast quarter Section 14, Town 12 and Range 19 (named Glen Burn), P. O. Lawrence, was born in Perth, Fulton County, N. Y., October 29, 1826, son of Allen Cameron and Catherine Frazier. He grew up in his native State, educated himself without going to school. Went to Washington, D. C., in 1849, was employed as Professor of Mathematics in the Rittenhouse Academy, and while so employed accidentally formed the acquaintance of Gen. William L. Chaplain, of Albany, N. Y., the boldest champion of human liberty of that day. Mr. Chaplain was taken in the act of abducting the body servants, slaves of Stevens and Tombs, of Georgia. He had them in a hack completely closed, which he was driving by way of the underground railroad, Maryland and Pennsylvania, to the land of liberty. The Marshal of the city of Washington, was on the alert and caught him and the slaves when only a few miles from the city. Chaplain was lodged in jail to await preliminary examination. As soon as young Cameron heard of his being in jail, he visited him there, and for this he was promptly discharged from the professorship he held in the academy, and being regarded as Chaplain's accomplice, he was mobbed by Pro-slavery men in the streets of Washington, D. C. Some time after this event, the Hon. Thomas Corwin, Secretary of the Treasury, appointed him to a clerkship in that department, which he held for several months, and then on account of his health resigned and engaged in canvassing for Harper's magazine with marked success. He came to Kansas in July, 1854; is one of the earliest settlers located near Lawrence, where he still remains. He was deeply interested in all the struggles of the young Territory for freedom. Was free to condemn outrages, no matter by whom perpetrated. He denounced the lawlessness of the Free-State men on the one hand, and the outlawry of the slavery party on the other, for which he was at times mobbed and robbed by the Free-State men, because he would not indorce all their acts; and also by the border ruffians, because he condemned their infamous conduct. His property was freely taken by both parties and his life was constantly in danger. Gov. Reeder appointed him a Judge at the first Territorial election, and when the polls were surrounded by more than 1,000 ruffians, he did not abandon his post, although the others fled. In making out the returns, he secured a certificate from the two Judges (elected by the ruffian invaders, that the votes cast at his precinct were not all by legal resident voters; and the returns being made in this form, furnished the Governor valid grounds on which to declare the election void, which he did. He was appointed a Justice of the Peace by Gov. Shannon, and issued one warrant for the arrest of Jacob Branson, a noted Free-State outlaw; Branson was rescued by a mob, and Squire Cameron was menaced and threatened, but did not leave the country. He was finally arrested and taken before Lane and Robinson; the former demanded that he resign his office and apologize to the drunken mob, which had arrested him for having accepted the appointment; this he refused to do, and was again taken into custody by the mob and subjected to many and gross indignities. He escaped from them by strategy, and claims that in this instance bad whisky saved his life. After the battle of Wilson's Creek, in 1861, he volunteered, was mustered in as a private soldier and ordered on the recruiting service by Col. R. B. Mitchell. He served for about two years in the Second Kansas Cavalry, as First Lieutenant and Captain; was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel Second Arkansas Cavalry, and was honorably discharged at LaGrange, Tenn., in 1865, after a service of about four years, and after the close of the war. He has since been brevetted Colonel and Brigadier General of Volunteers for meritorious services. He has always been an uncompromising temperance man, and is now a prominent Prohibitionist. Mr. Cameron is a man of decided opinions, and a fearless, outspoken advocate of the right, almost always with the minority, politically. He is now engaged in an earnest effort to establish the Useful Worker, a journal devoted to sobriety, equality and equity. The name of his journal is new and suggestive, and with it he will stand as unflinchingly for the cause of humanity as he has ever stood in former years. As a writer, his style is bold and aggressive, traits which have always characterized his career in life.

J. P. COREL, farmer, Section 4, P. O. Lawrence, was born in Tazewell County, Va., February 16, 1832. In 1849, his parents moved to Missouri, settling near Kansas City, where J. P. assisted his father in farming until the latter's death. In 1854, the subject of our sketch moved with his mother and two brothers to Kansas, all making claim on the edge of town. During the border ruffian trouble, he took a leading part on the Free-State side. During the years 1855–56–57, was connected with Col. Williamson's regiment. During the late war, he was connected with the Kansas State Militia. In 1857, he settled on present place, the claim having been bought for him by Mr. Joseph McGhee, his father-in-law. He has since that time been engaged in farming, now operating 150 acres, devoted to both grain and stock. Mr. Corel was married in Douglas County, Kan., August 20, 1857, to Miss Susannah, daughter of James McGhee, Esq. They have seven children living—Jennie, Olive (now Mrs. S. W. Sperry), Ella, Kate, James H., Charles W. and Anna.

WILLIAM CROZIER, farmer, Section 12, P. O. Lawrence; bought and settled on present place in the spring of 1882. He has in his home eighty acres of land under a high state of cultivation. The buildings erected in 1882, costing some $5,000. Is engaged in raising grain and the propagation of fine stock. William Crozier was born in Tyrone County, Ireland, December 25, 1827. His parents came to the United States when he was an infant, settling at Ithaca, N. Y., where he was brought up. His father died when he was still young, and the care of the family devolved on him. In 1846, he settled in Schuyler County, Ill., where he engaged in farming until 1857. In the later year, he moved to Linn County, Kan., and pre-empted a claim. In 1862, he sold this farm, and bought another on the Shawnee reserve in Johnson County; here he engaged actively in farming until 1882. He was married in Linn County, Kan., April 22, 1858, to Miss Mary Lloyd, of Douglas County, a member of the pioneer families. They having no children of their own, have brought up four adopted children. Mr. Crozier is a member of the A., F. & A. M., of Johnson County.

WILLIAM CRUTCHFIELD, farmer, Section 17, P. O. Lawrence. The home farm consists of 140 acres, devoted principally to dairy interests. He keeps twelve cows, disposing of the product in Lawrence. Mr. Crutchfield was born at Jamestown, Province of Quebec, May 22, 1829. He received his early education in Canada, but finished in the New England States. He was brought up to farming, and has always followed that pursuit. After residing in New England until February, 1856, he determined to emigrate to Kansas. He started for Kansas with Dr. Calvin Cutler, celebrated for his capture of a Santa Fé train belonging to a Pro-slavery man, and was one of the party with Maj. Starr Hoyt; the party started from Springfield, Mass., with 100 Sharp's rifles. At St. Louis, it was arranged to separate the slides or lock of the guns, and Dr. Cutler and Mr. Crutchfield were selected to carry the slides overland, while Maj. Hoyt started by boat with the remainder of the guns, fearing their capture if they were all caught together. And they were afterward captured on the boat at Lexington, Mo. Much of the way through Missouri he traveled on foot, but arrived safe in Kansas with his portion of the guns, soon to learn that Maj. Hoyt had been robbed of the remainder. Hoyt was murdered on the Wakarusa the ensuing summer. It is worthy of special note, that twenty years afterward, through the instrumentality of Mr. Crutchfield, a handsome monument was erected to the memory of the noble martyr, in Oak Hill Cemetery, at Lawrence. On the arrival of Mr. C. at Lawrence, he entered into various occupations, built the first bridge over Stranger Creek in 1857, and in 1865 purchased a quarter section in Wakarusa Township, where he has made one of the best farms in Douglas County. Has an orchard of 1,000 apple trees, and has a good assortment of every variety of fruit trees suitable to the climate. Has a fine dwelling, commodious barn and outbuildings, and is surrounded by all the comforts of a happy home. In 1856, he was among the most active prominent Free-State men. He was an efficient soldier in Capt. Bickerton's Artillery Company, and participated in the capture of Fort Saunders and Fort Titus. He served in the Free-State ranks in 1856, until peace was restored around Lawrence. He witnessed the destruction of the Free-State Hotel, the printing presses and Gov. Robinson's house, and other property in Lawrence May 21, 1856. He was present and participated in the defense of Lawrence, Sunday, September 14, 1856, when 2,700 Pro-slavery men from Missouri besieged Lawrence, he took position with a company of ten men under Caleb Pratt, in Massachusetts street. When the enemy appeared in sight, the whole town appeared in consternation. There was no organization at this juncture. John Brown, afterward the martyr of Harper's Ferry, arose and addressed the people, as near as Mr. C. can recollect: "Gentlemen, I have no authority, no command. The prospect is we will have a fight. I want you all to keep cool. Keep your eye on the hind sight of your gun, and fire low. If the Pro-slavery men had done that, I would have been riddled with bullets long ago. Those who have Sharp's rifles will volunteer as skirmishers, and go out upon that hill," pointing to the elevation upon which now stands the Friend's Yearly Meeting House. Then he organized a company by parties of ten, and assigned them positions. As fast as ten men were entered, he would say, "Now choose your Captain." When this was done, he would assign each a position, placing all those who had Sharp's rifles on the hill, and assigning the others to the earth forts, redoubts or rifle pits, and to stone houses and other places of defense. There, not over 150 men defended the town until the arrival of United States troops, under the order of Gov. Geary. He participated in the hottest of the battle of Westport, and was also in the battles of Big Blue and Little Blue. He has held various local offices, especially in schools, for several years. He was Township Trustee, and was at one time United States Assistant Assessor. He has belonged to the Patrons of Husbandry from their organization. He was married in Lawrence, January 26, 1865, to Miss Annie, daughter of Dr. Robert Ironside, of Thorold, Ontario. They have an adopted daughter, Miss Jessie Crutchfield, born April 11, 1866.

After the survey was completed, he pre-empted the quarter-section on which he now resides, and settled on it the following spring. During the early troubles, he was connected with the Free-State organizations, and during the late war was a member of Capt. Wilder's militia company. Since his settlement on the homestead, he has been engaged in farming continuously, with the exception of one summer he went to Pike's Peak. He was married in Victor, Ontario County, N. In addition to his present business, will build a green-house in 1883. A. H. Griesa was born in Bielefelt, Westphalia, Germany, January 14, 1845. In 1856, he emigrated to the United States, where his parents had preceded him, and settled in Ontario County, N. Y. Commenced learning the nursery business in 1857, in Ontario County, and continued in it there until he moved to Kansas in 1867. He was married in Douglas County, Kan., in 1869, to Miss Amelia Beebe, a native of Lima, Livingston County, N. Y.

HON. JOEL GROVER, deceased, was born in Springwater, Livingston Co., N. Y., August 5, 1825. He was educated at the Geneseo University, Geneseo, N. Y., and graduated with honors in that institution. His natural taste was for farming, and leaving school he pursued that occupation first in New York, and afterward in Iowa, until 1851, when he emigrated to California and engaged in the purchase of stock and in running pack trains from San Francisco to the mines. There he remained two years, and returned stopping only to visit relatives in New York. The passage of the Kansas Nebraska act awoke his anti-slavery feelings and prompted him to fall in with the tide of Free-State men then headed toward Kansas. He came with what is known as the second party, and arrived where Lawrence now stands September 13, 1854. One of the first outbreaks in Lawrence, was the removal of a tent by some Pro-slavery men which Mr. Grover and others resisted, taking the tent from a wagon, setting it up in the same spot and preparing for its defense. This led on the following evening to the organization of the first military company in Lawrence, of which Mr. Grover was made Captain. He was one of the most active Free-State men, and participated in all the conflicts of Free-State times. He was one of the men who volunteered to go to Shawnee Mission to defend Gov. Reeder in canvassing the vote on the election of March 30, 1855, and was in the Pro-slavery caucus until they passed a resolution excluding all who did not sympathize with the Pro-slavery men, and although alone among a large party of bitter political opponents, he made a strong speech denouncing their action in the face of such men as Dr. Stringfellow, B. F. Stringfellow, Atchison, Richardson and all the noted Southern fire-eaters of that period, and on his speech the caucus adjourned informally with great excitement. He actively participated in command of the company in the defense of Lawrence in the Wakarusa war of 1855, and was promoted to Major and placed in command of one of the forts. In 1856, he was one of the safety committee, and after the raid of Lawrence, May 21, 1856, he rode to Kansas City in the night, took a steamer and carried the first intelligence to St. Louis of the sacking and burning of Lawrence, and had an extra issued of the Missouri Democrat. Pursuing his way in the first steamboat to Alton and thence to Chicago, he also there gave the first news, getting ahead of all Pro-slavery reports. He spent about two weeks organizing a company in Chicago, and returned up the Missouri River to Leavenworth. The company, except Mr. Grover, was disarmed at Lexington, and afterward turned back at Leavenworth, being refused the liberty to land. On the return, however, of the boat from Weston with this company, on the assurance of the aid of some Leavenworth men to protect the company in leaving the boat, Mr. Grover was on the wharf to assist in the work, but the Leavenworth men failed in their promises and he was overpowered and driven onto the boat, but allowed by the Captain to get off at Kansas City, where he escaped to Kansas. He commanded his company and participated in the battle of Franklin, Fort Saunders, Fort Titus and all other Free-State engagements. He located a farm claim in 1854, about three miles southwest of Lawrence, and improved it. In 1858, he was elected one of the County Commissioners, and held that position for four years; also held local positions, such as Trustee and member of the School Board, etc. In 1867, he was elected a member of the House of Representatives, and re-elected in 1868, making one of the best working members in that body. In 1869, he was elected County Commissioner and made chairman of the board, and again re elected in 1871, holding the office four years. He was for years a director of the St. Louis, Lawrence & Western Railroad Company. He had command of a company in the Price raid, October 13, 18[illegible]. He married Miss Emily J. Hunt, daughter of George W. Hunt, Esq., one of the most earnest anti-slavery pioneers of Kansas, and one of the best men of the early times. Mrs. Grover is a lady of culture and refinement, and was one of the truest of the courageous guard ladies of the troublesome times in Kansas. When Lawrence was sacked and burned in 1856, she had all her wearing apparel, except that in use, destroyed in the burning of Gov. Robinson's house. Mr. Grover departed this life July 28, 1879, leaving his widow and seven children—Frank G., Helen A., Charles R., Cora E., Earnest J., Lillie L. and Jay G.

DAVID J. HARVEY, farmer, Section 21, P. O. Lawrence, was born in Howard County, Mo., February 27, 1836, son of Allen and Lettie (Johnson) Harvey. He was born a slave and owned by Josiah Foster, from whom he was freed by the war in 1862, and the following year came to Kansas in destitute circumstances, but with pluck, determination and good management, he has become the owner of 100 acres of fine land free from incumbrance. He was married in Douglas County, Kan., October 26, 1863, to Mrs. Rebecca, daughter of Parker Y. Brooks. They have the following children: Sherman A., born October 6, 1864; Grant D., September 30, 1866; Edward S., August 2, 1870. They both pre-empted claims in Douglas County. Mr. Hutchinson was a private in the Mexican war, and commanded a company of Free-State troops in the early days of Kansas. His only child married B. Hitchcock, in Washington County, Ill. Mrs. Hitchcock died, leaving four children—Phillip T., since deceased; Alphonso E.; Melissa A., now Mrs. Godfrey; and Francis M. B. Hitchcock was also private in the Mexican war, and commanded a company of volunteers, United States Army, in Kansas, during the late war. He went to Missouri in 1874, and is supposed to have died there. A. E. Hitchcock, the subject of this sketch, was educated in Douglas County, and has always engaged in farming. He was married in Douglas County, October 30, 1879, to Miss Rosa, daughter of Collins Holloway, Esq. They have two children—Viola M. and an infant unnamed.

Has now 160 acres in the home farm devoted to grain and stock-raising; has about thirty to thirty-five head of cattle, nine head of horses, etc. Mr. Holloway was born in Brown County, Ohio, January 18, 1832. He was born and raised there on a farm, and in 1850 moved to Schuyler County, Ill., and in 1855 moved to Kansas, settling in Douglas County in June. During the early days, he was prominently identified with the Free-State forces, participating in the attack at Ft. Saunders and the defense of Lawrence, etc., Branson's rescue. During the late war, he was connected with the militia of the State, taking part in the repulse of Price. He was married in Brown County, Ohio, February 5, 1852, to Miss Catherine Kennedy, of that county. They have seven children—Rosa D. (now Mrs. A. E. Hitchcock), Emery A., Scott R., Dora L. (now Mrs. William Shank), Grant W., Maggie D. and Thomas K.

J. B. HOWARD, old settler and farmer, Section 32, P. O. Lawrence, pre-empted and settled on present place in 1857, and has since actively engaged in farming. During the war, he was connected with the Blue Mound Guards, under Capt. Ogden. He was born in Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y., August 6, 1815. His parents moved to Oswego County; thence to Washtenaw County, Mich., in 1829. J. B. was born and brought up on a farm, and after coming of age engaged in farming in Michigan until 1857, when he drove through to Kansas. He was married in Washtenaw County, Mich., November 21, 1836, to Miss Lashier, of that county. They have four children living—Harriet (now Mrs. Hollenback), Frank, John and Lewis D.

LEWIS D. HOWARD, one of the trustees of Fair View Methodist Episcopal Church, is engaged in farming in Section 32, operating 120 acres, devoted to grain and stock. He was born in Washtenaw County, Mich., August 22, 1849, and moved to Kansas with his parents in 1857; commenced farming on his own account in 1870. He was married in Osage County, Kan., March 16, 1872, to Miss Kate Code, a member of one of the pioneer families. They have three children—Charles, Edward and Frank.

WILLIAM HUGHES, farmer and old settler, Section 21, P. O. Lawrence, settled on present place in 1862, at that time a farm of 160 acres. He has since continued to add to his land. His specialty is stock, having at the head of his herd thoroughbreds, both Short-horn and Jersey. Mr. Hughes was born in Wales April 9, 1832. His father emigrated to America with his family when William was only five years old, and settled on a farm near Pittsburgh, Penn., belonging to Gen. William Robinson, who cleared the land on which Allegheny City now stands. William's mother died when he was so young that he merely remembers seeing her. His early ambition, struggling as he did with poverty in his youth, both on account of his mother's death and a misfortune that disabled his father, was to emigrate to some new State, where lands were cheap, and rise with the progress of the county. When nearly twenty-one years of age, he started for Kansas, arriving at Lawrence March 13, 1855, with just 50 cents in his pocket, with which he paid for his first night's lodging. The next morning, he went to work getting out timber for the Free-State Hotel, at which he labored for about two months. He then bought on credit two yoke of cattle and a wagon, and commenced freighting goods from Leavenworth to Lawrence, and in the spring of 1857 he paid up his borrowed capital, purchased another yoke of cattle for cash, and had $[illegible] in money. He now took a land claim in Coffey County, but was unfortunate and lost all he had invested. In the summer of 1858, he returned to Pennsylvania to get married, and after paying the minister for performing the ceremony, had $2.50 left. His parents being dead, Gov. Robinson, who was his guardian, made him a present of $100, with which he started West with his wife and a little brother, whom he had taken from the orphan asylum. Upon his arrival in Kansas, he had only $10 left, and immediately went to work as a farm laborer. At the end of two months, he purchased a yoke of cattle on credit for $[illegible], borrowed $[illegible] to commence housekeeping, and set up his own family hearth. He again commenced freighting for cash, when he could get it, for a calf rather than get nothing, and so worked until he was owner of four yoke of cattle. In 1861, he took a contract for hauling a steam boiler from Quindaro to the Sac Agency, and had his leg broken on the trip, and was laid up four months. Just as he had recovered, every one of his oxen died from the Spanish fever. Broke again, his neighbors helped him to secure his crops, and rendered other assistance. In August, he bought a third outfit on credit, and took a small freighting contract for the Government, out of which he made some money and bought twenty calves. Buying a mowing machine on credit, he cut 200 tons of hay for the Government, out of which he made $1,000 in gold. In 1862, he purchased 100 acres of land, and has since actively engaged in farming. Mr. Hughes was an ardent Free-State man during the Territorial days of Kansas; and was a member of Capt. Bickerton's artillery company at the taking of Ft. Titus. He was also in the battles of Ft. Saunders, Franklin, and in all the engagements of the Free-State campaigns of 1855-56. In August, 1858, he was married to Ellen Jane Robinson, of Sharpsburg, Penn., and daughter of Alexander Robinson, a pioneer of Western Pennsylvania. They have had three children, two of whom are living—William Robinson and Thomas Jefferson. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mr. Irvin enlisted in 1863 in Company I, Sixteenth Regiment Kansas Cavalry. He was discharged 1864. He was married in Erie County, Penn., January 17, 1850, to Miss Jane A., daughter of James and Margaret (McCrea) Moore. Here he learned the trade of boiler-maker, and followed this business in Cincinnati and Pomeroy, Ohio, until 1856. He then moved to Kansas, settling in Douglas County, where he has since been engaged in farming. He was connected with the militia during the war, serving in Capt. L. J. pre-empted a claim, and has since been engaged in farming. During the Wakarusa war, he took an active part in the attack on Fort Saunders and Fort Titus, also assisted in the defense of Lawrence in 1856. During the great rebellion, he was connected with the State Militia. Mr. Kenneday was married in Douglas County, Kan., July 29, 1859, to Miss Amanda E. Todd, a member of one of our pioneer families. They had thirteen children in all, ten living to maturity, the eldest daughter, Elizabeth A., married A. Leming, and died in Ohio. Another daughter, Sarah J., is now Mrs. John Neal of Ohio. In 1854, Mrs. Kenneday, with the younger children, moved to Fulton County, Ill., where her elder sons were already settled. In 1855, a company was formed, consisting of twelve wagons, and made the overland journey to Kansas. Mrs. Kenneday's family consisted of five sons and three daughters; four of the sons—W. B., T. H., O. P. and L. J. —now reside in Douglas County; the other son, J. R., is in Colorado. Of the daughters, Nettie is now Mrs. W. H. Curless, of Missouri; Catherine married Mr. C. Kennedy was born in Brown County, Ohio, October 16, 1822. He engaged in farming in his native county until 1848, when he moved to Fulton County, Ill.; here he engaged in farming and boating and rafting on the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers. In 1855, he and others made up a train of bearing wagons with ox teams, and struck out for Kansas; their progress was slow, as they were encumbered with a large herd of cattle and horses, but finally reached their destination in June, 1855. Here he has since engaged in farming, with the exception of the last three years which he has devoted to mining operations in Colorado. In the early days of Kansas, Capt. Kennedy was prominently identified with the Free-State cause. He held a commission as Lieutenant of Company B, Second Regiment, having command of the cavalry portion of the organization, Capt. Hutchinson commanding the infantry. He participated in the battles of Franklin, Fort Saunders, Fort Titus and the other events of the time. During the late war, he held a commission as First Lieutenant of Company B, Third Regiment, Kansas State Militia, and by the promotion of the Captain was placed in command of the company. Took part in the battle of the Big Blue, at the defeat of Gen. Price. At the time of the Quantrill raid on Lawrence, he was at Lawrence, and was aroused by the firing, but like others of the militia, being without arms, could do nothing in the defense of the city. After the departure of the raiders, he assisted in putting out fires set by them. Mr. Kennedy was married in Fulton County, Ill., March 21, 1847, to Miss Elizabeth Curless, of Fulton County. He at once commenced working as an engineer, and for the next five years was engaged at this, making wages of $5 per day. His first place was in charge of a saw mill, at Lawrence, which he operated until it blew up a few months later. He then operated a saw and grist mill in Franklin, until the supply of timber was exhausted. He then put an engine into a saw mill, built by Darland, in North Lawrence, and after putting it up took charge of it for about two years. The next year, he took charge of a mill for Dr. Williams, and the following year bought a farm, which he operated until he bought the place on which he now resides. During the border ruffian troubles, he took an active part with the Free-State men, holding the position of Lieutenant of the Franklin Company from its first organization until the troubles ended, participating in all the engagements; at the taking of Franklin, he was the first man in the fort, disarming Buckles, the Captain of the defenders; afterward distinguishing himself in preserving order, with his own hands emptying on the ground two barrels of whisky which his men had captured. During the late war, he was attached to the headquarters of the Kansas State Militia, at Shawneetown, on special duty. He was married in Eudora Township, Douglas County, Kan., in March, 1857, to Miss Lucinda Shields, daughter of Joseph Shields, Esq., one of the pioneers of 1855. He then left his home determined to go West, stopping for a short time in Seneca County, Ohio, and in 1846 he settled in Stevenson County, Ill., where he engaged in farming, until the spring of 1857. He then moved to Kansas, and made a claim in Douglas County, which he afterward pre-empted and continued to operate until 1882, when he sold his farm on account of the death of his wife. He was married in Stevenson County, Ill., in 1852, to Miss Elizabeth McGee, who died in April, 1880, leaving three children—David, Rosanna (now Mrs. L. H. Watkins) and Anna. Mr. Kostenbader is one of a family of fourteen children, all of whom are living but one. He had a re-union with them lately after an absence of forty years.

C. H. LANGSTON, farmer, P. O. Lawrence, came to Kansas April 2, 1862, and located in Leavenworth, where he lived until 1868, and taught school for three years, and the balance of the time, while living in that city, was engaged in the grocery business. In 1868, he removed to Douglas County, where he resides at present. He was one of the Grant Electors in 1874. He is the Grand Master of the Masonic fraternity (colored) of Kansas, and the Counselor of the Knights of Wise Men of the World. Mr. Langston taught the first colored public school in Kansas, and was Principal of the only colored normal school established in this State. During the late war, he was a recruiting officer under Maj. George L. Stearns; was stationed at Quincy, Ill., for the purpose of recruiting colored soldiers for the two colored Massachusetts regiments, the Fifty-fourth and the Fifty-fifth. Mr. L. was born in Fredericksburg, Va., August 31, 1817, and lived but a short time in his native place, when his parents moved to Louisa County, Va., where he lived until his fifteenth year, and from there moved to Oberlin, Ohio, where he attended the Oberlin College, being the first colored student that attended that institution. He lived in Ohio from 1834 until 1862, when he removed to Kansas. While living in Ohio, he was engaged for eight years in teaching. Mr. L. was married in Elyria, Lorain County, Ohio, January 18, 1869, to Mrs. Mary S. Leary, the widow of Louis Sheridan Leary, who was killed at Harper's Ferry with John Brown. She is a native of Fayetteville, N. C. They have two children—Nathaniel Turner and Caroline H. Mr. L. has a good farm of 125 acres in Douglas County. It is all inclosed and all under cultivation except thirty acres of timber land. He has a comfortable residence and good farm buildings. He has one of the finest apple orchards in the State, and plenty of small fruit on his farm.

JAMES McCREATH, farmer, Section 22, P. O. Lawrence, settled on his present place in 1879. The farm consists of 320 acres under a high state of cultivation. This farm formerly consisted of 640 acres, and was known as the "Reeder Float Farm," being located by a United States Government warrant in the hands of Gov. Reeder, the first Territorial Governor of Kansas, who settled and partially improved it. It was owned by the Reeder heirs until 1880, when it was divided and sold. The products are grain and stock, the aim of the proprietor being to feed up all coarse grains. He has a herd of seventy-five cattle of all ages. His shipment of hogs consists of about two cars yearly, the sales for 1882 aggregating $1,700. James McCreath was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, September 23, 1830. About the age of eighteen, he left his native country for America, locating in Canada about one year, and then moved to the State of Michigan. In 1859, he settled in Vermillion County, Ill., where he engaged in farming until 1878, with the exception of the time he spent in the army. He enlisted in 1863 in Company F, One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the war, being located in Tennessee the most of the time. In 1878, he located in Leavenworth County, Kan., and the following year settled on his present place. He was married in Ayrshire, Scotland, to Miss Christian Arthur, who died, leaving four children—George, David, Melinda and Mary. He was married to his present wife in Vermillion County, Ill. She was Mrs. Sarah Ingraham. They have one son—Mark Ray. Mr. McCreath is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

P. J. PETERSON, farmer, Section 23, P. O. Lawrence. The home farm consists of 179 acres devoted to grain and stock. Mr. Peterson was born in Smoland, Sweden, February 28, 1838. He was educated there, and, in 1852, emigrated with his parents to the United States, and settled in Chicago, where he learned the carpenter's trade. In 1856, he moved to Kansas and settled in Lawrence, following the carpenter trade there until the following year. He then returned to Chicago, stopping a short time in Missouri. In 1863, he again settled in Lawrence, engaging in contracting and building until 1871. He then went to Colorado, where he followed placer and quartz mining very successfully. In 1879, he sold out his interests and returned to Lawrence. He then purchased and improved his present place. He married in Dickinson County, Kan., December 24, 1867, Miss Lavina Hickey, of that county, who died, leaving three children—Annie, Wallace and Jennie. He was married to his present wife in Lawrence April 11, 1877. She was Miss Mary Anderson. Mr. Peterson is President of the Scandinavian Society. Is a member of the A. O. U. W. He is a stockholder in the Lawrence Plow Company, of Lawrence.

CHARLES RALSTON, farmer, Section 30, R. O. Lawrence; is also in partnership with his brother, Peter Ralston. They have another farm in the county. The farm in Wakarusa Township contains 150 acres, or what is known as a fractional quarter. Settled on his present place in 1869. The farm is devoted to both grain and stock, the latter consisting of forty head of cattle and nine horses. Charles Ralston was born in Argylshire, Scotland, December 22, 1829. His parents came to the United States when he was but nine years of age. They located first in Hamilton County, Ohio, and two years later in Winnebago County, Ill. Here the subject of our sketch engaged in farming principally until 1864. He then paid a visit to Washington Territory, Oregon, and California. In 1865, he returned East and settled in Lawrence, Kan. Here he engaged in general occupations until 1869, when he bought the farm on which he resides. He was married in Lawrence September 22, 1869, to Miss Evaline Jackson, a native of Tennessee, and a relative of the famous Stonewall Jackson. They have one child—Charles Earnest, born March 12, 1871. Mr. R. is a member of the Baptist Church.

FITCH REED, farmer, P. O. Lawrence, Section 29, settled on his present place in the spring of 1869. The farm contains sixty acres and may be called a model farm, the buildings being the perfection of adaptability to their various uses and the land in a high state of cultivation. Mr. Reed was born in Ontario County, N. Y., July 28, 1814. His father was a prominent farmer in that county, having 525 acres in his home farm, having two others near by. His grandfather had moved to Ontario County at an early day from Vermont, buying each of his five sons a farm of 200 acres. The subject of our sketch was educated primarily at the district schools, finishing his education at Canandaigua Academy. After he was twenty years of age, he engaged in teaching in the winter and farming in the summer. In 1836, he struck out on foot and alone for the West. After walking about three days he took a stage to Michigan. In 1839, he again went to Michigan, and the 1st of March following settled on 200 acres of timber land near Adrian, which he had previously bought. Here he cleared and improved a farm, for some four years living in a "lean-to" (log shanty). He afterward added to his farm until he had 300 acres all under a high state of cultivation. During these years he built alone some eight miles of fence. His father's family consisted of sixteen children, of which he was the oldest, there being eight boys and eight girls, a large majority of them following Mr. Reed to Michigan and settling there. But one of the sisters has since died. In the fall of 1868, he visited Kansas, and the following spring, after selling his property in Michigan, finally settled on his present home, where he has since resided, engaged principally in loaning money. Mr. Reed was married in Oakland County, Mich., February 20, 1840, to Miss Ann Draper, of that county. They have had five children, of whom two survive—Ellen M. (wife of George Leary, of Douglas County, Kan.), Libbie D. (wife of Prof. A. F. Allen, of Vineland, Douglas County). Mr. Reed, his two daughters and their families, are all members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

V. L. REESE, farmer, Section 23, P. O. Lawrence, settled on the present place in 1861. There are seventy acres in the home farm. He also rents enough to make his total about 120 acres. He deals in both grain and cattle, though the principal crop is wheat. Mr. Reese was born in Johnson County, Mo., August 18, 1837. He was educated in his native county and engaged there in farming until he removed to Kansas in 1861. During the war he was a member of Capt. Dixon's company of the Kansas State Militia. Mr. Reese was married in Douglas County, Kan., April 2, 1863, to Miss Jones, of Douglas County. They have four children—Walter C., Mary L., Carrie E. and Minnie M. He is a member of the District School Board and of Halcyon Lodge, No. 18, I. O. O. F., of Lawrence.

McMILLEN RENICK, farmer and market gardener, Section 24, P. O. Lawrence, settled on the present place in 1879. He has 105 acres in the farm, eighty-five acres being under a high state of cultivation, the balance pasture. He makes a specialty of Irish and sweet potatoes, his crop of 1882, aggregating 2,000 bushels of the former and 500 bushels of the sweet potatoes. He raises the early rose variety and gets from 150 to 200 bushels to the acre. Mr. Renick was born in Ross County, Ohio, January 17, 1851, the family being old residents of the State. His grandfather (Felix Renick) made the first importation of shorthorn cattle into the State of Ohio, purchasing for the Ohio Importing Company. The subject of this sketch was educated in his native county and engaged in farming there until 1879. He then moved to Kansas and settled on the present place. He was married in Ross County, Ohio, February 15, 1872, to Miss Blacker, of that county. They have two children—Lillian and Allen.

FORREST SAVAGE, farmer, Section 3, P. O. Lawrence, pre-empted and settled on his present place as soon as surveyed in 1856. His farm now consists of 465 acres all under cultivation except forty acres of timber. It is devoted to both grain and stock. Mr. Savage was born in Hartford, Vt., September 27, 1827. He was educated in his native town and engaged in farming there until 1854. He then joined in Boston the second party of the Emigrant Aid Society, arriving in Lawrence in September, 1854, his family following the next year. He was identified with the struggles of the early times, being connected with the Free-State organizations. During the late war, he was connected with the Kansas State Militia, during the Price raid, assisting in his defeat. Mr. Savage married in Hanover, N. H., March 8, 1849, Miss Lydia G. Worth, of that town. They have four children—William W., Emma A., Mary A. and Frank J. He is a member of the Congregational Church.

S. M. SHEPHERD, farmer, Section 22, P. O. Lawrence, settled on his present place in 1868. The home farm consists of 400 acres, about 100 in timber, balance under the plow and pasture. The historical "Lone Tree Mound" is located on this farm. Mr. Shepherd devotes his attention to both grain and stock. He has some forty head of beef cattle and twenty head of others. His crop of corn for 1882 consisted of some 4,000 bushels, all of which he feeds. Mr. Shepherd was born in Brown County, Ohio, July 5, 1825. He was educated in his native county, and engaged in farming there until 1856. In April of that year, he settled in Douglas County, Kan., and pre-empted a quarter-section of land, which he sold in 1868. He took an active part in the Wakarusa war, participating in the attack on Forts Saunders and Titus. He was wounded at Fort Titus by the same volley that killed Chambrey. During the war he was connected with the militia and took part in the Big Blue battle in the repulse of Price. In March, 1858, he was elected a member from Douglas County to the Constitutional Convention held at Leavenworth. Mr. Shepherd was married in Bedford County, Va., February 21, 1866, to Miss Fanny E. Sale, of that county. They have four children—Annie Virginia, Chancey Sales, Francis Elizabeth and John Nelson.

HON. E. A. SMITH, proprietor of Norwood Stock Farm, Section 34, P. O. Lawrence. This farm consists of 280 acres of land in a high state of cultivation, with buildings suited to fancy stock and the usual farm purposes. His herd of Jerseys were the first imported west of the Missouri River. Has now some twenty head in all of the Mulberry and other popular butter families, containing some of the finest stock in the United States, and, in the opinion of many good judges, superior to any Jerseys at the Centennial Exhibition. His horses, some thirty to forty head in all, will challenge comparison with any stud in America. They are all from the most fashionable strains of trotting stock, and were principally bred in Kentucky. At the head of his stud, he has Almont Pilot, son of Almont, reputed the sire of more superior trotting horses than any horse of his age. This horse is one of the most perfect types of his great-grandsire Abdallah that can be found in this county; stands sixteen hands high, and a beautiful bay with a star and one white hind foot, and both his sire and dam are by Alexander Abdallah. He has eleven crosses in lineal descent to imported Messenger, and is thus marked as one of the most remarkable in bred horses in America. Almont is the sire of Aldine and Early Rose, the famous horses of W.

H. Vanderbilt. He has a record of 2:16¼ to the pole. Ravenwood is a magnificent black stallion, 15½ hands high; foaled May 16, 1878; sired by Almont Pilot. He is the strongest example of an inbred stallion that can be found, being the result of three crosses to Alexander Abdallah, sire of Goldsmith Maid, record 2:14; two crosses on sire's side to Alexander's Pilot, Jr., sire of the dam of Maud S., record 2:10¾; and one cross to Mambrino Chief, the sire of Lady Thorn, record 2:18. The result of this mingling of the blood of stock, which has shown remarkable speed, has been seen in Maud S., Goldsmith Maid, Clingstone, Mambrino Gift and many others, and there is no reason why it should not be witnessed in a marked degree in the case of Ravenwood. Mr. Smith's stud also embraces some of the finest brood mares that can be found on any stock farm in America, all being selected with the greatest care, purity of blood and fashionable ancestry, as now understood by the best trotting authorities as being the sine qua non. Mr. Smith has spent a large amount of capital, not only to please his fancy in this line of business, but to promote the interest of stock breeders throughout the West. Hon. Ethan A. Smith, Secretary of the Western National Fair Association, was born in Andover, Windsor Co., Vt., May 4, 1833. His father, Sewell Smith, moved to the Territory of Wisconsin in 1837, and finally settled in Walworth County in 1840. He was a member of the convention that framed the State constitution, and afterward a member of the Legislature, and wielded considerable influence in the politics of the State. The subject of our sketch received a primary education in the common schools of Wisconsin, and afterward attended college at Brockport, N. Y., and also Genesee Wesleyan College in the same State, receiving in these institutions a first-class business education. He has a natural aptitude for mercantile pursuits, and before he left college had embarked in trade, having a financial interest in a general store. Upon leaving school, he entered the dry goods house of J. W. Blodgett & Co., Boston, where he remained two years. He then purchased goods of this firm to the amount of $20,000, and commenced on his own account at Whitewater, Wis., in 1853. Here he continued a successful dry goods trade until 1857, when he left Wisconsin and traveled through Missouri, looking for a good business opening, but finding nothing to suit him he moved to Kansas and engaged in the banking business in Lawrence. This he followed until 1861, when he went to Washington, and accepted a position in the financial department of the Indian Bureau, which he held until 1865, when he returned to Lawrence and assisted in organizing the First National Bank, of which he was made cashier. In September of the following year (1866), he took a ten years' lease of the Eldredge House, then one of the first-class hotels of the State. After seven years successful management, he removed to Topeka, and leased the Tefft, at that time the best hotel in the capital, and conducted it for one year. Leaving the hotel in 1874, he started the Norwood Stock Farm. In 1881, he was elected Assistant Secretary of the fair association, and in 1882 was elected Secretary and also Superintendent of the speed department. Mr. Smith is a Knight Templar in the Masonic fraternity. He was elected to the Legislature in 1876, and served two years, and was a leading and active member of the House.

L. J. SPERRY, farmer, and old settler, Section 13, P. O. Lawrence, settled on his present place in 1856, and is now operating his original quarter-section in mixed farming. He was born in Homer, Cortland Co., N. Y., June 5, 1829. His parents moved to Harrisburg, Penn., when he was about seven years old. In 1848, he settled in Fulton County, Ill., where he learned the blacksmithing trade, but soon abandoned it for the more congenial occupation of farming. In the spring of 1856, in company with his father-in-law, he started for Dallas, Texas. In Missouri, they overtook Joel Thomas and his father-in-law, and Dr. Rankin; the party kept together through to Leavenworth, where they arrived June 5, 1856. The subject of our sketch then looked around the country and liked it so well that he abandoned the idea of going to Texas, and finally bought the claim which he afterward pre-empted, and on which he now resides. During the border-ruffian troubles, he took an active part, operating most of the time in Lawrence companies. He participated in the attack on Fort Saunders, Fort Titus and Lecompton, and in all the active operations of the Free-State forces. During the war of the rebellion, he was connected with the Kansas State Militia up to 1864, when he enlisted in Company M, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry and served until the close of the war. He then returned home and has since confined his attention to his farm. Mr. Sperry was married in Fulton County, Ill., August 12, 1850, to Miss Paulina, daughter of James A. Dobbins, Esq. They have four children living—Watson, James, Nellie Dicy (now Mrs. Charles Perry), Lillie. Mr. Sperry has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church from a child. He is also a member of Lawrence Lodge, No. 6, A., F. & A. M.

C. F. STANLEY, farmer, Section 28, P. O. Lawrence. The home farm consists of 320 acres of land under a high state of cultivation. Mr. Stanley intends to engage exclusively in stock, and with that intention, is seeding his farm with tame grasses. He has at present thirteen head of cattle and thirteen head of horses, the head of his herd of cattle being a pedigreed Short-horn registered bull, of the Duke Adrian family. He has also on his place ten acres of bearing orchard, which he is constantly increasing. Mr. Stanley was born in New Britain, Conn., February 18, 1859. He received his preliminary education in the private schools and finished at the military school at Worcester, Mass., from which he graduated in 1878. After devoting some time to travel, looking up a location, he finally settled on his present place in 1879. He was married in Lawrence, Kan., September 2, 1880, to Miss M. Olive, daughter of Prof. E. Miller, of the State University. They have two children—Arthur and Fred

W. D. WELLS, farmer and old settler, Section 36, P. O. Lawrence, settled on his present place in the spring of 1866. The home farm contains eighty acres under a high state of cultivation, grain and stock being the principal productions. W. D. Wells was born in Bridgeport, Conn., January 13, 1835. He was educated in the district schools of his native city and in a select school in Stratford, Conn. He spent the fall and winter of 1853 in Virginia, getting out railroad ties on contract. In September, 1854, he joined in Albany, N. Y., what is known as the "Third Party" of the Emigrant Aid Society, arriving in Lawrence October 7. He was employed by the society that winter. In the spring, he crossed the plains with teams, returning in the fall. In the spring of 1856, he took a claim in Douglas County, which he afterward sold, and the following spring took a claim near Burlington, Coffey County, which he still holds. During 1857-58, he engaged in milling and buffalo hunting. In 1859, he went to Pike's Peak, returning to Lawrence to spend the winter, and again went to Pike's Peak and New Mexico in the spring. After paying a visit East in 1861, he returned and engaged at teaming to Fort Gibson, Fort Scott and Fort Smith, continuing the business until he settled on his farm, with the exception of some eighteen months that he spent in the oil regions of Pennsylvania. During the early days, he took a prominent part in the Free-State side. He was connected with the artillery company, and at the battle of Franklin was so severely wounded as to be unable to take part in the affairs at Fort Saunders and Fort Titus. Mr. Wells has been married twice; his first wife was Miss Virginia Widgeon, of Bridgeport, Conn., to whom he was married in Middletown, Conn., and who died leaving two children—Gertrude L. and Alice W. He was married in Douglas County, Kan., to Miss Emma Wooley, of Johnson County, Kan. They have one child, Charles W.

EDWARD WINSLOW, farmer, Section 25, P. O. Lawrence, pre-empted his present place in 1855. He is now operating 160 acres, about 100 acres being under the plow, the balance in pasture and timber. He devotes his attention to both grain and stock. Mr. Winslow was born in Barnard, Vt., July 20, 1820. He received his schooling in his native county. About 1836, he moved to Ware, Hampshire Co., Mass., and was connected with the factories at this and other points. In 1854, he joined the second party of the Emigrant Aid Society at Worcester, Mass., and came with them to Kansas. When the party arrived at Kansas City, he and Willis went a-foot, their baggage being sent by wagons. He was prominently identified with the Free-State organizations in the early days. He took part in the first election in Lawrence, at great peril, on account of his marked abolition sentiments. He was also connected with John Brown for a time.

LECOMPTON.

Lecompton, formerly the headquarters of the Pro-slavery party in the territory, is located on the Kansas River, in the northwestern part of Douglas County, fifteen miles east of Topeka. Along the river, the country, which is somewhat hilly, is covered with timber; southward lies a beautifully undulating fruit and farm region. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad was built through Lecompton in 1872.

The first settlements made in the vicinity of Lecompton were in 1854, by A. W. & A. G. Glenn, father and son; G. W. Zinn, David Martin, M. S. Winter and William Shirley. In 1855, Moses McCall, Maj. Lyman Evans and others came to this part of the county, and, in 1856, William Leamer, William M. Nace, William Smith, William Christian and Hugh S. Walsh.

The Lecompton Town Company was organized at the Pottawatomie Agency, and consisted of Samuel D. Lecompte, President; John A. Halderman, Secretary; Daniel Woodson, Treasurer; George W. Clark, Chauncey B. Donaldson and William R. Simmons. In the spring of 1855, the town company held its meetings in Westport, Mo., and on May 14, 1855, the officers reported to the company that D. H. Harting had surveyed the town site, consisting of 600 acres, and had laid out the principal streets and blocks. It was the design and expectation to make Lecompton, not only the capital of the territory and future State, but to make it a large city as well. The first house built on the town site was a log one, by W. R. Simmons, in the fall of 1854. The first store was opened by John K. Shepherdson in the spring of 1856; he continued the business but a short time when William Leamer purchased his stock of goods, and has ever since continued the business. James G. Bailey opened a store about the same time.

In 1855, the Territorial Legislature commenced the erection of a capitol building in the east part of the town, on an eminence overlooking the town to the westward, and to the northward, the Kansas River valley, about a mile wide and very picturesque. It was to have been a large stone building, and, had it been completed, would have cost half a million of dollars, provided Congress could have been influenced to continue to appropriate until the building was completed, judging from the manner in which the $50,000 appropriated was expended. This appropriation was exhausted when the basement was completed and the walls up nearly to the height of one story. Work upon it was then discontinued, and the structure as it stood afterward converted into a fort. Ten acres of land had been donated by the town company to the Territory for the capitol grounds.

While this building was in course of erection, the Territorial Government, desiring to remove from the Shawnee Mission to Lecompton, which had become the capital of the Territory, engaged William M. Nace to erect a suitable building in which to hold their sessions, agreeing to pay therefore, as rent, $1,000 in case the building could be occupied by them for forty days. Mr. Nace undertook and fulfilled the contract. The building stood on the site of the present post office. Subsequently, the Legislature assembled in a two-story frame building, which stood across Elmore street east from the Rowena Hotel, and which was known as Rowena Hall. After the Free-State party acquired the ascendancy, the Legislature, though convening at Lecompton as the law required, adjourned to Lawrence each year thereafter, until the Territory became a State. A large frame hotel, named the American Hotel, was built in the spring of 1856; in the fall, the National Hotel was built, and in 1857, the Rowena. This latter hotel was a large three-story stone building, erected by a company, and is the only one of the three now standing.

The first physician to locate in Lecompton was Dr. Aristides Rodrigue, who was also the first Postmaster, the post office having been established in the winter of 1855-56. The first birth in the town was that of Lecompton Marks, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marks; the first marriage was that of Thomas Watson to Miss Barbara Coulter, in the spring of 1855, and about the same time the first death occurred, that of John Martin.

Authority to establish a ferry across the Kansas River at Lecompton was granted by the bogus Legislature, some time during the year 1855, to William K. Simmons, Wesley Garrett and Evan Todhunter, said right being conferred upon them for a period of five years. The same Legislature also incorporated the Lecompton Bridge Company, with sixteen incorporators. No bridge was ever built by them from Lecompton to the opposite shore. The city of Lecompton was also incorporated, and the corporate limits thus uniquely defined: Commencing in the middle of the Kansas River, at a point which shall be designated by the surveyor now engaged in laying out and platting said town site; thence running in such manner as shall be designated by said surveyor throughout the entire limits of the town or city.

The same Legislature also incorporated and permanently established the Kansas Medical College, at Lecompton; and appointed a board of fourteen Trustees, among whom were G. W. Clark, who subsequently murdered Thomas Barber; the notorious Samuel J. Jones, Sheriff of Douglas County, and Daniel Woodson, who was Acting Governor of Kansas Territory during three separate periods. The college was not established.

Lecompton was designated by this Legislature as the county seat of Douglas County.

The second Territorial Legislature met at Lecompton January 12, 1857; the third Territorial Legislature met at Lecompton January 4, 1858, and the fourth January 3, 1859.

Lecompton, at the height of its prosperity, in 1857-58, was quite a flourishing town. It was the seat of government for the Territory, it had a number of large hotels, four church organizations, the United States Court and the land office; it was headquarters for stage lines to Kansas City, Leavenworth and St. Joseph, Mo., and contained a population of 1,000 or upward. Town lots were very high—those in the suburbs sold at $100 each, while those on Elmore, the principal street, sold for from $500 to $1,000 each. Upon the downfall of the slave power in the Territory, the progress of Lecompton was arrested, and a downward tendency was given to all her interests. Dwelling houses were removed, some to Lawrence, some to the country on to farms, others went to decay; fences fell down and sidewalks broke up; weeds and underbrush grew in the streets, the lots and the gardens; work upon church edifices and public buildings was suspended, the remains and ruins of which still stand as ghastly reminders of blasted hopes; the price of town lots fell, until those which had readily brought from $500 to $1,000, could be as readily bought for $25. The population diminished to about 300, what it is to-day. In 1881, a slight change for the better began to be experienced; quite a number of good, substantial frame houses were built and other improvements made. In 1882, the new university building was completed and dedicated, which doubtless in the future will be looked back to as one of the first steps in the second progress of the town, which has every prospect of permanence, being founded on correct principles, and to be sustained by the growth and prosperity of the State.

SCHOOLS, CHURCHES AND THE PRESS.

Lane University.—This institution of learning is under the auspices of the United Brethren Church. In January, 1865, the Rowena Hotel became their property, partly by purchase, partly by donation. The university was named after Gen. James H. Lane. The first Board of Trustees was composed of the following gentlemen: Solomon Weaver, President; Solomon Bower, F. B. Hill, W. A. Cardwell, H. M. Green, H. D. Healy, J. H. Bonebrake, D. K. Lawrence, Ebner M. Thornton, D. T. Mitchell and G. W. Zinn. Solomon Weaver was succeeded as President of the institution in 1866, by David Shuck, and he, in 1869, by N. B. Bartlett, who still retains the Presidency.

The institution has been in operation ever since its establishment, has had an annual attendance of from forty to seventy-five students of both sexes, and has a regular university course of instruction.

The ten acres of Territorial capitol grounds, together with the capitol building, were donated to the university in the year 1865, by the State. The church thereupon erected a two-story and basement building on the south half of the old unfinished capitol, completing it in the spring of 1882, and dedicating it on June 21, 1882, Bishop E. B. Kephart, of Toledo, Iowa, conducting the dedicatory services.

The Presbyterians effected an organization in 1857, and built a church in 1858. Rev. William Wilson, their first minister, was succeeded in 1872, by Rev. Irwin, who remained but a short time. The church was sold in 1881, to be used as a private residence.

The Southern Methodists organized and built a stone church in 1857. A few years afterward, the roof was blown off and one side fell down. The ruins—two ends and one side—still remain standing in the west part of the town.

In 1856, the Catholics organized and commenced the erection of a church and parsonage in the east part of the town. Both were to be of stone, but neither was completed, and the walls still remain as the masons left them, except as to the ravages made by time.

The United Brethren in Christ organized in 1858, with five members. Rev. W. A. Cardwell, who had gone to Big Springs as a missionary, in June, 1855, was the first preacher of this denomination in Lecompton, and though a Free-State man, preached to the bogus Legislature.

The first school taught in Lecompton was by W. B. Barnum, in 1858, in the church built by the Southern Methodists. The present neat frame schoolhouse was built in 1879.

The Lecompton Union was established May 3, 1856, by A. W. Jones and C. A. Faris. It was a strong Pro-slavery paper. The following paragraph appears in this newspaper, in reference to the taking of Lawrence, May 21, 1856, under the following head lines: "Lawrence Taken!—Glorious Triumph of the Law-and-Order over Fanaticism in Kansas!—Full Particulars."

"On Tuesday, the 20th, a large force of the Law-and-Order men having gathered in and around Lecompton, the Marshal ordered the different camps to concentrate about two miles this side of Lawrence, so as to be ready for the execution of his immediate demands upon the people of Lawrence. At this order, we left our sanctum and proceeded to the encampment, equipped for the occasion."

The Kansas New Era was established at Lecompton September 26, 1865, by Solomon Weaver. G. C. Baker was foreman during the first year; J. N. Iliff was foreman from September 25, 1866, until December, 1867. On May 22, 1867, the paper was moved from Lecompton to Medina, Jefferson County, and subsequently to Valley Falls, where it became the Valley Falls New Era.

BIG SPRINGS.

Big Springs is located in the northwestern part of Douglas County, in Lecompton Township, on rolling prairie. The town was so named because of the large ever-flowing springs in the immediate vicinity.

The first settlers here were William Harper and John Chamberlain, who came in the fall of 1854. Other early settlers were Messrs. Ephraim Banning, the two Custerds, Roberts, Wells, Eppuson, Lawson and Cardwell.

In 1855, the post office was established, and John Chamberlain appointed Postmaster. On June 10, 1855, the first sermon was preached by Rev. W. A. Cardwell, a United Brethren minister, in the log house of Ephraim Banning. This denomination built the first church in Big Springs in 1856, the society having been organized in July, 1855. The Catholics and Christians each organized a society in 1859.

A store was opened in 1855, by Webb & Carter.

The first child born here was probably Sarah S. Cardwell, August 4, 1856. The first marriage was that of Mr. Corbert, to Miss Sarah Ann Harper, in 1856, and the first death that of Mrs. Custerd.

The first school was taught by Thomas Clark, in a hall in the town in 1856.

One of the first temperance meetings in the Territory was held at Big Springs in 1856. Three barrels of whisky had been brought in from Missouri, and a saloon opened by Dr. Carter. A protest against selling the whisky was circulated and thirty signatures quickly obtained. This protest seems to have had little effect, as the next night, in order to suppress the traffic, forty men assembled in front of the dram shop and made a demand for the whisky. One barrel was rolled out on to a large pile of shavings, the head of the barrel was broken in, the match applied, and while the scene was illumined by the flames from the shavings and the obnoxious fluid, rousing temperance addresses were made by one speaker after another, mounted upon the empty barrel, the temperance pledge taken by many present, and thus, perhaps, the movement started which culminated in November, 1880, in the prohibition of the traffic in the State.

On the 5th of September, 1855, a meeting of much greater significance was held at this little village, viz., the Big Springs convention of that day. This was the first Free-State convention held in the Territory. It was at this place that the Free-State party was organized. All of the leading Free-State men were present, among them Ex-Gov. Reeder, Gov. Robinson, Gen. J. H. Lane, George W. Smith, J. A. Wakefield, James S. Emery and many others. A large concourse of people came to the convention, feeling that a work of great moment was to be performed that day. Men came in wagons, in carriages, in vehicles of every description, on horseback and on foot, and all in the most solemn and determined earnestness. And each one after the manner of the patriots of the Revolution pledged his life, his property and his sacred honor, if need be, to establish freedom in the State of Kansas. The spirit of the convention is embodied in the following resolution, written by Ex-Gov. Reeder, and reported by James S. Emery:

"That we will endure and submit to these laws (the bogus laws) no longer than the best interests of the Territory require, as the least of two evils, and will resist them to a bloody issue as soon as we ascertain that peaceful remedies shall fail, and forcible resistance shall furnish any reasonable prospect of success; and that in the meantime we recommend to our friends throughout the Territory the organization and discipline of volunteer companies, and the procurement and preparation of arms."

Big Springs now contains two stores, the post office, a blacksmith shop, wagon shop, three churches and about forty inhabitants.

EUDORA.

The city of Eudora is pleasantly located on a gradually ascending slope, stretching back on the south bank of the Kansas or Kaw River, near the junction of the Wakarusa. Situated as it is, seven miles east of Lawrence, twenty-eight miles southwest of Leavenworth, and thirty-three miles west of Kansas City, Mo., on the line of the A., T. & St. Fe Ry., its location as a trading point is excellent, which is proven by its being the second city in the county in point of population and trade. Eudora was settled and is surrounded by that class of citizens, who are known the world over for their thrift and capacity in promoting a substantial growth in a new country—the Germans.

Early in the summer of 1856, an association, composed of prominent Germans, was organized at Chicago, Ill., under the name of the "Neuer Ansiediungs Verein," with the prime object of making a settlement at some point in the great West. Organizing with fifty members, the association rapidly grew until it numbered over 600 stockholders. In March, 1857, a location committee, consisting of H. Heimann, F. Barteldes and C. Schleifer, were appointed to go West and look up a location, preparatory to the location of a town site. After looking through various parts of Missouri and Kansas, the present town site of Eudora was decided upon. A tract of 800 acres was secured from the Shawnee Indians through Pascel Fish, their chief, who was to receive every alternate lot. The town site of 800 acres was laid off, and named "Eudora," in honor of the chief's daughter.

On the return of the committee, it was decided to at once colonize the place. Sixteen members, who represented different trades and professions, were elected by the association and sent out under the leadership of P. Hartig, for that purpose. Following are the names of this hardy band of pioneers: P. Hartig, J. Fischer, J. Schiesgroohl, J. Leoterle, A. Herling, J. Schoartz, G. Buttner, A. Schirrner, M. Marthey, Fred Deirhmann, A. Veroh, C. Epple and wife, G. Kerg, C. Maxilius, Anton Goethbes, H. Baserman. The expenses of the party were paid by the association. Seven other members came out with the party, but paid their own expenses. The party left Chicago April 11, 1857, and arrived at their destination, April 18, 1857, and commenced erecting rude log buildings and making other crude improvements. Thus was formed the first settlement of Eudora.

The first house on the town site was built by Pascel Fish, the Shawnee Indian, long before the advent of the white man as a settler. It was built of hewn logs, with a thatched straw roof, and was used as a hotel, known as the "Fish House." The first building erected by the colony was a one-story log cabin, eighteen by twenty feet, which for awhile was used by all parties. During the summer of 1857, A. Summerfield opened and established the first store.

The first birth that occurred was that of Eudora, a daughter of C. Epple, a member of the town company, born in 1857, soon after the arrival of the colony. The girl received her name in honor of the place. In the summer of 1857 occurred the death of J. Leoterle, a member of the "band of sixteen." One of the first marriages was that of F. Dischmann and Mrs. George Harbolt, who were married in 1857 or 1858.

In May, 1857, the association at Chicago, sent C. Durr to St. Louis, where he purchased, at an expense of $2,200, machinery for a circular saw mill and "corn cracker." The mill arrived at Eudora during the same month, and was put into operation for the company by C. Durr, in the summer of the same year.

In order to secure a perfect title to their land, the association authorized L. W. Pfeif and C. Durr to purchase it from Pascel Fish, which was done at a cost of $110,000, February 17, 1860, and approved on the 7th day of May.

Eudora was incorporated as a city, under Territorial laws, February 8, 1859, and still retains that charter and is governed accordingly. In 1869, for municipal purposes, the city was divided into two wards. Three councilmen were elected from each ward.

The post office of Eudora was established in the summer of 1857, and A. Summerfield appointed as first Postmaster. Mr. Summerfield was succeeded by T. C. Hockett, who, in 1862, was succeeded by F. L. Pilla. Mr. Pilla retained the postmastership until his death, in 1871, when he was succeeded by the present incumbent, Charles Pilla. The office was made a money-order office, July, 1878, and its business is rapidly increasing.

OFFICIAL ROSTER.

At the first regular election, held in March, 1859, the following gentlemen were elected to represent the city government: Mayor, F. Faerber; Councilmen, A. Summerfield, M. Marthey, P. Hartig, Aug. Clesenius, and P. Hoppenan; Justice of the Peace, F. Schowarte; Marshal, F. Soelte; Treasurer, Charles Achning; Clerk (by appointment), F. Schowarte.

The following-named gentlemen have officiated as Mayor, from the first organization of the city to the present time: 1859, F. Faerber; 1860, C. Durr; 1861, C. Durr and J. C. Dunn; 1862, H. Wittler and C. Lothhole; 1863, C. Durr; 1864, C. Thorn; 1864, C. Durr; 1866-67, A. D. H. Kemper; 1868-69, Leo Vitt; 1870-72, Dr. S. American; 1873-74, C. Durr; 1875, J. A. Seybold; 1876, Leo Vitt; 1877-79, J. Hammert; 1880-82, Charles Durr.

SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES.

The first school was taught in 1858, by C. Smith, who was paid by subscription. In 1859, a frame building, known as the "City Hall," was built by the association, and used for school purposes, F. Schowarte being the first teacher. This building was used for school purposes until 1866. A new stone schoolhouse, 24x40 feet, two stories high, was completed at a cost of $5,700. H. C. Speer and Miss C. Whitcomb were the first teachers in the new building. In the autumn of the same year, a building was erected for colored pupils, who were taught by Miss P. Hill. As the city increased in population, the old school building proved inadequate to the demand, and in 1881 a new brick building, 24x40 feet, one story, was completed at a cost of $1,700. The citizens of Eudora have reason to be proud of their educational advantages.

The Church of the Holy Family organized October 1, 1864, with thirty-two members. The church edifice, which was built during the same year, at a cost of $3,000, is a stone structure, 24x40 feet. The first regular pastor was Father A. Mheyer, who had charge of the church from 1865 to 1868. The church was presided over by different pastors until the present pastor, Rev. F. Elias, of Lawrence, took charge. The value of the German Catholic Church property in Eudora is estimated at $7,500. Present membership, seventy families.

The German Methodist Church was organized soon after the war of the great rebellion, with twenty-five members. An old stone dwelling-house was purchased, at a cost of $600, remodeled and used for a place of divine worship until 1881, when a handsome frame edifice, 26x44 feet, was completed at a cost of $2,000. Under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Arsonn, the church retains a membership of fifty souls.

St. Paul's Congregation of the German Evangelical Church was organized in 1869, by Rev. B. C. Hass, with fifteen members. Mr. Hass remained in charge until 1873, when he was succeeded, in 1874, by Rev. C. Toennies, who remained six years. Rev. C. F. Engelbach, the present pastor, took charge in 1882. The present church edifice is a brick structure, 26x40 feet, and was erected in 1871 at a cost of $1,200. Present membership, seventeen.

BALDWIN CITY.

Baldwin City is pleasantly located on rolling prairie fifteen miles south of Lawrence, on the line of the Leavenworth, Lawrence & Galveston Railway. Occupying a position in the midst of a rich agricultural country, which is settled up by a good class of farmers, it has an excellent location as a shipping point. Within its limits is located the Baker University, the oldest institution of learning in the State.

The first settlement made in and near what is now known as Baldwin City, occurred in 1854, when Robert and Richard Pierson, L. F. Green, Jacob Cantrell and a few others took up claims and laid the foundations for a future prosperous neighborhood. They were followed by L. N. Snyder, H. Baricklaw. D. Still, J. A. Abbott, D. F. Green, D. Froy, W. Baricklaw and others in 1855–6.

In June, 1855, a town site of 320 acres, on Sections 34 and 27, Township 14, Range 20, was surveyed and laid off by the Palmyra Town Company, and known as Palmyra, The Town Company was composed of twelve members, as follows: James Blood, President, J. B. Abbott, Capt. Saunders, Amasa Soule, L. F. and D. F. Green, Dr. A. T. Still, D. Fry, Robert Pierson and the three Baricklaw brothers. The first building on the town site was a log-house, erected in 1854, by J, Cantrell, and used as a dwelling. After the town was laid off, W. Westfall erected a building and occupied it as a store. The "Old Barracks," a square, log building twenty by twenty feet, was the next building, and was built by the town company, and used by many, until others were erected. A hotel was also built by the town company and used both for store and hotel purposes, under the name of the Santa Fe House, and was managed by A. F. Powell. Drs. Simmons and Still were among the first disciples of Esculapius, locating in 1855. The marriage of Robert Pierson to a Miss Bithinger in 1855–6, was among the first ceremonies of the kind performed in Palmyra.

In 1858, the town company purchased the section of land adjoining the town on the south, and donated it to the Kansas Educational Association, in consideration of which they agreed to locate an institution of learning on the said section. As the work on the university progressed, buildings were erected on the new town site, which was named Baldwin, in honor of John Baldwin, of Berea, Ohio, and soon, one by one, the business enterprises of Palmyra moved to the new town. A saw and grist mill was erected by John Baldwin, and other enterprises inaugurated which proved the death blow to Palmyra as a town, as it is now known as "but a dream of the past."

The Palmyra post office was established in 1856, N. Blood being appointed as first Postmaster; H. Scott was his successor, when the office was moved to Baldwin. He was succeeded by J. M. Cavaness, who had charge of the office until 1867. Mr. Cavaness was succeeded by H. M. Scott, who remained until 1875, when John Chapman took charge of the office. It was established as a money-order office in 1867, and has since retained that distinction.

(Owing to the destruction of city records, no correct data can be given concerning its official proceedings.)

BAKER UNIVERSITY.

This institution of liberal arts is located at Baldwin City, Kan., and is under the supervision of the Kansas and Nebraska Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

On the 3d day of February, 1858, an organization, known as the Kansas Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was chartered by the Territorial Legislature, with the privilege of locating an institution of learning, to be known as Baker University. After receiving several propositions from different places in the State, the association accepted that made by the town company of Palmyra, by which they received a section of land adjoining the town site of Palmyra. This section of land was surveyed into lots, many of which were sold, the proceeds being used toward erecting a college building. The structure was a three-story stone building, erected at a cost of $3,000. The first floor was used for chapel purposes; the second divided into recitation rooms, and the third was occupied by the Masons.

Baker University was chartered February 12, 1858. In the autumn of the same year, its doors were thrown open to students. The first Faculty was composed of Rev. W. R. Davis, President, assisted by Prof. B. F. Cunningham and Prof. T. A. Parker. As there were but few important institutions of learning in the Territory at this time, the attendance numbered upward of 100.

In 1867, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction in his annual report said: "Baker University is the oldest living, working institution in the State. * * * * From our earliest history as a State, it has done a noble work in sending out successful teachers to the common schools." Notwithstanding all the embarassments that have been met, regular work has been done every term down to the present time.

In 1870, it was decided to complete the new building, which had been in process of erection for several years. This building is a substantial structure of cut stone, located on a gentle elevation overlooking the city. Its dimensions are 60x80 feet, four stories high, including the Mansard story. Though spacious enough for the present, will in a few years be inadequate to the increasing number of students. In connection with the institution is the library and reading room, containing upward of 1,500 volumes, embracing works of general information, and supplied with the current literature of the day. The present financial standing of the institution is good.

The Board of Trustees is composed of the following: Hon. L. W. Breyfogle, W. Conover, Rev. H. W. Chaffee, Rev. H. A. Tucker, Rev. E. W. Van Deventer, L. N. Stacher, Col. J. C. Carpenter, Rev. P. T. Rhodes, H. H. Taylor, Rev. G. S. Dearborn, William Plaskett, Rev. H. W. Reed, D. D., Rev. A. K. Johnson, Rev. W. R. Davis, D. D., Rev. J. T. Hannah, Rev. J. M. Sullivan, H. C. Mechem, Rev. R. Kelley, Rev. J. Denison, D. D., S. O. Goodlander, Rev. J. D. Knox, Rev. S. E. Pendleton, Rev. D. T. Summerville, T. D. Sweet, W. Fairchild, I. T. Goodnow, J. M. Cavaness.

The officers of the board are Rev. H. W. Reed, D. D., President; Rev. P. T. Rhodes, Vice President; H. H. Taylor, Secretary; W. Plaskett, Treasurer; Rev. J. M. Sullivan, Agent.

The present Faculty of the University is as follows:

BLACK JACK.

Black Jack is situated on level prairie, and is surrounded by valuable farms, many of them owned by men who emigrated from Pennsylvania in early times, who are largely engaged in raising stock. It is in the southeastern part of the county, five miles from Prairie City. The creek near which the village stands was named Black Jack by the Mexicans, and the village, when started in 1857, was named after the creek

* Owing to incomplete records, this list was compiled from data given by various members the church.

The first settlers on the town site were the town company themselves, consisting of William Riley, Daniel Fearer, E. D. Pettengill, S. A. Stonebraker, Secretary, and H. N. Brockway, Treasurer. The first birth in the town was that of William H. Riley, in June, 1858, who died while an infant, this being the first death; the first marriage was that of Joseph Kennedy, to Miss Elizabeth Hanern.

The first school was in a log house, taught by Mrs. Elizabeth Craig, in 1858, with Frankie Miller as assistant. The first sermon was preached in January, of this year, in a cabin by Rev. Samuel Keetsinger. A schoolhouse and church were both built in 1859; the former located on the northeast quarter of Section 7, Township 15 and Range 21, and the latter, the Presbyterian Church, in the town. The Presbyterians and United Brethren had, previous to the building of this church, a union fund, but a misunderstanding arising among them, the fund was divided and each built a church.

The post office was established in 1858, and named Black Jack, S. A. Stonebraker being appointed first Postmaster. In January, 1858, H. N. Brockway and S. A. Stonebraker started the first store in the town.

Black Jack is situated on the old Santa Fé road, over which for many years all merchandise destined for New Mexico and California was freighted. It was also the principal emigrant trail, and some years as many as 60,000 teams traveled this road. This immense traffic was in the main discontinued upon the completion of the Kansas Pacific Railroad to Ellsworth.

This town is situated near the historic battle-field of Black Jack. The battle so named occurred June 2, 1856, a full account of which will be found in its proper place in the general history of the county.

During the war of the Rebellion, a fort was erected here for the protection of the town. On May 8, 1863, Dick Yeagar made a raid upon the village, robbed Brockway & Stonebraker's store, and stole the horses belonging to the overland stage route. On the 15th of August following, Bill Anderson made a raid into Kansas, and on his return from Morris County, where he had killed Capt. Baker, thrown his body into the cellar and burned his house down over him, made a call on Black Jack, intercepted the overland mail, stole fourteen horses, eight of them belonging to the mail, and took some $2,000 from the passengers. They also broke into and robbed Brockway & Stonebraker's store, carrying away about $1,800 worth of goods, and setting fire to the store. The fire was extinguished by a determined lady named Mrs. John M. Hays.

VINLAND.

Vinland is situated on level prairie about nine miles southeast from Lawrence. Among the early settlers here in 1854, were W. E. Barnes, George Cutler, F. B. Varnum, Charles W. Dow, Jacob Branson, William White, Franklin N. Coleman, Josiah Hargous and Harrison W. Buckley.

In 1857, a saw mill was erected in this vicinity by N. C. Cradit & Co., on Coal Creek. In the fall of 1858, a small house was built, in which A. W. Smith taught the first school. The building of this house was a private enterprise on the part of the settlers. A public schoolhouse was built in 1867, and located on the northeast corner of Section 10, Township 14, Range 20. In 1868, the post office was established and named Vinland, George Cutler being appointed first Postmaster. On July 1, 1870, Messrs. Russell & Davis opened the first store. In 1874, a cheese factory was established, and in 1878, the Presbyterian Church was built.

Media is situated in the southern part of the county, on the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas Railroad. The first settlement was made here in November, 1878, by E. G. Gilbert and H. W. Willett and family.

The post office was established January 1, 1879, H. W. Willett being first Postmaster, who, in the next November, opened a store, the first in the town.

A Presbyterian Church was erected in 1881, in which Rev. A. V. Stout preached the first sermon, soon after its completion.

I. I. BELL, farmer, Section 1, P. O. Baldwin City, settled on present place in 1858. Is now operating 240 acres in all, having added to his original pre-emption; 220 acres of the farm are under cultivation, being devoted to both grain and stock. The head of herd is a thoroughbred Durham bull, from Andy Wilson's herd. Also has a stallion of trotting ancestry. Capt. Bell was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, January 15, 1819. His parents moved to Westmoreland County, Penn., while he was a boy. After coming of age, he engaged on a farm in Pennsylvania till he moved West. In the spring of 1855, he took boat to St. Louis, and from there to Kansas City. He then made a claim in Douglas County and a few months afterward returned to Pennsylvania for his family. While on the way out, sickness compelled them to disembark at Lexington, Mo. Here he rented a farm. The same fall visited his claim in Kansas and found it "jumped." He then made another claim, and in the spring of 1856 brought out his family and settled. There being a vacant cabin in the vicinity of his claim, he took possession, no objection being made, his neighbors supposing, as he came from Missouri, that he was Pro-slavery. As soon as they found he was a Free State man, they came to the cabin fully armed and compelled the family to vacate. They then built a shelter of rails, using "shakes" for a roof. Shortly after this, finding himself short of provisions, he made a trip to his place in Lafayette County, Mo., after food. Just after his departure, John Brown made an attack on and defeated Pate. This caused a great excitement in Missouri, and he found himself continually subject to strict questioning. Not liking the appearance of things, he determined to get back home as soon as possible. So he loaded his ox team with corn in the ear, not waiting to have it ground; also bought two or three cows, and started back, having for a companion a young man from Illinois, who assisted him in driving the cattle; also added to his load some flour and bacon, which he bought on the road back. Their only arms were two shotguns, for which they had no ammunition. Finally, they reached the State line and camped. The next morning they were stopped by a party of Missourians and, after some talk, placed under arrest and taken to Little Santa Fé, where they were turned over to United States Marshal. They were ordered to drive to Bull Creek, where there was a large camp of Missourians. After having proceeded some distance, they were overtaken by a squad of men and ordered to dump their load on the prairie. A man was then put in the wagon to drive, and they took up their march, being ordered to keep silence on pain of death. Mr. Bell finally determined to make one effort to obtain his release, and made the remark, "If I had some of my Lafayette County neighbors here, I would not submit to this treatment." This attracted their attention and they asked whom he knew there. He referred to several prominent Pro-slavery men of that county. They then withdrew and held a parley; finally told him they had decided to search him and, if they found no papers of importance, to release him. They did so. Before the party left, he asked the leader for a pass; this he furnished, but refused to sign it. Mr. Bell then returned to where he had dumped his provisions and again loaded up and took up his march for Bull Creek. His companion here deserted him, having decided to make for Kansas City. Mr. Bell, knowing he must pass in the immediate vicinity of the Missourians' camp on Bull Creek, determined to follow the original route and go boldly into their camp. He found them expecting him and drawn up in two lines to receive him. He drove between the lines and had almost passed through before he was stopped. He then found that a former neighbor of his in Lafayette County had told them that he was a Northern man. He was finally taken before the commanding officer, the notorious Milt. McGee, and he placed a guard over the wagon and ordered him to return to Kansas City, in spite of his protestations that his family were probably starving. After they had driven some miles, they camped on Cedar Creek. Shortly afterward, heard the report of a gun, followed by two or three others, and made up his mind that some one had been shot. Some mile or two farther on the road, he again met McGee with a party of men. They finally reached Kansas City and after some time, through the intercession of others, persuaded McGee to release him and give him a pass to go home. This he finally did, and Mr. Bell again took up his march for home. On his way back, he met a squad of men at Cedar Creek and was persuaded to camp with them. He found them talking of a body being out on the prairie, it being the same place where he heard the guns the day before. Afterward found it was the body of Jacob Cantrell, of Baldwin City, who had been shot by the Missourians after being taken prisoner. Mr. Bell found his stock at Bull Creek and finally reached home, much to the joy of his family, who had given him up as lost, the neighbors in his absence having provided for their wants. Shortly after this, his position being such an exposed one, he moved his family to Baldwin City, and they afterward returned to Pennsylvania, returning to his claim in 1858. In the early part of the war, he joined Newjohn's Home Guard, remaining with them the most of 1861. R. H. PEARSON, farmer, Section 12, Township 15, Range 20, P. O. Baldwin City, settled on his present place in 1860; is operating 240 acres of land, devoted to grain and stock, also to fruit raising, having an apple orchard of over 600 bearing trees, besides pears and other fruits, to which he has devoted considerable attention. He was born in England April 1, 1828, and removed with his father in 1832 to Allegheny City, Penn., at that time known as the town of Allegheny. There he received his education. After spending five years in the employ of the cotton factories there (Allegheny at that time containing five of them), he learned the trade of coach body-builder, which occupation he followed for about six years. In 1851, he went to California by way of the Isthmus of Panama, and returned by the same route in the spring of 1854. He was engaged out there in mining and other operations. After a short visit to the old home in Allegheny City, he took a boat at Pittsburgh for St. Louis, Mo.; from there by boat to St. Joseph, and from there to Weston, Mo., at which place he, with others, waited for information from Fort Leavenworth of the ratification of the Kansas-Nebraska bill then pending in Congress, his object being to locate on a claim in the then Territory of Kansas. So, in the month of May, 1854, only a few days before the passage by Congress of the act to organize the Territory of Kansas, he, in company with Jenkins (who was afterward shot in an altercation with James H. Lane), Joel K. Goodin, Henry Barricklaw, Sr., and a Mr. Martin, left Westport, Mo., to hunt for claims, etc. After looking through the Territory for several days, Mr. Pearson finally located upon a claim now owned by Messrs. William Priestly and C. B. Beeks, and situated immediately north of Baldwin City. Here he found Kibbe a few days in advance of him. He had moved from Iowa with his family, and had selected a claim and located upon it. Mr. Pearson being a young man and single then, he made his home with Kibbe until the following September. About this time, Kibbe became notorious in Kansas history as an active Free-State man and for the killing of Davis, and curiously enough he incidentally procured from Mr. Pearson the cap for the pistol which fired the fatal shot. After the shooting was done, Kibbe was arrested and tried before Judge Elmore at the Johnson Mission farm near Westport. The Judge holding that the case was not a baleable one, he was sent to Leavenworth to jail. A short time afterward, he was taken out and had a hearing before Judge Lecompte, who also held his court at the Johnson Mission farm. He was released upon bonds to appear before Judge Elmore at Tecumseh, Elisur Hill and Peter Baysinger, of Prairie City, Kan., being his bondsmen. Kibbe appeared at the proper time for trial, but, owing to the absence of the Judge, he was never brought to trial. The bondsmen were released, and two days afterward Kibbe left the country. During these border ruffian trials, Mr. Pearson took an active part in the ranks of the Free-State party. He was connected with Capt. Shore's and Capt. Dexter's company, and took part in the battles of Franklin and Black Jack, the defense of Lawrence, etc. The first claim taken by Mr. Pearson in May, 1854, was found, when the Shawnee Indian Reservation lines were run, to be within the limits of said reservation. So he abandoned it and took another one not far from it, outside of the reservation, which he occupied until the spring of 1860, and is at present owned by Messrs. Beeks and Priestly, as above stated. In the same year, he bought the place he now occupies, which is located on the old Santa Fé road, between Black Jack and Baldwin City, and where he has resided ever since. During the late rebellion he was connected with the Missouri State militia under Col. Nugent, and took part in the pursuits of Quantrill and Gen. Price. Whether under the leadership of John Brown and James H. Lane, or under the leadership of the officers in the late war, he always aimed to do his duty as a soldier. He was married in Palmyra Township, Douglas County, in 1855, to Miss Catharine Baysinger, daughter of Peter Baysinger, one of the pioneers. They have nine children—William F., George, Ann, Sigel, Edward, Fanny, Lizzie, Nettie and Fred. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., having passed all the chairs, and is also a member of the Grange. Kibbe was the first actual settler in Douglas County, and Mr. Pearson claims to be the second. Since Kibbe's departure he has remained the oldest resident settler of the county of Douglas.

BELVOIR.

The first settlement known as Belvoir, was located on the old Sante Fé trail, from Kansas City to Mexico, thirteen miles southwest of Lawrence. Among the first permanent settlers in its vicinity, who came in 1855-56, were H. Heine, James M. Dun, M. Clayton, R. A. Dean, H. McKenzie, A. S. Baldwin, A. E. Northrop, J. Hulze, D. Dack and Mr. Smith, who died in 1856, which was probably the first death in the neighborhood. In what was known as the McKenzie neighborhood, a Catholic church known as St. John's Church, was established in 1856, and supplied for a number of years from the Catholic Cathedral at Lecompton. In the summer of 1865, a stone schoolhouse twenty-four by forty feet was built at a cost of $1,500 Dr. George Hubbard and W. Markle being among the first teachers.

On account of the proximity of Belvoir to Twin Mound, no post office was established until 1868, when L. D. Bailey received the appointment as Postmaster. In 1873, the Carbondale branch of the Union Pacific Railroad having been completed, Belvoir post office was moved two and one-half miles to the railroad, a new schoolhouse was built and other improvements made, which had the effect of bringing the business of the community to that point.

GLOBE—(MARION).

In 1857–58, the Marion Town Company, composed of eleven persons, laid off a town site of 320 acres, and named it "Marion," in honor of Gen. Francis Marion, of Revolutionary fame. The site selected is on the high prairie, sixteen miles southwest from Lawrence, the county seat. The improvements made by the town company were few—a town well was dug, a blacksmith shop erected, a store opened by D. Hubbard, and a few dwelling houses built. Prior to 1860, a post office was established, D. Hubbard and J. Howard being among the list of first Postmasters. The existence of Marion as a town, dates to 1865, when the Union Pacific Railway was built, which stopped the overland traffic on the old Santa Fé trail. A local historian states that as a remembrance of the "old times," the "greasers" filled up the public well with stones, burned the surveyor's stakes, and damaged the place as a town generally.

September 13, 1881, the name of the post office was changed to its present appellation—Globe.

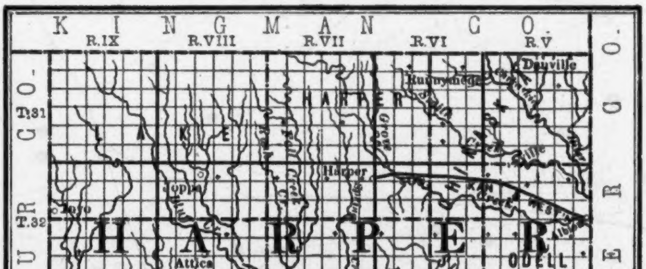
HARPER COUNTY.

HARPER County lies in one of the most beautiful prairie regions of Kansas. South of it stretches the fertile Indian Territory, already containing nearly as many whites as aborigines, from which comes a vast and profitable traffic. From its fertile soil can be produced cereals enough to well-nigh supply the State, or turning south the vast army of stockmen with their cow-boys, an overplus is left for the ranges in the unorganized counties farther west. That so fertile a county should have so long remained undeveloped is due to causes which will be later detailed, and which, while they throw no shadow of disgrace or dishonor on the present inhabitants of the county, are sufficient cause for its late settlement.

The county is bounded on the north by Kingman, east by Sumner, south by the State line and the Indian Territory, west by Barber County. As first blocked out, the county was thirty miles in width up to its present north line, and thirty-three and a half miles in depth. On the north tier of townships, it extended six miles farther west than on the other tiers, the county line on the north being thirty-six miles in length. This upper tier was included in the space covered by Kingman County when it was created, but was never formally set off until 1879, when a bill giving Harper County its present boundaries was passed. The text of this bill reads as follows: "Commencing at the northeast corner of Township 31, Range 5 west, thence west to the northwest corner of Section 31, Range 9 west, south to the State line, east to Range 5 west, thence north to place of beginning." This is an error probably typographical; as the line north from Range 5 west would not strike the place of beginning and that from Range 4 west would do so. The county now measures 27½x30 miles.



POPULATION (FEDERAL CENSUS).

ORGANIZED IN 1873.

	1880.		1880.
Anthony Township, including Anthony City	1,022	Ruella Township	251
Chikaskia Township	587	Silver Creek Township	499
Harper Township	747	Spring Township	131
Lake Township	260	Stohrville Township	606
Total			4,133
Anthony City			345

All the townships in Harper County were organized in 1878 from unorganized territory.

The county has ten per cent of bottom and ninety per cent of upland. Forest occupies but two per cent, the remaining ninety-eight per cent being more or less level prairie. The principal streams are the Chikaskia River and Bluff Creek, both pursuing a southeasterly direction. The timber along these streams is very sparse and hugs the water-course closely.

The mineral resources of the county consist of large deposits of gypsum in the northwest part and some lime and sandstone in the other portions. There have been numerous false alarms of the finding of paying coal seams, but there is as yet no proof of their existence.

EARLY HISTORY.

The organization of the county in 1873 was through a fraud of the worst description, though legal in form, and was by a decision of 1878 decided to be an actual organization. How it came about is briefly as follows: Early in 1873, three men named Boyd, Wiggins and Horner met in conclave at Baxter Springs in Cherokee County. Of these men, Wiggins was a groceryman, and the other two soldiers of fortune—in plain English, men who lived by their wits. Among this precious three, the scheme of organizing some new counties in Southwestern Kansas was hatched out. Wiggins disposed of his store, and with the funds thus secured the adventurers came to Harper County. Here they met George Lutz, who was hunting and trapping, and was readily secured as a guide. After some little looking over the county, the party put up a little house on Bluff Creek, and proceeded to develop their schemes. The Cincinnati directory was put in use and enough names taken therefrom to make a sufficient showing of inhabitants; buffalo heads were set up in a row and the mummery of naming them and voting for them gone through with in due form. For their further proceedings, we must look to the following documents which are at once rich, rare and racy, and explain pretty fully the process of bogus county organization:

The petition which led to the taking of the census of Harper County bears date July 13, 1873, and prays that John Davis be appointed Special Census Taker, and H. H. Weaver, H. P. Fields and Samuel Smith be appointed Special County Commissioners, and Daniel Holson, Special County Clerk. This veracious and interesting document also states that "the city of Bluff City is centrally located in the county, and being the largest and most important business point in the county, with good water and timber, we humbly pray that it may be designated the temporary county seat of said county."

On September 16, 1874, a commission of two members was appointed by the President of the State Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives for the purpose of ascertaining the facts relative to the organization and bonded indebtedness of Comanche, Harper and Barbour Counties. The Commissioners, W. M. Matheny and Thomas S. Jones, made a majority report, and Atty. Gen. A. L. Williams, a minority one. In both are several racy passages which are worth preservation. From the former is taken the following: "As to the county of Harper, the committee finds as follows, to wit: That on the 11th of July, 1873, a petition purporting to be signed by forty citizens, householders and legal electors of the said county of Harper, and sworn to by T. J. Jones, J. D. Mains and J. G. How, three citizens of said county, as provided by law, was made and presented to the Governor, setting forth that there were, at that time, 600 bona fide inhabitants in said county, and asking that said county of Harper be organized under the laws of the State of Kansas." The Governor accordingly appointed special county officers. One, John Davis, was appointed to take the census of the county, and his census of 641 names with the papers relating to the organization of the the county, were filed in the office of the Secretary of State on August 20, 1873. The Governor then, as required by law, declared the county organized. The report goes on to state that gross and inexcusable fraud has been practiced by those persons who were instrumental in procuring the organization of said county * * * and that the names as reported by the Census Taker are forgeries, and obtained by consulting either the memory of some adept in rascality, or by the aid of the Cincinnati directory." The committee proceed to state that in their opinion the county never had forty bona fide inhabitants. Then turning to the indebtedness of the county they state: "That the present bonded indebtedness of the county of Harper is $40,000. That $25,000 of this debt is for court house bonds, and the remaining $15,000 funding debt. That the court house bonds were filed in the Auditor of State's office March 12, 1874, and the funding bonds April 4, 1874." The committee state that no court house does or has existed, and that they do not know what has become of the bonds, "but understand that they have been sold in the St. Louis market and the money used by individuals, and not one cent used for the purposes proposed, or for the benefit of Harper County." No record of the time of voting bonds, or proof that an election had ever been held could be found, nor any county books, or persons claiming to be county officers.

Attorney Gen. Williams, in his minority report, makes use of the following emphatic language: "It is not pretended that Harper County ever had an inhabitant; it is doubtful even if the bond makers of that county ever were in the county." He then gives the bonded debt of the county, and goes on to state: "In addition to this, I recently saw in New York City $3,000 of pretended school bonds of this county, * * * and am satisfied from information gathered in New York that a vast number of bonds purporting to have been issued by school districts of Harper County are outstanding."

It can hardly be a surprise that after the publication of these reports in January, 1875, Harper County should have remained in extremely bad odor for several years prior to its bona fide settlement in 1877, and its reorganization in 1878.

The earliest settlement in Harper County was by M. Devore and family, H. E. Jesseph and family, John Lamar and family, and William Thomas and family, all of whom were settled near the east line of the county in 1876. No further settlement was attempted until the arrival of the party who laid out and built Harper City. The first wedding in the county took place at Harper, on September 22, 1878, and united Dr. J. W. Madra and Miss Mary Glenn. The second wedding was also celebrated in the Glenn House, at Harper, and joined W. S. Forry and Miss Frank Glenn. The first birth was that of a child of Mrs. H. E. Jesseph.

On July 10, 1880, Harper and Chikaskia Townships voted on the question of subscribing to the stock of the S. K. & W. Ry. (now the K. C. L. & S. K.). The vote was strongly in favor of the road, standing 153 to 5 in Harper and 102 to 22 in Chikaskia. The amount voted was $28,000, of which Harper had $16,000 and Chikaskia $12,000. The road was built at once, and is now running to Harper.

On January 31, 1881, Chikaskia Township decided by a vote of 65 to 15 to dispose of its railway stock at 65 cents on the dollar. February 1, 1881, Harper Township decided upon the same course by a vote of 137 to 8.

On May 23, 1882, Anthony and Silver Creek Townships voted upon a proposition to take stock in the St. Louis, Anthony & Salt Plains Railway, and issue township bonds in payment of such subscription. The vote stood 117 to 27 in Anthony, and 51 to 20 in Silver Creek, and authorized the issue of $22,000 in bonds in the former, and $17,000 in bonds in the latter. Thus far, no effort to construct the road has been made.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION, ROSTER AND COUNTY SEAT.

On August 15, 1878, Gov. Anthony appointed the following county officers for Harper County: E. McEnany, Sheriff; B. F. Lee, Surveyor; J. L. Rinehart, Treasurer; H. E. Jesseph, Clerk; R. B. Dawson, Probate Judge; W. R. Kirkpatrick, Attorney; H. C. Fisler, Register of Deeds; R. H. Lockwood, County Superintendent of Public Instruction; T. H. Stevens, F. B. Singer and J. B. Glenn were appointed County Commissioners, but the latter refused to serve, and there was no third Commissioner until the regular election in the fall of 1878. A writ of quo warranto was at once brought to test the validity of this appointment and the action of the Governor sustained.

On August 27, 1878, the county was divided by three parallel lines running east and west into three County Commissioners' Districts. At the same time, eight voting precincts were established as follows: Chikaskia, at the house of J. W. Clehause; Harper, at Harper City; Lake, at Cooper's Ranch; Silver Creek, at Freeman's; Anthony, at Anthony; Ruella, at Perry's; Stohrville, at S. G. Reid's; Spring, at L. Cooper's.

At the first meeting of the County Commissioners, held August 26, 1878, the offices of County Clerk, Treasurer and Register of Deeds were found to be vacant, and Henry E. Jesseph was appointed County Clerk, L. J. Rinehart, Treasurer, and G. W. Francis, Register of Deeds; at the same time the bond of Sheriff William McEnany was approved. All officers of 1878 held over to 1880, the ballots of the 1879 election having been spirited away as is elsewhere related. The roster runs as follows: County Clerks, H. E. Jesseph, 1878–79; E. A. Rice, 1880–81–82. County Attorneys, S. U. Mitchell, 1878–79–80–81; J. Paul Grove, 1882. Treasurers, L. J. Rinehart, 1878–79; R. B. Elliott, 1880. T. O. Moffett, 1881–82. Sheriffs, C. D. Bickford, 1878–79; F. W. Privet, 1880–82; Probate Judges, E. M. Watrous, 1878–79; George W. Vickers, 1880–81; W. S. Cade, 1882. Registers of Deeds, R. J. Simpson, 1878–79; George A. Zacharias, 1880–81–82. Clerks of the District Court, J. W. Clendenin, 1878–79; A. H. Broadstone, 1880–81–82. County Superintendents of Public Instruction, R. H. Lockwood, 1878–79 J. T. Botkin, 1880–81; S. A. Vankirk, 1882. County Surveyors, G. W. Vickers, 1878–79; E. J. Kline, 1880; J. B. Glenn, 1881–82. C. S. Loyd has filled the office of Coroner from the date of organization to the present time. H. C. Fisler was elected as Representative from the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth District, in 1878, and R. B. Carr in 1882.

When the old organization of the county was effected, Bluff City, a bare piece of prairie, several miles northwest of Anthony, was designated as the seat of justice. But one building was ever erected here, and when the new organization was effected in 1878, Bluff City was an almost unknown spot. At the first meeting of the County Commissioners, held August 26, 1878, the following was ordered spread upon the record: "To all whom it may concern: Know ye, that we, the undersigned Commissioners of the county of Harper, State of Kansas, did on the day of our first session as Commissioners of said county and State, at Anthony assembled, this, the 26th day of August, 1878, procured conveyance and made diligent search for the alleged town of Bluff City, and supposed to be the county seat of said county of Harper and State of Kansas; and be it further known that we failed to find any town or village, or anything resembling or pertaining to a town or village, nor do we believe that there is any such place in said county. Therefore, we do hereby designate the town of Anthony, county of Harper aforesaid, as a temporary county seat of said county. T. H. Stevens, Chairman, F. B. Singer, Commissioner."

The first county seat election took place at the time of the general election of November, 1879. At that time, the county had about 800 legal voters and the casting of a total vote of 2,960 may be regarded as slightly suspicious. This view the County Commissioners took of the matter, and instead of canvassing the vote, left the ballots in the poll boxes and sought legal light on the subject. Returning to count the ballots, they found that all had been purloined and the boxes were empty. Notwithstanding, the County Attorney issued a writ to compel the canvass of the vote; but as the Commissioners had gone on a hunting trip to the Indian Territory, the writ remained unserved. The people of Anthony then applied for an alternative writ of mandamus to compel a count, and the citizens of Harper made the same move. Both applications coming in at nearly the same time, that of Harper was granted, and a writ was served on the County Commissioners. An answer covering 110 pages of legal cap was returned by J. A. McPhee, attorney for the Anthony party. This answer alleged fraudulent and illegal voting, and was met by a motion from the Harper party to strike out all clauses charging fraud. This motion was overruled by Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court on the ground that 2,960 votes were too many for 800 men to cast. Somewhat later, R. P. Shepard, Deputy County Attorney, secured an order for a count from the old tally sheets, and the result was found to be in favor of Anthony. There has never been a second county seat election, but R. B. Carr, the present member of the Legislature has introduced a petition for a bill calling for a special county seat election on May 5, 1883. This petition is numerously signed, but no more so than the accompanying remonstrance from the Anthony party.

On January 10, 1881, the city of Anthony held an election to decide upon the question of issuing twelve bonds of $250 each, to run ten years and bear ten per cent interest, the proceeds to be used in the construction of a town hall and jail. The bonds were carried, and at once sold to S. L. Davidson for $2,880. Work was at once begun on the present court house, and May 31 of the same year the city of Anthony donated the city hall to the county in consideration of $1. This donation was accompanied by the stipulation that when the county ceased to use the hall for court house purposes, it should revert to the city. The $3,000 voted by the city will cover but one-half of the cost of this court house, but, while the County Commissioners have no right to build a court house without submitting a proposition to the people, they have the right to repair buildings in use. This they have done so liberally as to make the unfinished building donated to the county a very neat and habitable place.

STATISTICS.

The educational history of the county begins with the year 1878, and the first repor of a County Superintendent of Public Instruction was made for the year ending July 1, 1879. At that time there were twenty-four school districts, a school population of 683 (between five and twenty-one years of age), an enrollment of 214, and an average attendance of 141 scholars. There was only one schoolhouse in the county, and the value of all school property was given at $100. In 1880, there were thirty-seven school districts, a school population of 1,151, an enrollment of 542, and an average attendance of 374. There were two school buildings in the county, and the value of all school property was $2,212. Bonds to the amount of $1,300 had been issued, the total receipts had been $3,057.36, and the total expenditures $4,148.28. The summary for the year ending August 11, 1882, shows forty-one school districts organized, a school population of 1,424, an enrollment of 1,011, an average attendance of 663, a bonded indebtedness of $11,555, and an issue of bonds to the amount of $4,615 during the current year. There were twenty-four frame school buildings in the county, and the value of all school property is set at $14,250. The total receipts of the year were $7,107.47, and the total disbursements $5,960.53. This showing is very creditable to so new a county, and is one that those who hold dear the solid growth of their home may well feel pride in scanning.

The immense growth in the wealth of the county and its taxable property may be seen from the fact that the taxes of 1879 were $138.80; of 1880, $2,721.25; of 1881, $19,834.07, and of 1882, $29,392.96

ANTHONY.

Anthony, the county seat of Harper County, takes its name from Gov. Anthony, who was in office when the town was named. It lies on the edge of a beautiful valley a trifle over two miles from the geographical center of the county, ten miles from the east line of the county and nine south of Harper, the nearest point on the railway.

On April 2, 1878, the town company, which had been formed at Wichita for the purpose of laying out a town at some point near the center of this beautiful county, arrived at Harper City and engaged the services of B. F. Lee, afterward County Surveyor, but then a resident of Harper and a member of the town company. Under his guidance they reached the site of the lone house that had served for "Bluff City, the largest place in the county". Following Spring Creek, they reached a point several miles northwest of the present town and began to mark out the streets by running lines with a plow. Lee and Dr. H. Owens were not satisfied with this location and went on horseback to a point near where Anthony now stands. Returning, they induced the party to move to a camp one mile south of Anthony. Here they found a beautiful town site, but also discovering that they were on a school section (Section 36) they moved one mile north, where, on April 6, 1878, they located the present town.

The town site was made to cover 320 acres, and the town company, officered by O. Jennings, President, St. Clair Gray, Secretary, and B. H. Stedman, Treasurer, proceeded to enter the land for pre-emption as a town site. On June 10, 1878, they proved up through Judge E. Evans, of Sumner County. The first work of the town company was to build a barracks 18x30 for the accommodation of emigrants, and to dig three public wells. About a dozen box houses sprung up at once, and B. F. Lee moved from Harper the house which was already framed for raising at that place. The first store of any size was erected by Cornell & Wright, and filled with general merchandise. F. M. Hester opened the first hardware store, C. A. Miller the first drug store. H. H. Kirkpatrick was the first physician, and his brother, W. R. Kirkpatrick, the first attorney in the town. The new town grew rapidly and has now a population of 500. This is well backed by the rural population of this part of the county, and when, as she soon must, Anthony has a railroad, her growth will be something wonderful.

Early in 1879, a petition for the incorporation of Anthony as a city of the third class was drawn up and presented to the Governor. This petition defines the location of the town and states that it has a bona fide population of 275. The petition was granted and an election set for July 18, 1879, resulted in the choice of Henry Holmes, Mayor; Jackson Brock, Police Judge; Jacob Hummel, G. W. Vickers, George P. Morgan, Simpson Van Winkle and David Hinsey, Councilmen. F. N. Hester was appointed City Clerk. Brock failed to qualify, and on November 10, 1879, R. H. Lockwood was appointed Police Judge, and G. W. Moffett, City Clerk. February 9, 1880, J. Brock was appointed Police Judge. On April 5, 1880, occurred the first regular election, but the vote was said to be fraudulent, and the Council, at their meeting April 7, refused to canvass it. There were then two sets of officers and two Councils, each claiming to be legally elected. On April 29, Acting Mayor Vickers and the Council met in response to a mandamus from the Supreme Court, and proceeded to count the ballots cast on the 5th. Their return showed that Jackson Brock had been elected Mayor and W. S. Cade, Police Judge. These officers then took their seats and George Vickers was appointed City Clerk. A straight fight was in order from this time forward, and July 5 Vickers was removed and A. S. Lindsay appointed City Clerk. The "outs," however, got the best of the contest, and July 22 we find an entry to the effect that H. N. Kirkpatrick was elected Mayor on April 5 and L. S. Webb Police Judge. These officers secured their seats and appointed G. W. Bennett City Clerk. S. Adams became Mayor in 1881, and J. B. Forbes in 1882. J. D. Brown was elected Police Judge in 1881 and re-elected in 1882. G. W. Morgan has been City Clerk for the past two years.

Anthony Post Office was started in the summer of 1878, and G. W. Maffett appointed Postmaster. The office was supplied by a stage, which ran from Wichita to Anthony once a week. Later this service became daily, and when the railway reached Harper a short line was put on from that point and the Wichita line discontinued. Another line runs daily between Anthony and Caldwell. J. M. Lapham followed Maffett and was in turn succeeded by A. S. Lindsay, the present Postmaster. The office was made a money order one in 1880, and the first order purchased August 2 of that year by A. R. Blackburn.

LOCAL MATTERS.

District No. 1, which includes the city of Anthony, was formed in 1879, and the public school system inaugurated on May 5, by the engagement of Misses Clara Sherwood and Sarah Bidwell as teachers. On September 29, C. M. Cade and Miss Mary Patton took charge of the school. G. H. Woodward became Principal on January 1, 1880, and remained until the summer of 1881. The school year of 1881–82 was supplied by Misses Ella S. Kelly and L. Belle Neel, and that of 1882–83 by J. A. Lynn, Miss M. E. Meigs and Mrs. H. Ansey. A school building was completed in July, 1879, at a cost of $1,300. In the summer of 1882, two large wings were added at a cost of $1,000. Funds for both these outlays were secured by the issuance of district bonds, which were sold to the Secretary of State at par.

The first regular church society in Anthony was the Congregational, which organized in 1879, with a membership of nineteen. Its first pastor was Rev. Mr. Hobbs, who was succeeded by Rev. T. D. Childs, the present pastor, in October, 1880. The first services were held in the old court house, whence they were removed to the schoolhouse, and later to the church building. This building was put up in 1880, at a cost of $1,700, and has a seating capacity of 250. The society now numbers sixty. The Union Sabbath School, started in 1878, has always been connected with this church, and in 1882 had an average attendance of 120. A partition was effected January 1, 1883, and the school now numbers about seventy. It is in charge of O. Jennings.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at this point was formed in the fall of 1878, by Rev. W. H. Mock, who gathered nine members. Occasional services were held by W. H. Mock and J. D. Hamilton, the earliest being held at the residence of B. F. Lee. Later the old court house and the school building were put in requisition. In the fall of 1882, work was begun on a church edifice, which was completed in 1883, and dedicated January 28, at a cost of $2,500. J. W. Anderson, the church's first regular pastor, was followed by Revs. J. W. White, J. H. Shidler, J. W. Anderson and J. D. Woods, the present pastor. The society now numbers sixty-five. A Sabbath school, organized January 1, 1883, has an average attendance of sixty-five, and is in charge of Mr. L. G. Peck.

The Christian Church was organized in 1880, with eighteen members. It has been served by Revs. Embry, Collins and Culverson, but is at present without a pastor. Its membership is about twenty-five, but fully forty of this persuasion are in the immediate neighborhood, and would join the church were regular services held. The early services were held in the schoolhouse, but the latter in a building donated to the society by Mrs. Davis.

The Baptist Church was organized June 26, 1881, with seventeen members. Early services were held in the schoolhouse, and later in a rented store room in town, but are now conducted in the court house. The society had occasional services by Revs. J. C. Post and L. D. Robinson, but had no regular pastor until the coming of Rev. J. M. Wood, the present incumbent. The church membership is now seventy-six. A separate Sabbath school was started January 1, 1883, and is in charge of Mr. James Elgin. It has an average attendance of fifty.

The Journal.—The first number of the Anthony Journal appeared on August 22, 1878, as a five-column folio, and bore the name of J. S. Soule as editor and proprietor. On May 22, 1879, the paper passed into the hands of C. W. Greene, who ran it until April 8, 1881, when it was temporarily suspended. Meantime, several changes had been made, the paper enlarging August 15, 1879, to a six-column, and May 7, 1880, to a seven-column folio. In this latter shape it was resurrected October 27, 1881, by Fletcher Meredith. August 31, 1882, it was made a six-column quarto, and March 1, 1883, the office was leased to R. F. Widner for one year. The paper has a circulation of 350 and a good advertising patronage.

The Republican.—The Anthony Republican was started October 19, 1879, by Moffett & Metcalf. Its first appearance was as a six-column folio. This was changed January 8, 1880, to a seven-column, and December 23, 1882, to a six-column quarto. Metcalf's name disappears February 26, 1880, and that of George W. Moffett stands alone until May 27, of the same year when A. S. Lindsay became a partner in the business, which, August 5, of the same year passed into his sole possession. The paper is Republican, is issued Saturdays, and has a circulation of 450.

Anthony Lodge, No. 200, A., F. & A. M., was organized July 24, 1880, with thirteen members, and chartered February 17, 1881. Its first officers were: O. F. Casteen, W. M.; I. J. Rinehart, S. W.; W. P. Olmstead, J. W.; O. F. Northrop, Treas.; H. O. Meigs, Secretary. The lodge now numbers thirty-six members, and has the following officers: F. C. Hull, W. M.; C. A. Miller, S. W.; T. F. Pryor, J. W.; W. P. Olmstead, Treas.; B. F. Smith, Secretary. Meetings are held on each Monday, on or before full moon.

Anthony Lodge, No. 2250, K. of H., was organized June 25, 1880, with eleven members, and the following officers: I. B. Forbes, P. D.; R. J. Simpson, D.; A. R. Blackburn, V. D.; E. M. Watrous, A. D.; G. W. Bennett, Rep.; G. M. Keller, F. R.; E. G. Wright, Treasurer; B. F. Lee, Guide; M. W. Halsey, Chaplain. The lodge is now extinct. Its last officers were: R. J. Simpson, P. D.; H. O. Meigs, D.; G. W. Bennett, V. D.; A. R. Blackburn, A. D.; M. W. Halsey, F. R.; G. M. Keller, Med. Ex.

Benton Post, No. 61, G. A. R., was organized May 28, 1882, with twenty-four members, and the following officers: M. W. Halsey, C.; T. H. Stevens, S. V. C.; O. C. Howe, J. V. C.; G. M. Keller, Surgeon; E. D. Bowen, Quartermaster; A. H. Broadstone, O. D.; C. S. Matteson, O. G.; John F. Goggin, Adjt. The Post now numbers thirty-six, and has the same officers, except W. H. Mock, O. G., and J. A. Du Bois, Adjt. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Saturdays of each month in the court house.

Anthony Council, No. 13, National Union, was organized in the spring of 1882, and the following officers elected: I. B. Forbes, Pres.; Mrs. J. Knapp, V. P.; Mrs. I. B. Forbes, Treas.; F. Meredith, Secretary. The organization has practically disbanded, and no other officers have been elected, nor are any meetings held.

Odd Fellowship.—No lodge of Odd Fellows exists at this place, but a petition has recently been forwarded to the Grand Lodge, and a lodge will probably soon be instituted. This petition is signed by J. S. Cade, G. H. Stevens, F. P. Privet, Jacob Hummel, C. N. Bulger, S. Adams and J. G. Gible.

Banking.—The first and only bank established at Anthony was started in July, 1879, by P. Anderson, who began business in a small frame structure standing in the street. The stone building now in use was at once begun, and pushed to completion at a cost of $2,[illegible]. The bank has a capital of $20,000, but as a private concern makes no statement of resources.

Globe Mills.—These mills were built in 1880–81, and put in operation February 22, of the latter year, by Holdridge, Connelly & Co., the present owners. The mill building is of brown sandstone, 38x40 feet, and has three stories and a basement. It is fitted with five run of buhr-stones, one set of rolls, and an engine of seventy horse-power. The capacity of the mills is 150 barrels of flour per day, and their total cost a trifle over $25,000. A large trade is had with points in the Indian Territory, as well as with surrounding towns.

HARPER.

The city of Harper, the oldest and largest city in the county, takes its name from the county. It is located at the terminus of the K. C., L. & S. K. Railway, ten miles from the eastern line of the county and nine miles north of Anthony, the county seat. The growth of the town has been very rapid and it bids fair to become one of the most prosperous of the many good cities in Southwestern Kansas.

Harper was settled by a party from Iowa, consisting of J. B. Glenn and family, M. H. Glenn and family, R. and A. T. Barton with their families, Joseph Haney, C. H. Snider, M. K. Kittleman, G. M. Goss, C. C. Goss, Thomas Elder, B. L. Fletcher and H. C. Moore. This party came to Hutchinson on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway, and thence, April 2, 1877, struck south to Kingman. Arriving at that point, they engaged County Surveyor Sugars to accompany them to Harper County and locate the town, which should be the future metropolis. Starting at a Government corner-stone two miles southwest of Kingman they ran a line due south into Harper County, where they camped on April 5 on Section 19, Town 32, Range 7 west. The next day, a line was run to the east line of the county with a view of locating the town where the railway from the East, that all expected soon, would be apt to strike. Three surveys were made and the town finally located on April 14. R. and A. T. Barton at once put up box houses on their claims, but both were just outside of the town site. The first building in Harper was begun April 16, by J. B. Glenn, with lumber hauled from Wichita. This house now serves as the kitchen of the Glenn House. C. C. Phelps next put up a blacksmith shop, which was soon followed by the residence of B. L. Fletcher. A town company had been formed while the party were at Hutchinson, and J. B. Glenn was elected President, and C. H. Snider Secretary. April 30, J. J. Merrick came to Harper and soon after procured building material at Wichita and built a house, the front part of which was used as a grocery. S. S. Sisson, who arrived in Harper in May, 1877, was the first attorney in the new county, and C. S. Lloyd, who came in the fall of 1877, was the first physician to practice here. During 1878, the settlement of the town was so rapid as to preclude all specific mention of the settlers who stood not on the order of their coming, but went to work on the boom, which has known no cessation for four years.

Harper was organized as a city of the third class on September 7, 1880, and the first city election was held on the 25th of the same month. This resulted in the choice of Sam. S. Sisson, Mayor; G. W. Appley, Police Judge; R. B. Elliott, H. Martin, R. J. Jones, S. D. Noble and L. G. Hake, Councilmen. G. W. Appley was appointed City Clerk and still holds that position. S. S. Sisson, the first Mayor, was re-elected in 1881 and 1882. J. J. Merrick was elected Police Judge in 1881 and J. G. Washbon in 1882. The present Council consists of A. H. Evans, L. P. Horton, W. H. Kepple, George D. Thompson and M. H. Glenn. I. P. Campbell is City Attorney and H. S. Reed City Treasurer. The population of the city is 779.

On July 1, 1877, Mrs. Josie B. Glenn was appointed Postmistress of Harper, the first post office in the county. The Government although granting a post office, made no provision for mail carriage, and this duty was performed by William Glenn, who made weekly trips to Hutchinson. On July 1, 1878, a weekly mail was put on by the Government and this soon passed through the transitions of semi and tri-weekly to a daily hack from Wellington. This was kept up until September 16, 1880, when the railway arrived and mail service was transferred to the postal clerks. Mrs. Glenn was followed on February 28, 1881, by J. O. Graham, who still holds the office. The post office was moved from the Glenn House to the hardware store of Wilson & Baumstack, thence to the little building next east of its present location, and last to its present location in the store of J. H. Maxfield. The first money order issued by this office was purchased July 7, 1879, by J. B. Glenn. Daily mail routes from this office run to Wellington, Medicine Lodge, Anthony and Kingman, and a semi-weekly to Wichita.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The first school in Harper was a subscription one taught by Harry Barndollar, in a room over Frank Blackstone's store. H. C. Fulton followed with a subscription school taught in the fall and winter of 1878–79. The first public school was taught by Miss Alice Carpenter, who was the first person in the county to receive a teacher's certificate. Miss Carpenter was followed by F. E. Beach in 1879, and J. T. Botkin in 1880, and in 1881, Mrs. C. Graham and Mrs. J. C. Washbon took the positions they have ever since held.

The school building, 24x60 feet, was built in 1880, at a cost of $1,000, but soon proved too small, and in 1881–82–83, outside room was hired. In this, taught Misses C. Woodward and Julia Potter, the former in 1881–82 and the latter in 1882–83. The school had an enrollment of 165 at the last report, which was dated August 1, 1882. A new stone or brick building will be erected in 1883, at a cost of from $5,000 to $10,000.

The first religious exercises in Harper were held by Rev. A. Axline in 1877, and a Presbyterian Church organization was effected. This, however, made little progress until the arrival in 1878, of Rev. J. P. Fulton, the present pastor. A church building was completed in June, 1882, at a cost of $2,000. The society now numbers thirty. A Union Sabbath school started in connection with this society in 1878, now has an average attendance of forty, and is in charge of H. Reed.

The Methodist Church was organized in 1878 with a membership of seven, under the care of Rev. J. W. Anderson. Rev. Messrs. Walsh and Rose held the pulpit in 1880–81, and Mr. Anderson was re-appointed in 1882. The society now numbers forty members. Early services were held in private houses and the schoolhouse, and later ones in the church erected in 1882, at a cost of $3,000 all told. A separate Sabbath school started in May, 1882, has an attendance of seventy, and is in charge of I. P. Campbell.

The Baptist Church was organized in December, 1881, with a membership of fifteen. No pastor has ever been settled here, and no regular services held, and the society has fallen into complete inaction as a body. Rev. Joseph Wrightsman has preached here occasionally, but carries the weight of too many years to supply weekly services.

There is quite a flourishing society at a schoolhouse six miles northeast of town. A society of about forty has been collected, and regular services are held.

The Harper County Times was the pioneer in the journalistic field of Harper, its first issue bearing the date of October 24, 1878. The paper, which took the form of a six column folio, was published by W. O. Graham, who is still a large owner in it. January 1, 1879, the style was changed to Graham Bros., and August 26, 1880, to Graham Bros. & Finch. Finch retired January 1, 1882, and the ownership of the paper has since been unchanged. The form of the paper was changed January 15, 1880, to a six-column quarto. The Times now has a circulation of 550; twice in each year special editions descriptive of the county, and rehearsing its early history, are published. The paper has always advocated the views of the Republican party.

The Harper Sentinel issued its first number August 17, 1882. The name of W. A. Richards was given as editor and proprietor of the new venture, which was of the six-column quarto form, and sported the Republican banner. December 21, 1882, a careful review of the history of the county and town was prepared, and a large special edition of the paper issued. February 10, 1883, the paper was sold to O. O. Leabhart, who issued a second special historical number March 1; the paper now has a circulation of 500 and appears Thursdays.

Harper Lodge, No. 206, A., F. & A. M., was organized September 7, 1881, and instituted under a warrant on the first Monday in March, 1882. Its charter officers were: James Holland, W. M.; T. Blake, S. W.; P. Cloud, J. W.; F. M. Stukey, Secretary; F. B. Letcy, Treasurer; J. Allen, S. D.; M. Henry, J. D. M. Tull, Treasurer. The society now numbers sixty-five and has the following officers: C. S. Finch, N. G.; H. E. Patterson, V. G.; B. D. Bennett, Secretary; A. M. Vanlaningham, Treasurer. Meetings are held on Friday of each week in the hall owned jointly by this and the Masonic fraternity. In addition to this hall, the lodge owns a cemetery on which are improvements which bring the total value of property owned by the society to $1,000. The Grand Instructor of the State is a member of this lodge.

Harper Lodge, No. 81, A. O. U. W., was organized October 26, 1881, with nineteen members and the following officers: S. H. McManigle, P. M. W.; F. A. Parsons, M. W.; James Wilson, Foreman; H. C. Banking.—The first banking house in Harper was that of Woods, Parsons & Co., which started in 1880, and has since done a very prosperous business. As a private bank, it makes no public statement of resources, but the fact that Hon. John G. Woods, of Wellington, is a large owner is sufficient to guarantee the stability of the concern.

Thompson & Walton started the second bank in Harper on July 1, 1882, and have ever since that date done a good and increasing business. This also is a private bank and makes no public statement of resources.

The Arcade Mills.—These mills were completed July 8, 1882, at a cost of $18,000, by H. C. Smeltzer & Co. They have four run of buhr-stones, and a capacity of seventy-five barrels of flour per day. The machinery is driven by an engine of sixty-five horse-power; the building is of stone, 36x60 feet, and has three stories and one-half.

LOCATION AND NATURAL FEATURES.

ATCHISON County is one of the extreme northeastern counties of Kansas, bordering on the Missouri River, being bounded north by Brown and Doniphan counties, west by Jackson and south by Leavenworth. It has an area of 409 square miles or 271,360 acres.

The Delaware River furnishes excellent water power for mills at Muscotah and Arrington. Independence Creek in Shannon and Lancaster townships and Stranger Creek in Mount Pleasant township also possess natural powers, which have been improved to some extent.

Cottonwood, burr oak, walnut, hackberry, elm, maple, sycamore, ash, basswood and hickory skirt these streams, the timber being particularly abundant in Shannon and Walnut townships. Timber is also being successfully and quite extensively cultivated, cottonwood, maple and walnut being specially prolific. The general surface of the county is undulating, with bluffs along the Missouri River. Land is divided as follows: Bottom, 15 per cent; upland, 85; forest, 10; prairie, 90. The bottom lands are from one fourth to two miles in width.

The county is principally watered by the Stranger and Delaware rivers. The Stranger River takes its rise in the central portions of the county, flowing southeast and south toward the Kansas River. From Brown County comes the Delaware River, flowing in a generally southern direction, through the western sections. Independence Creek rises in the northern portion and cuts the northeastern corner of the county and empties into the Missouri. White Clay Creek, which passes through the City of Atchison, assists to water the eastern part. Little Delaware and Coal creeks, branches of the Delaware, also drain the western sections of the county. Good water is obtained at a depth of from twenty to thirty feet.

In the southwestern part of the county are the Arrington Mineral Springs, which are obtaining a reputation for medicinal qualities. The grounds have been improved, and visitors flock to the springs from localities even outside of the county. The water is highly magnetic, and is rich in carbonic acid.

Valuable varieties of building stone are found in different parts of the county and in some localities, quite abundantly; Shannon township, in and around Atchison, is especially favored with good gray limestone. In Grasshopper township, near the bluffs bordering on the Delaware River, limestone abounds. Coal in small quantities has been mined near Muscotah, in this township. Good limestone is found in the southeastern corner of Center, the southern and eastern sections of Mount Pleasant and in Walnut townships. A yellow and blue variety is quarried in Mount Pleasant township, and is obtained in excellent shape for building purposes. On the Delaware River and vicinity, in Kapioma township, lime, sand and flagging stone are found, the latter being easily quarried. In a word, sandstone, white, blue and gray limestone abound throughout the county, especially the latter. Fire clay and mineral paint are believed to exist in quantity, in Lancaster township—also an inexhaustible quantity of pottery clay, in the southwest quarter of section twenty-three, township five, range nineteen. From Grasshopper township has been obtained an excellent quality of hydraulic cement, made by grinding a blue shale which is found under the subsoil.

FIRST SETTLERS OF THE COUNTY.

The first settler of Atchison County was a Frenchman named Pensinau, who in 1839 married a Kickapoo Indian, and located on the banks of the Stranger, near Mount Pleasant. In June, 1854, a colony of immigrants crossed the river at Iatan, Mo., and took claims in the neighborhood of Oak Mills, Walnut township. They were F. P. Goddard, G. B. Goddard, James Douglass, Allen Hanson and George A. Wright. But the actual settlers and the founders of the city and county of Atchison did not enter the territory of Kansas until the next month.

The currents of feeling and the strange actions of men, which stirred the whole county during the pioneer days, eddied and centered around the town of Atchison. As Lawrence was the Free-soil champion of Kansas, so, for the first three years of her life, Atchison moved and had her being in the Pro-slavery principle. From 1854 to 1857 is a clean-cut period in her history. During the latter year the local leaders of the Pro-slavery party saw how the scales of public sentiment tipped in the outer world, and concluded to forget politics, invite the immigration of all respectable classes, and to unite business energy with business energy, for the good of a community with an evident and an eminent future before it. But these three years are so pregnant with examples of the intense pitch of feeling to which political and property prejudices will drive men, the world over, that the period "would point a moral and adorn a tale," even had Atchison been the champion of the Free-soil doctrine and surrendered at last to Pro-slaverydom. Atchison was the gateway through which a powerful champion of the Pro-slavery classes expected to advance his forces and finally take possession of the State of Kansas, in the name of his institution. David R. Atchison, President of the Senate, and acting Vice-President of the United States, was an able and a bold leader, and if that advance was to have been, it would have been accomplished under his guidance. A lawyer by profession, ambitious, in the prime of life, a native of Kentucky, a politician in his native State and in the powerful commonwealth of Missouri for twenty years, a fearless advocate for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, a champion of Popular Sovereignty and the Kansas-Nebraska bill, he looked across the broad Missouri from the rich hemp, corn and grazing lands of Platte County to this unbroken but wealthy territory, and saw at the apex of the great bend of the Missouri River a chance not only to make a bold commercial venture, but to extend over a broad domain the influence of his political party; and who in the West could more reasonably have counted upon a successful issue from such an enterprise! As soon as the Territory was fairly open to settlement, Senator Atchison selected the site of the new town at this point where the Missouri River bends so boldly inland. It was on the direct line of travel to New Mexico, Utah and California, and was already a favorite stopping place for the weary emigrants bound for those far-off regions—a kind of a natural half-way haven between the Far East and the Far West. The outfitting points for this immense traffic, previous to 1854, were at Independence, Weston and Westport, situated in the old "Platte Purchase"—territory bought from the Indians in 1825, in order to complete the natural boundaries of the State of Missouri.

Under the fostering care of slave labor this territory had been made to yield enormous returns to its proprietors, which, combined with its Western trade, had made the country a garden of opulence and a bee-hive of activity. Undoubtedly, it was the aim of the founders of Atchison, that, in all particulars, history should repeat itself. So when the Kansas lands were thrown open to settlers in 1854, Senator Atchison and his friends at once founded a town, and named it in his honor. It was on the Fourth of July, 1854, that Senator Atchison and a few Platte County friends dedicated the new town. From subsequent events, however, it would seem that all of the citizens of Platte County were not agreed upon the advantages of the site which was finally selected.

On the 20th of July, five men left Platte City, Mo., to decide definitely upon a good location. They were Dr. J. H. Stringfellow, Ira Norris, Leonidas Oldham, James B. Martin and Neal Owens. With the exception of Dr. Stringfellow they had all taken claims in Walnut Creek Valley, four miles west of the present City of Atchison. Travelling in a southwesterly direction for a few miles from Platte City, the party reached the river opposite Fort Leavenworth, and crossed to the Kansas side. Continuing along the Missouri's western shore, in the course of the day they reached Walnut Creek and John Alcorn's lonely cabin upon its banks. Mr. Alcorn tried to prevail upon them to select his newly-taken claim as the site of the town of Atchison. But the site-hunters were induced by Dr. Stringfellow to continue their course up the Missouri River, until they reached the present limits of the City of Atchison; or, as he says, in more definite and therefore in more historical terms, until they came to the "south edge of the rim of the basin which circles around from the south line of the city, extending west by gradual incline, to the divide between White Clay and Stranger Creek, then north and east around to the northern limits of the city." From their elevated position they could look down into this beautiful valley gradually sloping from the old military road, five miles west, and, as it approached the Missouri River, narrowing to a width of a few hundred feet. They were not only charmed with the beauty of this vast amphitheatre, but also by its natural advantages of the easy access and its peculiar facilities for obtaining artificial approaches. Here it was that the great river made a bend from the northeast, throwing this point twelve miles west of any locality above, twenty miles west of Leavenworth and thirty-five west of Kansas City. This site was also nearer to the rich agricultural region, just open for settlement, than any other point on the Missouri River. Hurrying down upon the lower land, the explorers found that two men had made claims, a short time previous, George M. Million and Samuel Dickson. Mr. Million owned 160 acres of land, by virtue of squatter sovereignty, his track lying south of what is now known as Atchison street, his ferry landing at the foot of what is now that thoroughfare, and his cabin on the opposite bank of the Missouri River. Mr. Dickson, a resident of Rushville, Mo., had erected a small hut near the spring in South Atchison and deserted it. But there it stood in all its loneliness, the first edifice ever erected upon the present site of the City of Atchison. It was a structure twelve feet square, having one door and one window and a large stone chimney running up the outside. L. Yokum built it. When the searchers after a good town site came down upon the low land they luckily found Mr. Million and his ferry upon the Kansas side of the Missouri River. They at once commenced negotiations and the production by Mr. Million of an old map of the State of Missouri, which he spread out for their inspection, forced the conviction to become unanimous that this point was further west than any other upon the great detour of the river, and that it was the site to be selected. When the party from Platte City thus decided they could look over the present site of the City of Atchison, and see nothing but hills broken by water courses and lowlands stretching to the west, covered with a heavy growth of cottonwood. But the river lay to the east and the natural outlet to the west was so free and easy that they perceived at once, that the town could not but become another gateway through which must pass the great overland travel. As all of the prospectors except Dr. Stringfellow had taken claims in the Valley of Walnut Creek, that gentleman was the only one who could select a tract of land. He therefore made a claim north of Mr. Million's. They then proposed to form a company and lay off the future town of Atchison. Mr. Dickson was willing, but Mr. Million objected, saying that he did not want his claim "spoiled" in that way, but that he would sell it for $1,000! That was a preposterous price, but Platte City had put her shoulder to the task of founding a city where that city ought to be founded, and she did not turn back, Million being induced to part with his interest in the town site for $1,000, payable any time within twelve months. All the preliminaries having therefore been satisfactorily arranged, Messrs. Stringfellow, Owens, Oldham, Morris, Martin, Million and Dickson agreed to form a town company and receive into their organization six additional parties, viz: David R. Atchison, Elisha Green, E. H. Norton, P. T. Abell and B. F. Stringfellow (as one), Burnes brothers (as one) and Stephen Johnston. A week after the town site had been thus selected, the original and the proposed members of the company gathered under a large tree which stood on the river bank about one-half a block south of Atchison street. In the meantime Senator Atchison had made over his interest in the town to his nephew, James Headley, a smart young lawyer, and Jesse Morin had been admitted as an additional member; therefore the name of the founder of the town does not appear in the list of the members of the company. The Burnes brothers mentioned were Lewis, Daniel D., James N. and Calvin F. So that the members of the town company, as they met under the trees on the Missouri bank, numbered eighteen. Here they formally organized by electing Col. Peter T. Abell, President; Dr. J. H. Stringfellow, Secretary; Col. James N. Burnes, Treasurer.

Col. Abell was the personal friend of Senator Atchison, and was exactly the right kind of a man to take up a pet town and coddle it into maturity. He was in many respects a remarkable man, and although he should not have all the praise and credit of starting Atchison along a prosperous commercial path, he ought to have the lion's share. Like General Atchison, he had been all his life a native of Kentucky and Missouri. Like Senator Atchison, he was a lawyer by profession, but, unlike him, his nature did not run to political ambition. By instinct and by a long experience he was an energetic, broad-minded business man, who inspired everyone with confidence and the majority of people with enthusiasm. Although a Southern man to the core of his being he soon saw that the only way to build up a prosperous community was to forget political differences; so that after the hot Pro-slavery times of 1856 had passed, Col. Abell, although possessed of a warm temperament and still holding the most decided convictions, seldom gave expression to any sentiments which could offend an ultra Free-soil citizen. His personal appearance also marked him for a commercial leader. Although not really of a hardy constitution, his outward physique carried the impression of perfect health and an iron frame. He was six feet one inch in height, weighed 190 pounds, had black hair and eyes—and yet notwithstanding his large proportions, was ever as active bodily as he was mentally. At the time he became President of the Atchison Town Company he was a resident of Weston, Mo., and made that place his home for one year after Atchison had been surveyed.

Having thus regularly organized, the company divided the town site into one hundred shares. Each of its members—and it will be borne in mind that Messrs. Abell and B. F. Stringfellow and the Burnes brothers were received as two parties—retained five shares, the balance of thirty being reserved for the common benefit. The services of Henry Kuhn were obtained for surveying the 480 acres of which the town site consisted. This important proceeding was accomplished on the 20th of September, and the next day was fixed for the sale of lots. The event proved to be of more than local interest. It was understood that General Atchison was to make a speech upon the questions of the day, and the gathering had therefore quite a political as well as a business significance. The Senator from Missouri and a crowd of his supporters were present, but there appears to have been some disagreement as to the exact expressions used by their leader in the speech which he delivered before the land sale commenced. One reporter asserts that he said, "people from every quarter should be welcomed into the territory and treated with civility as long as they showed themselves peaceable men." Some one called out: "What shall we do with those who run off with our niggers?" "Hang 'em," cried another voice in the crowd. To this Mr. Atchison prudently replied: "No, I would not hang them, but I would get them out of the territory—get rid of them." A St. Louis man, whose hearing was perhaps affected by his strong Pro-slavery sentiments, reports the Senator as answering his anxious questioners thus: "By —, sirs, hang every abolitionist you find in the territory."

The best account, however, of this important gathering, and one which bears upon its face the marks of having been reported by a careful eye-witness to all the proceedings, was given by a gentleman from Parkville, Mo., and is published entire: "We left Parkville on the 'New Lucy,' on Wednesday afternoon, and had a fine run to Weston, where we laid all night, taking on a goodly number of passengers. Starting on Thursday morning, we arrived at Atchison in the forenoon. Among the company was our distinguished Senator, in honor of whom the new city is named. There was a large assemblage on the ground, with plenty of tables spread for dinner, where the crowd could be accommodated with bacon and bread and a drink at the branch for fifty cents a head. Our party, however, fell in with some friends from the Missouri side, who hospitably placed the contents of their saddle-bags (such as were eatable and drinkable) at our disposal.

"The survey of the town had just been completed the evening before. The stockholders held a meeting to arrange particulars of sale, and afterwards, as had been previously announced, General Atchison mounted an old wagon and made a speech. He commenced by alluding to the beautiful country which was now beginning to be settled—to some of the circumstances under which a territorial government was organized, and in the course of his remarks mentioned how Douglas came to introduce the Nebraska bill, with the repeal clause in it. Senator Atchison said that for himself, he was entirely devoted to the interests of the South, and that he would sacrifice everything, but his hope of heaven, to advance her welfare. He thought the Missouri Compromise ought to be repealed—he had pledged himself, in his public addresses, to vote for no territorial organization that would not virtually annul it; and, with this feeling in his heart, he desired to be chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories when a bill was to be introduced. With this object in view he had a private interview with Mr. Douglas and informed him of what he desired—the introduction of a bill for Nebraska like the one he had promised to vote for; that he wished to be chairman of the Committee on Territories in order to introduce such a measure, and that if he could get that position he would immediately resign as Speaker of the Senate. Judge Douglas requested twenty-four hours in which to consider the matter, and said that if, at the expiration of that time, he could not introduce such a bill as he (Mr. Atchison) proposed, which would at the same time accord with his own sense of right and justice to the South, he would resign as chairman of Territorial Committee in Democratic Caucus, and exert his influence to get him (Atchison) appointed. At the expiration of the given time Senator Douglas signified his intention to report such a bill as had been spoken of. Gen. Atchison next spoke of those who had supported, and those who had opposed the bill in the Senate, and remarked that Northern Democrats came up nobly to the work, and that Northern Whigs had proved recreant to the cause of justice and right. Southern men, he said, acted as they should have done, with, he was sorry to say, two exceptions. (A voice in the crowd here called out, 'Bell and Houston!') Yes, he said, these were the men—one Whig and one Democrat, both aspirants for the Presidency, but poor miserable devils! They had made a false step, and he might say that now he (Atchison) had a fairer chance for that high honor than either of them. The American people loved honesty, and could appreciate the acts of a man who, openly and above board, voted according to the will of his constituents without regard to political favor. Senator Atchison next alluded to the slavery question, as it is now being agitated in our community, and closed by expressing his profound contempt for Abolitionists, and said that if he had his way he would hang every one that dared show his face here. In reference, however, to Northern men settling in the Kansas Territory, he said he knew there were sensible, honest, right feeling men among them who would be as far from stealing a negro as a Southern man would, and his remarks applied only to avowed Abolitionists.

"Such is a glance at some of the points in Senator Atchison's speech. When he concluded the sale commenced, and during the afternoon thirty-four lots were sold at an average of $63 each. Those disposed of were mostly back from the river, and, as far as could be seen, with two or three exceptions, were bought by owners of the town. Prices ranged from $35 to $200—one at each of the extremes. This sale was to be continued next day, when lots more advantageously situated were expected to be offered."

At this meeting, held on the 21st day of September, action was taken upon two matters which always come up first in new communities—the project of building a hotel and the enterprise of establishing a newspaper. Each of the one hundred shares was assessed $25, and the result was the completion, during the succeeding spring of the "National Hotel," corner of Second and Atchison streets. The company agreed to donate $400 to Dr. J. H. Stringfellow and R. S. Kelley to purchase a printing office, and the Squatter Sovereign made its bow to Atchison, in February, 1855. Its proprietors were uncompromising pro-slavery men. The new candidate for public favor received a cordial welcome, especially from some of the Leavenworth papers. The Kansas Herald of February 9, 1855, says: "The Squatter Sovereign published at Atchison, Kansas Territory, by J. H. Stringfellow and R. S. Kelley, made its appearance last Saturday, the first number of which is now before us. It is a large size sheet, very neatly printed and well filled with original and choice selections. It is edited with considerable ability, is Pro-slavery in sentiment and will be a valuable acquisition to the true interests of Kansas. We welcome our neighbors into the journalistic field, and bid them good-speed." But, alas! the professional tilts between the two papers were too lively, within the next three months, to keep alive such brotherly feelings. In May the Herald relieved itself of its venom as follows: "It is with great reluctance we condescend to notice anything from the vituperative pen of the insignificant, puerile, silly blackguard who at present presides over the editorial conduct of the Sovereign. Atchison may be, but Leavenworth is not the place where Peter Pindar's remark that 'every blackguard scoundrel is a king' is recognized by the community. * * * The egotistical dupe of the Sovereign thinks we are a representative of the verdancy of Virginia. Be this as it may, we can retort by saying that the mendacity of Missouri is represented in the person of one R. S. Kelley, of Atchison."

H. Rives Pollard, of Virginia, had charge of the Herald in the absence of Gen. L. J. Eastin, senior editor, and Mr. Kelley who, since April 10, had written "P.M." after his name, managed the Sovereign when Dr. Stringfellow was away. The quarrel between the two young men waxed so hot that in June the fiery Virginian challenged the Missourian to mortal combat. But although made up in the "border-ruffian" stripe, somewhat, Mr. Kelley was quite popular in the community, and refused to risk the possibility of having his career thus terminated. There had been almost a similar revulsion of feeling between Leavenworth and Atchison as marked the intercourse between their editors. Atchison was gaining several advantages over her elder sister. At this time the most important point was the fact that several Salt Lake and overland freighters had been induced in June, to select Atchison as their outfitting point. Livingston, Kinkead & Co., and Hooper & Williams were among the largest of these firms. To the west of the town, about five miles, passed the old military road. In this vicinity the town company sold the Mormon Immigrant agents a section of land which had been purchased from squatters, and there their people founded quite a settlement. It is true the "buildings" were mostly tents, and the "citizens" seldom remained long in their temporary homes. But the activity was so constant and the trade of the emigrants so continuous that Atchison derived as much benefit from the adjacent town as though it had been permanently a portion of her own corporation. The actual outfitting was all done in Atchison, and this fact first established her business career. In a few years much of this immense trade was transferred from the eastern banks of the Missouri to the town of Atchison. The credit of obtaining for Atchison this advantage is particularly due to Samuel Dickson, the Burnes Bros., Stephen Johnston and George T. Challiss, all enterprising merchants. The National Hotel had now been completed, trade was brisk, the Squatter Sovereign was always on hand to blow the horn of the new town whose future was assured, and nothing stood in the way of a complete town and county organization. The Court of Commissioners first met in O. B. Dickerson's house, in September, having been elected by the Territorial Legislature, August 25. The association of the town of Atchison was incorporated on the 30th of August, 1855, by John H. Stringfellow, Peter T. Abell, Samuel R. Dickson, Elijah H. Norton, Lewis Burnes, Ira Norris "and their associates." The corporation was empowered to purchase and hold a tract of land not to exceed 640 acres, the stock of the company to be deemed personal property.

The county was surveyed into townships in 1855, but not into quarters and sections until the fall of that year. The town company at first required every settler to build a house at least sixteen feet square upon his lot. When the survey of 1855 was made many found themselves upon school lands. Among those who had thus erected dwellings in 1854 and 1855 were James T. Darnall, Archibald Elliott, Thomas J. C. Duncan, Andrew W. Pebler, Robert S. Kelley, F. B. Wilson, Henry Cline and William Hassett. Matters remained unsettled as to the title to these school lands for some time thereafter. During 1857 the title to all lands embracing the town site and open to settlement was acquired from the general government, and subsequently the title to the school lands was obtained from the territory. The town company thus derived a clear title to all lands covering the site and conveyed them to the settlers and purchasers according to their respective interests; and the title thus acquired was confirmed by decisions from the court. The survey of North Atchison was made in October, 1857, by J. J. Pratt, Dr. J. H. Stringfellow, proprietor. It consisted of the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of Section 36 town 5 south, range 20 east. South Atchison was platted in May, 1858, Samuel Dickson, proprietor; West Atchison, February, 1858, John Roberts, proprietor. John Roberts' first addition to Atchison was made in 1858; also L. C. Challiss' addition. Other additions to the corporate limits of the city have since been made. A few days previous to the surveying of North Atchison, Lancaster, eleven miles west, was platted, no doubt with the intention of becoming the county seat. Sumner was at this time Atchison's most formidable rival. But the next year the dispute was settled in favor of Atchison, and her court house was completed in 1859. That was the second point obtained by her enterprising people.

"BORDER RUFFIAN" WARFARE.

The few Free-soilers who settled in Atchison previous to 1857 were, with two or three exceptions, very careful not to express their sentiments. Up to the spring of that year there was no political organization in the county opposed to the principle of slavery. Occasionally, however, very early in the conflict, some one, like Rev. Pardee Butler of the Christian church, reckless of bodily consequences, ventured to uphold his Abolitionist opinions, even upon the corner of the streets. In the month of August, 1855, a negro woman "belonging" to Grafton Thomassen, the saw-mill man, was found drowned in the river. A gentleman from Cincinnati, a lawyer by profession and a Free-soiler in politics,—J. W. B. Kelley—is said to have expressed the opinion that if she had been treated better she would not have committed suicide, and to have thrown in some remarks on the subject of slavery, offensive to the Pro-slavery party. Thomassen was not only greatly incensed at the personality of Kelley's remarks, but was sufficiently angered to delude himself with the idea that by satisfying his vengeance he would, at the same time, render the Pro-slavery party a service. He therefore inflicted upon Mr. Kelley a thorough bodily chastisement, and really was sustained in his conduct by a large meeting of Atchison's townsmen. Thomassen was a much larger and more powerful man than Kelley, but "the principle of the thing" was what the people looked at, as will be evident from the resolutions which they passed:

Resolved, That one J. W. B Kelley, hailing from Cincinnati, having upon sundry occasions denounced our institutions, and declared all Pro-slavery men ruffians, we deem it an act of kindness to rid him of such company, and therefore command him to leave the town of Atchison one hour after having been informed of the passage of this resolution, never more to show himself in this vicinity.

Resolved 2d, That in case he fails to obey this reasonable command, we inflict upon him such punishment as the nature of the case and circumstances may require.

Resolved, 3d, That other emissaries of this Abolitionist Society, now in our midst tampering with our slaves, are warned to leave, else they will meet the reward which their nefarious designs so justly merit—hemp.

Resolved, 4th, That we approve and applaud our fellow townsman, Grafton Thomassen, for the castigation administered to said J. W. B. Kelley, whose presence among us is a libel upon our good standing and a disgrace to our community.

Resolved, 5th, That we recommend the good work of purging our town of all resident Abolitionists; and after cleansing our town of such nuisances, shall do the same for the settlers on Walnut and Independence creeks, whose propensities for cattle stealing are well known to many.

Resolved, 6th, That the chairman appoint a committee of three to wait upon said Kelley and acquaint him with the action of this meeting.

Resolved, 7th, That the proceedings of this meeting be published, that the world may know our determination.

It was further agreed that copies of these resolutions be made out and circulated for the signatures of all the townsmen, and all who refused to sign them should be considered and treated as Abolitionists.

Rev. Pardee Butler lived upon his claim, twelve miles west of Atchison. On the 16th of the month, very soon after this large and enthusiastic meeting had been held, he came to town on his way to the East, bound on business—or, as some of his Pro-slavery enemies put it, "arrived in town, with a view of starting for the East, probably for the purpose of getting a fresh supply of Free-soilers from the penitentiaries and pest-holes of the Northern States." Being obliged to wait for a boat until morning, he put up at the National Hotel, and then proceeded to make the rounds of the town, expressing himself freely, as was his wont, upon Free-soil and Abolition doctrines, and being particularly severe upon the action of the meeting which passed the Thomassen-Kelley resolutions. He declared that there were many persons in Atchison who were Free-soilers at heart, but feared to avow their sentiments. He, however (Butler), would express his views wherever he was. Rev. Mr. Butler, in fact, preached the "foulest of Abolition heresies," and was considered a dangerous man, to be let alone. In the course of a conversation which he had at the Post-office with Robert S. Kelley, "P. M." and journalist, Mr. Butler informed the latter that he would some time since have become a regular subscriber to his paper, had he not disliked the spirit of violence which characterized it. Mr. Kelley replied, "I look upon all Free-soilers as rogues, and they ought to be treated as such." Mr. Butler responded, "I am a Free-soiler, and expect to vote for Kansas to be a free State." "I do not expect you will be allowed to vote," was the reply.

The next morning Mr. Kelley called at the hotel with the resolutions which had been adopted by the public meeting, and the signature to which was to be made the test of political faith. Of course Mr. Butler refused to sign the Pro-slavery document, and walked down stairs into the street. A crowd was there awaiting him, which increased as they dragged the Abolitionist victim along towards the river, saying they were going to drown him. A vote was taken upon the mode of punishment which ought to be accorded to him, and, to this day, it is probably known to but few persons that a decided verdict of death by hanging was rendered, and, furthermore, that Mr. Kelley, the teller, by making false returns to the excited mob, saved Mr. Butler's life. Mr. Kelley is now a resident of Montana and volunteered this information, several years ago, while stopping in St. Joe, with the former senior editor of the Squatter Sovereign, Dr. J. H. Stringfellow. And at the time that the Pro-slavery party, through Mr. Kelley, decided to send Mr. Butler down the Missouri River on a raft, Dr. Stringfellow was absent as a member of the Territorial Legislature. The particulars of his treatment are thus given by the victim himself:

"When we arrived at the bank, Mr. Kelley painted my face with black paint, marking upon it the letter 'R.' The company had increased to some thirty or forty persons. Without any trial, witness, judge, counsel or jury, for about two hours I was a sort of target at which were hurled imprecations, curses, arguments, entreaties, accusations and interrogations. They constructed a raft of three cottonwood saw logs, fastened together with inch plank nailed to the logs, upon which they put me and sent me down the Missouri River. The raft was towed out to the middle of the stream with a canoe. Robert S. Kelley held the rope that towed the raft. They gave me neither rudder, oar, nor anything else to manage my raft with. They put up a flag on the raft with the following inscriptions on it: 'Eastern Emigrant Aid Express,' 'The Rev. Pardee Butler again for the underground railroad,' 'The way they are served in Kansas,' 'For Boston,' 'Cargo insured, unavoidable danger of the Missourians and Missouri River excepted,' 'Let future emissaries from the North beware,' 'Our hemp crop is sufficient to reward all such scoundrels.' They threatened to shoot me if I pulled the flag down. I pulled it down, cut the flag off the flag-staff, made a paddle of the flag-staff, and ultimately got ashore about six miles below."

To these particulars it may be added, merely as indicating the lengths to which the party went to humiliate a man for expressing his honest sentiments, that they placed upon the raft his baggage and a loaf of bread, and that Mr. Butler was escorted down the river for some distance by several citizens, who did not fail to beguile the lonely voyageur with much pleasantry. Mr. Butler landed, as he said, about six miles below—upon the future site of Sumner.

On the 30th of the following April (1856), the Rev. Pardee Butler, having terminated safely his voyage on the raft, again ventured to make his appearance in the pro-slavery town of Atchison, where, as he says, "I spoke to no one in town, save two merchants of the place with whom I had business transactions since my first arrival in the Territory. Having remained only a few minutes, I went to my buggy to resume my journey, when I was assaulted by Robert S. Kelley, junior editor of the Squatter Sovereign, and others; was dragged into a grocery, and there surrounded by a company of South Carolinians, who are reported to have been sent out by a Southern Emigrant Aid Society. After exposing me to every sort of indignity they stripped me to the waist, covered my body with tar, and then for want of feathers applied cotton-wool. Having appointed a committee of three to certainly hang me the next time I should come to Atchison, they tossed my clothes into the buggy, put me therein, accompanied me to the suburbs of the town and sent me naked upon the prairie. I adjusted my attire about me as best I could, and hastened to rejoin my wife and two little ones on the banks of Stranger Creek. It was rather a sorrowful meeting after so long a parting."

The Wakarusa war, and the conclusion of peace in December, 1855, the Free-State elections, and the tumult of the next month, the obvious determination of that party to convene their legislature in March, and the consequent bold attitude assumed by the people of Lawrence, kept alive in the pro-slavery town of Atchison the fires of political feelings, and fed its martial ardor. In March, numbers of South Carolina emigrants arrived by steamer, and they were subsequently formed into a company, commanded by Capt. F. G. Palmer; first lieutenant, Robert De Treville. A home company had already been formed—Captain John H. Stringfellow, First Lieutenant Robert S. Kelley, Second Lieutenant A. J. G. Westbrook, Third Lieutenant John H. Blassingame. The rifles for the above company were shipped from Fort Leavenworth. By the last of April these companies were under arms waiting to be led to the assault upon Lawrence. The whole country, breathed upon by the spirit of General Atchison and his friends, was afire with warlike feelings. In accordance with Judge Lecompte's charge of May 5, the grand jury of Douglas County recommended the abatement of The Herald of Freedom and the "Free-State Hotel," at Lawrence, as public nuisances—this paper having stirred up rebellion against the territorial authorities, and the hotel having been armed and equipped as a regular fortress of war. It is not necessary to go into details—they will be found elsewhere—but public meetings were held in Lawrence, and communications were addressed to the United States Marshal, declaring Lawrence to be order-loving and law-abiding, and that her enemies were bent upon her destruction, pretending that they wished only to preserve the peace. Notwithstanding which, preparations for the sortie continued, until by May 21, the besiegers formed quite an army. The South Carolina Company of Atchison was among the first to commence the assault upon Lawrence, and before the city was fairly subjugated "its flag was planted upon the rifle pit of the enemy." So says the Sovereign, whose editors were two of the commanders-in-chief. The paper continues: "It was then carried by its brave bearer and stationed upon the Herald of Freedom printing office, and from thence to the large hotel and fortress of the Yankees, where it proudly waved until the artillery commenced battering down the building. Our company was composed mostly of South Carolinians, under command of Capt. Robert De Treville, late of Charleston, S. C., and we venture the prediction that a braver set of men than are found in its ranks never bore arms." The brave troops from Atchison returned proudly to their home, the commander of all the infantry (500) having been one of their fellow townsmen, Col. J. H. Stringfellow, of the Sovereign. The Squatter Sovereign, without dispute the most bitter Pro-slavery organ in the Territory, kept up an everlasting din about avenging "the shooting down of our men without provocation wherever they met them." Its watchword was "Death to all Yankees and traitors in Kansas!" At a mass meeting held in June, 1856, its editor, Robert S. Kelley, was nominated as "commander-in-chief of the forces in town," but his press of other duties and the thought, no doubt, that he was doing more good for the party as editor than he could as commander, induced him to decline the honor, and it was conferred upon Capt. F. G. Palmer, the South Carolinian. At this meeting Senator Atchison, Col. Abell, Capt. De Treville—the hero of Lawrence—and others less noted made speeches. During the summer, the John Brown war and general excitement caused the citizens of Atchison to form another company—the "Atchison Guards"—commanded by John Robertson, and so prominent in the battle of "Hickory Point." By the first days of September, 1856, Gen. Lane and Col. Harvey were well on their way towards Lecompton, to rescue the Free-State prisoners there confined. Because of Gen. Lane's delay in making his appearance, Col. Harvey thought the movement against the territorial capital had been abandoned, and therefore turned his attention to Capt. F. G. Palmer, the Pro-slavery commander of Atchison, who had given the Free-soilers much trouble at Slough Creek, fifteen miles from Lecompton. The forces were returning from Lecompton to Atchison, and had camped for the night. Capt. Palmer's South Carolina troops undoubtedly were thoroughly wearied, for they were sound asleep and had no pickets out, when Col. Harvey arrived and surrounded the camp. Every one of the twenty-two soldiers was taken prisoner, but Capt. Palmer and Lieut. Morrall, who were sleeping a little apart from the rest, escaped. In the slight scrimmage two of the men were wounded. All were taken before they were fairly awake, and surrendered their guns, side arms, twelve horses, four oxen, two wagons, carpet bags, etc. At daylight they were released and arrived at Atchison the same day, rather low spirited, it must be confessed.

But this was not the end of the triumph of Col. Harvey over the chivalry of Atchison. On September 12, Gov. Geary, the newly-appointed Chief Executive of the Territory, issued his proclamation ordering all captains of militia to disband their forces, seeing that such commands were being used as political and party agents, and claiming, furthermore, that he had sufficient United States troops for any probable emergency. Gen. Lane's forces at once disbanded, but Col. Harvey, thinking that he was justified in punishing Capt. H. A. Lowe's band of Pro-slavery men at Hickory Point, proceeded to that locality, where he arrived on the 13th. Capt. Robertson, of Atchison, had in the meantime started with his company for Lecompton. Stopping at Hickory Point he was prevailed upon by Capt. Lowe to remain there and help defend the place from Col. Harvey's proposed assault, news of which had reached him. The Pro-slavery forces defended themselves pluckily for three hours during the first day's battle, which took place on the 13th They were divided into three parties, entrenched in a blacksmith shop (Capt. Robertson's command) in a hotel and in a store, each about a quarter of a mile apart. The Atchison leader stood the brunt of the affray, as the shop in which he was fortified was an open log building, and he was considered Col. Harvey's most formidable opponent. Sam Dickson, of Capt. Robertson's command, had a narrow escape from death, and C. G. Newall and A. J. G. Westbrook had horses shot from under them. The next day, Sunday, September 14, at 10 a. m., Col. Harvey resumed the attack, having obtained a four-pound cannon. He did such damage that the force of Pro-slavery men capitulated, Mr. Newall being killed. News of this disobeying of orders had already reached Gov. Geary, and on the night of the second day's battle he dispatched a force of dragoons who made Col. Harvey's command prisoners. How they were indicted for the murder of Mr. Newall, tried, sentenced to hard labor, escaped, and were finally pardoned, those that remained, is the story told in its appropriate place.

Returning to strictly home affairs it is found that the reign of terrorism had been so well maintained by the Pro-slavery party that, as stated, up to early in the summer of 1857, there was no organization of Free state men in the county. Several meetings were held in localities outside of Atchison, and a society was formed in the summer of that year at Monrovia, with F. G. Adams as Chairman of the County Committee. The Squatter Sovereign had been turned over to himself, Senator Pomeroy and Robert McBratney, prominent members of the New England Aid Society, which had been rapidly extending its influence for the three years during which it had been in existence. Senator Pomeroy was the avowed agent of the society, and as the Town Association had made so positive a compromise with the Free-state party, for the business good of Atchison, Mr. Adams naturally supposed that the Pro-slavery men would even take a dose of Gen. James H. Lane. He accordingly invited the powerful leader of the Free-soil men to speak in Atchison on October 19, and circulated notices of the meeting. Whereupon it was given out, and generally understood several days before the appointed time, that Jim Lane couldn't and shouldn't speak in that town. In his turn Mr. Adams invited about a dozen of his strong and reliable Free-soil friends from Leavenworth to come up to Atchison and see fair play. They came, revolvers and all, arriving in the morning, and making their headquarters in and about the office of Adams, Swift & Co., real estate. The building stood on the Otis House corner. While there with his friends, Mr. Adams noticed that a crowd had gathered on C (Commercial) street, about two squares west. He, with six others, started for the scene of what appeared to be a disturbance. On their way they met Caleb A. Woodworth, Sr., going down the street, bareheaded, and apparently in trouble. Mr. Adams turned about, as he had passed them, to make inquiries and was immediately assaulted with a heavy blow on the cheek. He did not turn the other, but drew a small pistol from his pocket and turned upon his assailant. The man who had assaulted him was accompanied by a squad of friends, all armed with guns who seemed bent on mischief, if not blood. A friend knocked down Mr. Adams' hand, and cried "Don't shoot yet!" Out came the revolvers, all aimed at the bold musketeers. This determined action was so unexpected, that the Pro slavery men withdrew to consider, and the Free-soil men returned to their headquarters. Mr. Adams then proposed to organize an out-door meeting, the Pro-slavery party having joined the Free-soilers again and every moment getting noisier and more desperate. A. J. W. Westbrook of the Atchison Guards rode around among his followers, with his gun cocked, pretending to have a vast amount of blood in his eye for the chairman of the Free-state County Committee. Now and then to give the "blood-curdling" feature to the proceedings the fellow would order the crowd to "get out of the way," as he did not want to shoot the wrong man. It is doubtful whether Mr. Westbrook really did intend to do much himself, but his conduct had the effect of stirring up his followers, who swore that Jim Lane should never speak. The Free-soil party, reasoning that it was not a sine qua non to the existence of the cause that Jim Lane should speak, decided postpone the meeting. So George Buell, now Gen. Buell, took Mr. Adams by the arm and led him off home. Some of the Free-soil party met Gen. Lane on his way from Doniphan, where he had spoken the day before, and turned him back.

Some stories have been told which breathe too much the unsubstantial perfumes of romance, and therefore they are not woven into the body of the above account. One is that the mob was led by a huge blacksmith, armed with a cleaver or a butcher knife, with which he intended to execute Mr. Adams. Mr. Adams, however, says that he don't remember anything about any such weapon. Another story is that Jim Lane was in Atchison disguised as something or other and remained two or three days, just previous to the advertised meeting. But there is one story which reads like a romance that is true. Mrs. Adams, when she heard that her husband was in danger, with only one pistol in each of two pockets, started down town with the revolver to reinforce him. And the plucky woman did not return without her husband.

In the evening of this day speeches were made by several citizens of various political stripes—Mr. McBratney, Dr. J. H. Stringfellow, and others,—all deprecating the disgraceful proceedings. They were not countenanced by any citizens of standing in the Pro-slavery party. The whole affair was one of those outbreaks of the mob spirit, so common in those days, and has no important place in local history, except as a story of old times, and as being a history of the first attempt to hold a Free-state meeting in Atchison. At this time the brains of the Pro-slavery party had given up the fight, and the fortunate possessors thereof fraternized with any one who would come in to help build up the town, now striving against other new and flourishing places around it. And this spirit has been remarkably preserved up to the present day—the policy of forgetting political differences when the material prosperity of the city is at stake. That policy, conceived by the Pro-slavery party (as a party) in 1857, has borne the good fruits which its citizens are enjoying to-day.

Previous to this "great epoch" for Atchison, as has already been stated, the town had acquired a reputation for business through the overland freight traffic. By the fall of 1856 Atchison had obtained many advantages, among others the secret of a widely-extended system of advertising. The following circular, which was scattered broadcast, November 22, 1856, indicates what they were in a general, as well as in a special sense.

A CIRCULAR.

To the public generally; but particularly to those persons living north of Kansas River, in Kansas Territory: It is well known to many, and should be to all interested, that the town of

is nearer to most persons living north of Kansas River, than any other point on the Missouri River. The country, too, south of Kansas River, above Lecompton, is also as near Atchison, as any other Missouri River town. The roads to Atchison, in every direction are very fine, and always in good repair for wagons and other modes of travel. The country opposite Atchison is not excelled by any section of Missouri, it being portions of Buchanan and Platte counties—in a high state of cultivation, and at a considerable distance from any important town in Missouri, making grain, fruit, provisions, and all kinds of marketing easily procured at fair prices—a matter of no small consideration to settlers in a new country.

The great fresh water lake from which the fish markets of St. Joseph and Weston are supplied, is also within three miles of Atchison.

Atchison is now well supplied with all kinds of goods. Groceries, flour, corn meal, provisions and marketing of all kinds are abundant, and at fair prices.

To show the capability of Atchison to supply the demands of the country, we here enumerate some of the business houses, viz:

Six large dry goods and grocery stores, wholesale and retail; six family groceries and provision stores, wholesale and retail; one large clothing store, one extensive furniture store, with mattresses and bedding of all sorts; one stove, sheet iron, and tinware establishment, where articles in that line are sold at St. Louis prices; several large warehouses sufficient to store all the goods of emigrants and traders across the plains, and to Kansas Territory; one weekly newspaper—the Squatter Sovereign—having the largest circulation of any newspaper in Kansas, with press, type and materials to execute all kinds of job work; two commodious hotels and several boarding-houses, one bakery and confectionary, three blacksmith shops, two wagon makers, and several carpenter shops, one cabinet maker, two boot and shoe maker's shops, one saddle and harness maker's shop, one extensive butchery and meat market, a first rate ferry, at which is kept a magnificent new steam-ferry boat, and excellent horse boat propelled by four horses, a good flat boat, and several skiffs; the saw mills, two propelled by steam, and one by horse power; two brick yards, two lime kilns.

A fine supply of professional gentlemen of all branches constantly on hand, equal to the demand.

A good grist mill is much needed, and would make money for the owner.

A steam saw-mill had been completed in March, 1856, and Grafton Thomassen was operating it.

Luther C. Challiss occupied a store on the levee, 45x100 feet, which he filled with dry goods and groceries, and advertised "such an assortment as was never before offered for sale in the upper country."

Samuel Dickson was a merchant, quite a politician, and also an auctioneer on the north side of C street.

Lewis Burnes, M. P. Rively, and Stephen Johnson carried stocks of "assorted merchandise"; A. J. G. Westbrook was the grocer, and Patrick Laughlin, the tinner of Atchison. He had fled from Doniphan County on account of the murder of Collins, the Free-state man.

William C. Null and Albert G. Smith had been operating a new warehouse for six months, and carried a general stock, corner C and Second streets.

Charles E. Woolfolk and Robert H. Cabell had a large new store and warehouse at the steamboat landing.

George Million operated the "Pioneer Saloon," and John Robertson was in the saddlery and harness business.

Messrs. Jackson & Ireland were builders—shop over Dixon's store.

"Uncle Sam" Clothing Store, corner C and Third streets, Saqui & Co., proprietors.

G. B. Buck sold stoves on C street.

O. B. Dickerson was proprietor of the Atchison House.

Attorneys: N. J. Ireland, A. Gallatin Otis, and Isaac S. Hascall ("Border-Ruffian" law office), James A. Headley, A. E. Mayhew, J. T. Hereford, P. H. Larey and Joseph P. Carr.

Physicians: J. H. Stringfellow and D. McVay.

"Washburn's Great American Colossal Circus"—the first one in Kansas—had given two exhibitions in Atchison, July 31, 1856—three good clowns—full brass and string band—immense pavilion, etc. etc.—what other evidence need be presented that Atchison was pushing its way onward and upward during the summer and fall of 1856! Fully fifty new buildings were erected during the spring and summer of that year.

Within the next two years, notwithstanding Pro-slavery troubles, Atchison grew amazingly for a small place. The transportation business was immense. During the summer of 1858 alone, twenty-four trains consisting of 775 wagons, 1,114 men, 7,963 oxen, 142 horses, 1,286 mules and 3,730,905 pounds of merchandise. One single train—that sent out by Messrs. Hockady, Burr & Co.—consisted of 105 wagons, 225 men, 1,000 oxen, 200 mules, 50 horses and 465,500 pounds of merchandise. This was the largest train that ever left any point for the West, the goods being purchased to supply a chain of station stores which that firm had lately located between Atchison and Salt Lake City. These figures will give to most readers a more definite idea of this overland traffic than any mere description of the "endless chain of wagons," "army of oxen and men," etc., etc., could possibly do. One of the largest contractors in the country—if not the largest—during the latter part of this year was placed in charge of the Kansas Valley Bank, organized some months before with the particular object in view of furnishing a circulating medium to facilitate the moving of this tremendous army of men, mules, oxen, horses and goods. L. C. Challiss also established a private bank. Soon afterwards Gen. Pomeroy built a grist mill, which was located on the levee where the A. & N. shops subsequently stood. Col. Pease was the agent now for six insurance companies. By the early part of 1859 the city boasted eight hardware establishments, nineteen retail groceries, eight wholesale groceries, twelve dry goods stores and twenty-six law firms. The population at this time was about 500.

The town of Sumner, twelve miles below Atchison, which had been platted during the previous summer, had been beaten in the county seat fight, but still struggled for a business pre-eminence. Its site was fair to look upon. It claimed to be exactly in the center of Kansas, north and south, on the Missouri River, nearer to Topeka, Lecompton, Fort Riley, Grasshopper Falls and nearly all Northern Kansas, than any other point on the river, and therefore the best starting point for Salt Lake, Oregon and California. Good hotel accommodations were advertised, and persons intending to examine Northern Kansas were cordially invited "to land at Sumner." The town of Lancaster, eleven miles west, and almost in the geographical center of the county but far from its center of population, had rather thrown away ambition and was sinking into its dotage before it had known any manhood. All of Atchison's rivals were left far behind and with the completion of the railroad in February, 1860, disappeared from history.

Before concluding this account of the early times of Atchison it will be necessary as well as interesting to mention a few of the events which led their kind.

The first business house was established by George T. Challiss, corner of the Levee and Commercial streets, in August, 1854. As the National Hotel had not yet appeared—as, in fact, Dixon's little shanty was as yet the only building in Atchison—Mr. Challiss established a temporary camp and his workmen were accommodated under the elm tree near the water. The building was torn down in 1872.

The first brick building was erected by C. J. Kathrens on Second street. The bricks were manufactured by John Bennett.

The first white child born in Atchison was Henry R., the son of Dr J. H. Stringfellow, August 20, 1855. Lewis C. Carter, the first colored child, was born in Dr. Stringfellow's house, November 6, 1855.

The first marriage occurred October 17, 1855. The ones made happy were J. T. Darnall and Miss E. A. Simmons, sister of Mrs. Dr. Stringfellow.

For a continuation of this list the reader is referred to the multitude of topics which are treated in detail in the succeeding pages.

POLITICAL HISTORY.

Atchison County was named in honor of Gen. David R. Atchison, U. S. Senator from Missouri at the time, and so bitter a Pro-slavery man that he even met the stringent requirements of this bitterest of bitter Pro-slavery communities. The first Board of Commissioners was elected by the Territorial Legislature August 25, 1855, and consisted of William J. Young and James M. Givens. Gov. Woodson dated their commissions from August 31. Hon. James A. Headley was appointed Probate Judge.

On the 17th of September, 1855, the first meeting of the Court of Commissioners was held at the house of O. B. Dickerson, city of Atchison. It seems that William McVay had already been appointed Sheriff, but at this first regular gathering the following officials blossomed forth: Ira Norris, Sen., Clerk and Recorder; Samuel Dickson, Treasurer; Samuel Walters, Assessor. The County was also divided into three townships, Grasshopper township comprising all that section of country lying west of the old Pottawatomie road; Mount Pleasant, all east of the old Pottawatomie road and south of Walnut Creek from its confluence with the Missouri River to the source of the creek, and a parallel line west to the old Pottawatomie road; Shannon township, all that section of country north of Mount Pleasant township. From the subdivision of these townships sprung the eight which now comprise the county—Grasshopper, Mount Pleasant, Shannon, Lancaster, Kapioma, Center, Walnut and Benton. At the session held the next day—September 18th—Eli C. Mason was appointed Sheriff to fill out the unexpired term of William C. McVay, resigned, and Dudley McVay was chosen Coroner. Voting precincts were established in the three townships, preparatory to the election for a delegate to Congress which was to occur on the first Monday of October. In October, 1855, a resolution (previously passed by the Town Company) was adopted by the Court of Commissioners, viz: that block 10 be donated to the county upon which to build a court house of brick at least forty feet square. The sale of the fifty lots donated to aid in its building took place May 1, 1856. In June, 1857, it was ordered that the court house be built 24x18 feet, two stories, the first story of rock inlaid with hewed timbers, the second story of wood, framed and clapboarded. At this time a small frame house on C street was rented of Samuel Dickson.

The Town Company subsequently (in 1858) proposed to donate 14 lots, valued at $6,000, which were to be sold by the county and the proceeds applied to the erection of a court house upon three other lots. The cost of the building was to be $7,000. The town of Sumner, twelve miles to the south, was pushed forward as a claimant to the county seat, and seriously impeded the erection of a court house building. Sumner was settled in 1856 and surveyed in 1858, being the home of such men as A. D. Richardson and John J. Ingalls. The president of the Sumner Town Company, J. P. Wheeler, was a member of the Lower House in 1858, and with the assistance of several other members of the Legislature who were stockholders, a bill was passed to remove the county seat to their "city." It was defeated, however, in the Senate. Not satisfied or discouraged, the Sumner leaders engineered through another bill providing that a plurality vote might change the location of a county seat. This was amended so as to exclude Douglas, Leavenworth, Atchison and Doniphan counties, and passed in this form. But to the consternation of the Atchisonites, when the laws of the session were published the amendment did not show itself. Great indignation was expressed, and further tumult was aroused when a few days before the voting was to take place to settle the county seat question (being the first Monday in October, 1858,) a circular was generally distributed throughout the county, endeavoring to show to the voters that the proposition of the Town Company was a money-making, selfish scheme.

The following is the official vote of all the precincts in the county for representatives and on the location of the county seat: Messrs. Dickerson, Wider and Irvin, Independent Free-state candidates, were elected by from thirty-two to 100 majority. Atchison City received 252 majority over all competitors for the county seat. She received 656 votes; Sumner, 213; Monrovia, 116; Mount Pleasant, 66; Lancaster, 9. At this election (held on October 4, 1858,) 549 votes were cast in the city alone, from which fact the estimated population was 2,745. The total vote cast in the county was 1,060.

Thus the people of Atchison County permanently selected this city as the seat of justice, the court house now standing, a plain two-story brick structure, being completed during the next year—1859. The county jail, adjoining it, was built about the same time.

The present county officers are as follows: County Treasurer, James A. Loper; Sheriff, William Blair; Clerk, Charles H. Krebs; Register of Deeds, T. J. Rigg; Surveyor, Alfred Meier; Coroner, A. D. McConaughy; Clerk of the District Court, W. W. Church; Probate Judge, J. J. Locker; Attorney, C. K. Wells: Superintendent of Public Instruction, W. H. Tucker.

The present limits of the County of Atchison are described as follows: Commencing at the southeast corner of Doniphan County, thence with the south boundary of Doniphan County to the township line between townships 4 and 5, south; thence west with said township line between townships 4 and 5, south, to the range line between ranges 16 and 17, east; thence south with said range line to the southwest corner of section 19, of township 7, south, of range 17, east; thence east with the section lines to the intersection with the western boundary line of the State of Missouri to the place of beginning.

The County Poor Farm consists of 140 acres of land, four miles due south of Atchison, with buildings, improvements, etc. The tract was purchased of James F. Butcher, one of the contractors of the Atchison & St. Joe R. R. Co., in January, 1869. The main building was erected soon after, and the property is now valued at about $8,000. Although the number of inmates at any one time is small, the farm is self-supporting and indulges in stock-raising as well as agricultural pursuits. The present superintendent of the farm is M. M. Bean, and he cares for about fifteen people.

STATISTICS.

From figures prepared in August, 1882, by W. H. Tucker, Superintendent of Public Instruction, it is learned that there are 71 districts organized in the county; that the population of school age amounts to 8,392, the number of pupils enrolled being 5,656, and the average daily attendance 3,693. There are 120 teachers employed, the average salary of males per month being $40, and of females $33. During the year the county has issued $3,000 of school-house bonds; its present bonded indebtedness being $68,680. It costs $60,000 per annum to maintain the district schools of Atchison County, the receipts from all sources being over $70,000.

The returns of the township assessors for the year 1882 indicate that 209,647 acres of the county are in farms, valued at $4,554,190. The agricultural lands in Lancaster township are valued at $774,300; Benton (the new township formed in 1881), $686,050; Mount Pleasant, $638,900; Center, $626,400; Grasshopper, $568,030; Shannon, $553,700; Kapioma, $454,040; Walnut, $252,770. There are 5,977 horses in the county; 19 961 cattle, and 21,203 swine. The value of animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter during the year was $434,572. In the county are 100,097 apple trees in bearing, 56,870 peach, and 19,040 cherry. Sown and planted during the spring of 1882 were 62,514 acres of corn, 12,252 of oats, and 11,352 of flax.

ATCHISON COUNTY IN THE WAR.

It is undoubtedly true that no county in the entire country—bearing in mind surrounding circumstances, population, etc., has so patriotic a record as Atchison County. That this assertion is sustained by the facts the following figures will prove: One hundred and thirty-one Atchison County men enlisted in the First Kansas Regiment; 25 in the Seventh; 85 in the Eighth; 86 in the Tenth; 260 in the Thirteenth; 100 in the First Kansas (colored); 25 in the First Nebraska; 105 in the Thirteenth Missouri; 30 in the Fifteenth Kansas; 40 in the Ninth, and 50 in the Sixteenth—showing a total of 992 men. Add to this scattering men in other regiments in adjoining States, and 1,000 soldiers may fairly be placed to the credit of Atchison County. The national census returns of 1860 place the population of Atchison County at 7,747, and the voting population at 1,133, the number of voters but a little greater than the number of volunteers, and nearly one person in seven under the old flag battling for the preservation of the Union! It may be borne in mind, too, that Atchison, from its location, was liable to incursions from Confederate troops and jayhawkers, necessitating the organization at different periods of the war of companies of home guards, not included in the foregoing statement. It will thus be seen that Atchison County furnished a soldier to every man of her voting population. What county in the entire Union can show a fairer record?

At the commencement of the Rebellion there were three militia companies in Atchison, "A," "C," and a third known as the "All Hazard Company." The origin of this company's name is thus explained: At the city election in the spring of 1861, the issue was Union or Disunion. The Republicans and Union Democrats united in supporting G. H. Fairchild for Mayor, and he was elected. In a speech made during election week, Mr. Fairchild (Union Democrat), avowed himself an unwavering friend of the Union, and for the maintenance of the Constitution and laws "at all hazards." The name was adopted by one of the militia companies, and "At All Hazards Co." enlisted for the war with Mayor Fairchild as its first captain, and became Company "K" of the First Kansas. This company participated in the battle of Wilson's Creek, the first action in which a Kansas regiment was under fire, fought August 10, 1861. It was under the immediate command of Gen. Lyon, and behaved with distinguished gallantry.*

During the summer and autumn of 1861 there were threats of invasion from Rebel organizations in Buchanan and Platte counties, Missouri, and to meet the invaders should the attempt to capture Atchison be made, a Home Guard company was organized September 1, 1861, with the following officers: Charles Holbert, Captain; J. G. Bechtold, First Lieutenant; Clem. Rohr, Second Lieutenant; W. Becker, Third Lieutenant; John Schlupp, Ensign. Total number of officers and men, seventy-three. Not long after this the danger of invasion became still more imminent, and 650 men, in sixteen companies, were thrown into Atchison to protect the town from destruction. The Atchison County companies were commanded by Capts. Holbert, May, Hays, Batsett, Evans and VanWinkle. But for this promptness and energy in meeting the threatened danger Atchison might have shared the terrible fate that befell Lawrence the following year. On the 15th of September of the same year, a company for home guard service was mustered in at Fort Leavenworth, and officered as follows: J. M. Graham, captain; J. G. Bechtold, first lieutenant; R. Briagland, second lieutenant. They were Company "E," of the First Kansas Regiment Home Guards, numbered fifty men, and were ordered to Atchison for duty, where they were stationed until there was no longer danger of invasion. The company was then attached to the Eighth Kansas.

During the early part of 1862 the frequent victories of the Union forces in the southwest caused many Rebel sympathizers to flock to Atchison for safety, and here they not only gave expression to their Secession sentiments, but many of them were ready to give more practical aid to their Southern brethren. To counteract this growing evil, Mayor Fairchild issued a proclamation on the 24th of February, 1862, warning them that so long as they held views they had so frequently avowed, that they could not and must not expect to be protected in any manner by the city laws. "It would be absurd to suppose," continued the proclamation, "a patriotic community could treat otherwise than as enemies, persons who are in sympathy with base men who have brought upon our country untold misery, almost unlimited taxation, and almost inconceivable pecuniary suffering. As a representative of a loyal people, I will not encourage men to return among us who have circulated reports that they were refugees from the loyal States, on account of their secession doctrines, nor will I give protection to men who unmistakably at heart belong to the Confederacy."

To hold up the hands of the city's chosen leader a mass meeting of the Union men of Atchison County was held at Price's Hall, Saturday, March 15, 1862, at which every part of the county was fully represented. Dr. Batsell presided, and George G. Martin acted as secretary. Stirring addresses were delivered by Col. Ege, Doniphan County, Thomas Murphy, Rev. W. S. Wenz, Lieut. Price, E. Chesebrough, Mayor Fairchild, W. S. Lemon, Lieut. R. A. Barker, Capt. Caleb May, Dr. J. B. Shearer, J. Edgar and Dr. Eagles, and resolutions, denouncing the Southern sympathizers, and notifying them not to return, were unanimously adopted:

In the dark days of 1862 the home loyalists promptly responded to a call for the "sinews of war" to aid Atchison County troops. Within a few days, commencing August 20, 1862, the sum of nearly $4,000 was subscribed—$745 coming from Mount Pleasant township. The leading donors were: Theodore Bartholomew, E. Chesebrough, G. W. Fairchild, J. W. Russell, W. L. Challiss, Dr. William Irwin, G. W. Howe, W. B. Hughes, W. Hetherington, Otis & Glick, H. Diesbach, J. E. Wagner, McCubben & Derge, B. S. Davenport, McCausland & Brown, Thomas Murphy, W. A. Cochran, S. C. Pomeroy, Stebbins & Co., E. Butcher, and Wm. C. Smith, each subscribing the sum of $50 or over. There were also munificent benefactions at a later day, notably when Quantrill invaded Lawrence. Within a few days after that terrible affair the sum of $4,000 was subscribed to assist the people of the stricken city.

During the year 1863 so annoying became the depredations of lawless bands of jayhawkers that means were devised for self-protection, and the most effective seemed to be a vigilance committee under the control of brave, discreet loyalists. Accordingly a county society was formed in June of that year, and a public declaration issued; describing the situation and calling on all "good, peaceful and loyal citizens" to band themselves together for the protection of their lives, homes and property.

Persons who joined the vigilance committee were required to take an oath to support the government of the United States and of Kansas, to do all in their power to put down the rebellion, and also to keep secret all the proceedings of the committee.

The committee became a very effective auxiliary to the civil authorities in bringing to punishment the violators of law, and also in intimidating lawless bands of jayhawkers and other thieves.

On Sunday night, January 19, 1862, a squad of soldiers who were stationed in Atchison the day previous, interrupted a number of jayhawkers who were returning from an expedition into Missouri, captured five of Cleveland's men, two escaping, and retook several horses and contrabands taken in Missouri, and took men and property down to Weston. The Atchison City Marshal was engaged in the arrest of these jayhawkers, and on Monday morning the notorious Cleveland rode into town, held a pistol at the head of the Marshal, who was in the street unarmed, and commanded him to march before him out of town, threatening that if any of those men were injured, the marshal's life should pay the penalty. Wisely considering that "discretion was the better part of valor," the official marched off, followed by Cleveland on horseback, but an outcry was soon raised by a few who witnessed the performance, and a hasty rush was made for arms and a pursuit immediately commenced; seeing this, Cleveland immediately put spurs to his horse and rode off, after striking the marshal on the head with a pistol. On May 11, 1882, Cleveland, whose acts of daring villainy had become notorious, was pursued and killed by a squad of United States troops at Ossawotamie.

While the loyalists of Atchison County responded with alacrity to every call for men to resist the shock of the rebel cohorts, they were no less prompt in caring for the families of those who went forth to do or die for their country. Early in August, 1861, a Ladies' Benevolent Society was organized in Atchison for the purpose of making clothing, etc., to send to the soldiers in the field, and also to supply their families with needed food and clothing during their absence. This organization labored diligently and effectively. The visiting committee of the organization was: Mrs. H. R. Neal, Mrs. Wm. C. Smith, Miss Sallie Woodard and Miss Nellie Grimes. Committee to distribute donations: Mrs. G. H. Fairchild, Mrs. S. H. Glenn, Miss E. R. Smith, Miss Fannie Chesebrough. An organization known as the Atchison Ladies' Aid Society, with similar objects in view, was organized November 1, 1861. The officers were: Mrs. J. M. Price, president; Mrs. Wm. C. Smith, vice-president; Mrs. W. B. Leonard, treasurer; Mrs. J. T. Neal, work inspector; Mrs. A. M. Plain, Secretary. The two beneficent societies worked harmoniously, and the soldiers and their families found the sister organizations angels of mercy.

ATCHISON.

The town of Atchison was incorporated by act of the Territorial Legislature, August 30, 1855, and the city of Atchison, February 12, 1858. The charter was approved by vote of the people, March 2, 1858. At the first meeting of the Council, held March 15, an ordinance was adopted providing for an election to be held on the 18th, for the purpose of submitting a proposition proposing to take $100,000 stock in a railroad from St. Joe to some point nearly opposite Atchison, on the Missouri River. It was proposed to issue city bonds therefor. The election was to be held in the stone house of Burnes & Bro. The election was held, the stock was taken and Gen. S. C. Pomeroy appointed agent of the Atchison and St. Joe R. R. Co., in behalf of the city. Among other measures which passed during the month were those fixing the salary of the Mayor at $300, ordering tippling shops to be closed on Sundays, and advertising for the construction of a "lock-up," 20x30 feet and 12 feet high, with roof of cottonwood logs. This may be said to be the germ of the present flourishing police system of Atchison.

The first financial statement of the city was brought up to September 5, 1859, and is as follows:

General City Tax, 1858	$5.927 70
Fines imposed by Mayor's Court	186 50
Dray and wagon licenses	192 00
Dram shop	1,787 76
Beer house	101 33
Shows	130 00
Billiard tables	225 00
Registry of dogs	50 00
Assessment on C. street from River to Fourth	3.381 00
Total	$12,008 29
Amount of script and orders issued on general fund to December 15, 1858	$6,317.16
Amount of script and orders issued on general fund to September 5, 1859	3,140.53
Script issued towards building jail	1.675.00
For grading streets, curbing, etc.	10.105.39
Total	$21,238 08
General Indebtedness September 5	$9.229.79

In his inaugural address (1858) Mayor Pomeroy had referred to the importance of grading and improving the thoroughfares of the city, especially Atchison, Second and Fourth streets and the levee. At the same time he urged the policy of generous reimbursement to property owners whose land the city condemned for public purposes. The Mayor concluded with a bit of poetry—

> Let us, then, be up and doing,
> With a heart for any fate,
> Still achieving, still pursuing,
> Learn to labor and to wait.

The financial statement of the city, when examined in detail, certainly shows that the people followed Mayor Pomeroy's advice in regard to street improvements, and from 1858 to 1861 there was no place in the State that was more "up and doing" than Atchison. As the outfitting point for the great emigrant trains to Salt Lake City and California, and finally in 1860, as the terminus of the Atchison & St. Joe Railroad, the place was "still achieving, still pursuing" when the war checked her march and she "learned to labor and to wait—" for further growth and—other railroads. The railroads came, the city grew in population and business importance, until it is now one of the most thriving and promising points on the Missouri River. Large amounts of money are being annually expended in grading and improving its streets, it has a fine system of water works, a fire department, a good police service, gas works, street cars—everything usually pertaining to a metropolitan place. Of the bonded debt of the city Mayor S. C. King, in his second annual message, delivered in May, 1882, speaks as follows:

"General Funding Bonds, due 1887 (10 per cent.)	$159.500
General Improvement Bonds, due 1892 (10 per cent.)	2.475
Bridge Bonds, due 1893 (7 per cent.)	3,000
C. & S. W. R. R. Bonds, due 1892 (7 per cent.)	31.000
	$195.975
Interest unpaid and maturing January 1, 1882	124.755
Total	$320 730
Seven per cent. new bonds refunded	181,600
Making our total bonded indebtedness to January 1, 1882	$512,330

As you are all aware, the new bonds, amounting to $191,600, are regularly and satisfactorily provided for by an annual levy of taxes to meet the interest accruing thereon, but for a number of years no provision of any description has been made to pay the interest or principal of the unrefunded portion of our debt, amounting to over $320,000.

The holders of these unrefunded bonds appear to be determined not to accept anything less than the face value of the principal, but from statements of the great majority of them, I am led to believe that they will accept the principal and four per cent. in new thirty year bonds. That is to say, the principal and accrued interest to date, to constitute the principal, and then new bonds for that amount, bearing four per cent.

As the matter now stands we are responsible for (without reckoning the interest on the overdue coupons of the unrefunded bonds) an annual interest of $31,989.50, while if the whole debt of $512,330, could be refunded at four per cent., we would be liable only for an annual interest of $20,493.20, making an annual saving of over $11,496, and in addition save and perpetuate the credit of our city, and relieve us from the stigma and disgrace of repudiation.

This measure, I am fully impressed, can be consummated by a repeal of the clause in our charter confining us to the payment of but fifty cents on the dollar of our unrefunded bonded debt, or by an appeal to the courts, questioning the authority of the Legislature to prevent us from paying our debts at par.

Such a compromise as suggested, I think, would meet with speedy acceptance by our creditors, who ought to be treated with respect and fairness, particularly when the hopelessness, and, in fact, the impossibility of collecting, and the total inability of our city to pay the debt as it now stands, is fairly and honestly presented to them. Situated as we are, writs of mandamus are useless, for if the officers obeyed, and made the levy ordered, our citizens could not pay. But we can pay the interest proposed on the principal and matured coupons, and leave it to a wealthier and more populous generation and city to take care of the principal."

CORPORATE HISTORY.

A brisk, energetic, growing city with the most complete railroad connections of any point in the State, situated in the center of a natural amphitheater of hills, with the Missouri River on the east, White Clay Creek flowing through its center from the west; one thousand feet above the sea level, air pure and drainage good; its streets filled with driving citizens and lined with busy mercantile houses or comfortable homes; possessing an ably-conducted press and pulpit, good schools, water works, gas works, etc.—all the modern improvements in the way of comfort and convenience; the center of a large grain trade, flour manufacture and stock interest; the center of the river border of Kansas; and should the Missouri River improvement and grain shipments down the Mississippi by barges become a reality, destined to become a great shipping point for a large extent of country tributary to the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe road, and the railroads of Nebraska, which center here; possessing a splendid retail trade—this is Atchison, and much more could truthfully be said of such a city of 17,000 inhabitants. The exhibit below, however, continues the story.

The act of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Kansas, incorporating the city of Atchison, approved February 12, 1858, provided for the election, by the people at large, of a mayor and councilmen. The charter was accepted by a vote of the people, at a special election for the purpose, held March 2, 1858. The first Mayor and Board of Councilmen were elected at a special election held March 13, 1858. The charter provided for the annual city election to be held on the first Monday in September; hence the first Mayor and Board of Councilmen, elected in March, held their offices only until September. They were as follows: Mayor, Samuel C. Pomeroy; Register, John F. Stein, Jr.; Treasurer, E. B. Grimes; Marshal, Milton R. Benton; Attorney, A. E. Mayhew; Engineer, W. O. Gould; Street Commissioner (by virtue of his office as Marshal), M. R. Benton; Assessor, H. L. Davis; Physician, J. W. Hereford; Board of Appraisers, Messrs. Petefish, Roswell and Gaylord; Councilmen, William P. Chiles, President; O. F. Short, Luther C. Challiss, Cornelius A. Logan, S. T. Walters, James A. Headley and Charles Holbert. John F. Stein, Jr., the Register, resigned in August, 1858, and R. L. Pease was appointed to fill the vacancy. In July Mr. Chiles resigned, A. L. Petefish being elected to fill the vacancy, he having been elected to the Council to succeed Luther C. Challiss, resigned. In August the city was divided into three wards, the First ward being entitled to four councilmen, the Second to two, and the Third to three.

The following municipal officers served from September, 1858, to May, 1859: Mayor, Samuel C. Pomeroy; Register, Robert L. Pease; Treasurer, E. B. Grimes; Marshal, Milton R. Benton; Attorney, A. E. Mayhew; Engineer, W. O. Gould; Assessor, H. L. Davis; Physician, J. W. Hereford. James A. Headly was President of the Council until April, 1859, when he resigned, and A. J. Petefish was elected to fill the vacancy.

Samuel C. Pomeroy also served the city as mayor from May to September, 1859, a change having been in the time of election. George H. Fairchild succeeded him as the municipal executive until May, 1862. In January, 1860, the office of City Recorder was created, H. R. Weightman being the first incumbent. During this year (1860) Judge N. J. Ireland was President of the Council. Milton R. Benton acted as Mayor from May, 1862, to May, 1863, George H. Fairchild being President of the Council. From May, 1863, to May, 1865, John M. Crowell was Mayor, John Belz having served as Register since 1862. John A. Martin was elected Mayor in May, 1865, and was succeeded by John M. Crowell, the next year. Mr. Crowell was succeeded by C. G. Foster. In 1867 the charter was amended so that the election for the city officers occurred in April, Atchison was re-districted into four wards, and the office "City Register" changed to "City Clerk," and "Recorder" to "Police Judge." H. Clay Park served as Register and Clerk from May, 1866, to April, 1871. Following Mr. Foster in the office of Mayor were William Hetherington, 1868-'69; John M. Price, 1869-'70; William C. Smith, 1870-'72; Edward K. Blair, 1872-'74; Thomas Murphy, 1874-'75; Clement Rohr, 1875-'76; W.

F. Downs, 1876-'78; Clement Rohr, 1878-'79; John C. Tomlinson, 1879-'81; and S. C. King, 1881-'83. The present City Clerk, H. R. Bostwick, was appointed in July, 1880. In 1879 the charter was so amended as to provide for the municipal election every two years.

Before closing this chapter in the city's history, however, it is instructive as well as interesting, to observe the change which has come over the financial condition of Atchison since the date of that report published over twenty years ago. From City Clerk Bostwick's last annual report (ending April, 1882), the following figures are taken: Old bonded debt, $195.975; new bonded debt, $191,690.85; County Treasurer, $54.360.65; City Treasurer, $13.444.63; General Improvement Fund, $2,572.14. Total, $458,043.27. Credited to the city are: General funding bonds, $159.500; Chicago and Atchison bridge bonds, $3,000; Chicago and Southwestern bridge bonds, $31,000; general improvement bonds, $2,475; refunding bonds, $191,600; refunding scrip, $90.85; interest refunding bonds, $6.834.61; tax assessment, $54,360.65; water fund, $2,342.51; revenue fund, $3.709.75; improvement warrant account, $554.16; revenue warrant account, $507.02; sidewalk repair fund, $792.19; bills payable, $1,093 40.

The actual expenses for maintaining the city, as ascertained from the report of the City Clerk for the year ending April 1, 1882, amount to $30,000 per annum. Of this sum about one-third goes to support the Police Department and one-seventh the Fire Department. The total floating debt of the city is $2,154.58 and its bonded debt $512,420.85.

The assessed valuation of city property is as follows: real estate, $1,434,080; railroad, $101,540; personal, $637.780. Tax levy for 1881, general revenue, $13,040.40; general improvement. $6,520.20; water purposes, $6.520.20; interest on refunding bonds, $16,735 18.

MEANS OF COMMUNICATION.

After a country has once become familiar with the splendid advantages of communication furnished by railroads, it is a difficult matter to go back in memory to the days of old county, territorial and military roads, slow, lumbering stage coaches and bungling ferries. In the case of Atchison County it seems as if the old order of inconveniences had so ephemeral an existence as hardly to have lived at all. Railroad and telegraphic communications entered almost hand-in-hand, before the ferries and the county roads and the great thoroughfares to Utah and California had been closed. In June, 1855, Atchison was selected by a number of Salt Lake freighters—the heaviest in the country—for their outfitting and starting point on the Missouri River. This is what gave the place its first business start, and the great channel through which this immense traffic poured—the great overland route to Utah and California—brought Atchison into intimate communication with the whole West. Subsequently the city became the eastern terminus of the Great Overland Stage Line—the longest single route in the world—the distance from Atchison to Folsom, the western terminus, being 1,918 miles. Even before the large freighters of the West had selected Atchison as their initial point on their long journey, and before the Overland Stage Line made it their eastern depot, the locality was known to traders as a splendid point of departure for the interior, being further west in Kansas by twelve miles than any other landing on the river. The old French voyageurs called the region the Grand Detour of the Missouri. This locality appeared to be the natural means of communication between the West, or the country to the Missouri, and that vast region of wilds beyond, called the "Great West" or the "Far West." Looking at the matter in this broad light, as did those who founded the town, Atchison was certain to become a thriving trading and transportation center—a great center of communication to an immense region of country. Her destiny is being worked out, although, at times, she had dangerous rivals. A few miles above was Doniphan, and a few miles below on the river was Sumner, both possessing beautiful natural sites. But the selection of Atchison, on broad geographical grounds, as the depot of supplies for the western freighters, gave the town an impulse which it has since retained. Doniphan and Sumner are forgotten. These large trading firms established station stores between Atchison and Salt Lake City, and the amount of supplies which were started on their long journey from this point was simply immense. In 1859 came the gold excitement, and Atchison was made the base of supplies for that rushing horde of emigration. In the meantime for the convenience of the local population, which was rapidly increasing, county and territorial roads were established, one of the latter being from Atchison to Marysville. In October, 1855, George M. Million, Lewis Burnes, D. D. Burnes, James N. Burnes and Calvin F. Burnes commenced to run a ferry for the accommodation of the traveling public across the Missouri River. Their dock on the Kansas side was situated at the foot of Atchison street. They obtained their charter from the Legislature, and executed a bond of $1,000 for "faithful performance," etc. The rates fixed upon were as follows: two-horse wagon or wagon and one yoke of oxen (loaded), $1; ditto (empty), 75 cents; one additional pair of horses or oxen, 25 cents; loose cattle or oxen, per head, 10 cents; sheep and hogs, 5 cents per head; man and horse, 25 cents; foot passengers, 10 cents; one horse and buggy or other vehicle, 50 cents; two-horse buggy or carriage, 75 cents. The next year the ferry company passed over their license to William S. and Luther C. Challiss and Willis E. Gaylord. There appears to have been some complaints against the original proprietors of the ferry, and the County Commissioners attempted to pass a resolution forfeiting their license. The aforesaid proprietors rightly, logically and legally objected to this course, on the ground that as they had received their charter from the Legislature it was not at all probable that the Court of Commissioners could take it away. The ferry, under different managements, continued in operation until the magnificent railroad bridge was built across the Missouri in 1875, when the old gave place to the new order of things.

In less than four years from the first survey of the town of Atchison her trade had so increased and her prospects were so glowing that it became evident to her public spirited citizens that she must have a railroad. The project was agitated and agitated. Col. P. T. Abell, then president of the Town Company, worked early and late, and finally, through the able "seconding" of Hon. R. M. Stewart, member of the Missouri Legislature, a charter was obtained from that State. (Gen. B. F. Stringfellow, so instrumental in founding this first road of Atchison, had the honor of delivering a well considered and interesting address at the laying of the Union Depot corner stone, September 7, 1880, when the city had made seven lines of road tributary to its energy.) The pioneer railroad charter provided for the building of a line from Atchison to St. Joe, and was considered merely as the extension of the Hannibal & St. Joe road. At the very first meeting ever held by the City Council of Atchison a resolution was adopted for holding an election March 18, 1858, to submit a proposition to take $100,000 in railroad stock—the election to be held at the store house of Burnes & Bro. S. H. Petefish, Charles E. Woolfolk and Dr. C. A. Logan were judges of election. There was no hesitating. The people voted the bonds heartily, and the Council appointed Hon. S. C. Pomeroy, who was a strong and active champion of the road, an agent in behalf of the city. Everybody was wildly in favor of the enterprise. In addition to the $100,000 voted by the city as a municipal body, the citizens subscribed in their individual capacities to the amount of $100,000. In May Messrs. Butcher, Auld & Dean were awarded the contract over fourteen bidders, at $3,700 per mile, they taking $2,500 in stock. The members of this firm were Thomas and Ephraim Butcher, David and James Auld and William Dean. By the 12th of that month work was commenced on the line above Rushville, but the road was not fully completed until February, 1860, and it is due to the energy and perseverance and business foresight of Col. P. T. Abell, Gen. B. F. Stringfellow, L. C. Challiss, Dr. J. H. Stringfellow, Samuel Dickson and Hon. S C. Pomeroy that Atchison was at length placed upon the great iron highway of prosperity. The history and effects of this important event, which, to men of practical minds and business pride, reads like a novel drawn from real life, is well told by Gen. Stringfellow:

> The influence of this road upon the destiny of our city has been such, and so much greater than that of any other road, that I will be excused from referring to it at greater length than to that of any other.
>
> Its history will serve to show that of railroads, as of other things, mighty effects often result from apparently trifling causes; to show how the blind let opportunities escape, while the wise make haste to seize them.
>
> There are, too, incidents in its history to expose the incredible folly of local jealousy, and the now incomprehensible lawlessness of the days when men had learned to trample law under the foot of military power.
>
> This little road, the Atchison & St. Joseph, a road of but twenty miles in length, in its very infancy exerted a most vital influence on the destiny of Atchison. It gave us, by the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad, direct lines to St. Louis, Chicago, and the East, before any other was constructed to the west line of Missouri.
>
> Its benefits to Atchison were, however, more special in demonstrating and securing to Atchison the advantages of its position as a central point for trade and travel.
>
> 1. It removed from Leavenworth to Atchison the shipment of the vast amount of government freight destined to the Western posts, and thus gave to Atchison its first advertisement as an outfitting place for the mining regions of Colorado.
>
> 2. It removed the starting point of the overland mail to the Pacific, to Atchison from St. Joseph, where it had been located by political favor.
>
> 3. It removed to Atchison the terminus of a branch of the Union Pacific road, which, by like political favor, had been located at St. Joseph, and thus secured the construction of the Central Branch Union Pacific, one of the most important roads in our State.
>
> 4. It thus made Atchison a point to be sought by railroads, brought all these other roads, and made this the great railroad center of Kansas.
>
> The Atchison & St. Joseph Railroad was organized, and its stock taken, by a subscription by the then mere town site in its pretentious capacity as a city, and by the mere handful of citizens then resident here, with a small number of citizens along the line; in the county of Buchanan, in the State of Missouri. With this subscription, means were secured to get the road ready for the rails, and the work was let, in the spring of 1858, to Butcher, Auld & Co., a firm composed of Thomas and Ephraim Butcher, and David and James Auld, and William Dean, who are all yet citizens of our county—living and witnessing the vast results of the work done by them. They completed their work, leaving only the rails to be laid to complete the road.
>
> Railroads not being then, as now, appreciated as investments, the Directors found it difficult to raise the money to complete the road. The Legislature of Missouri had, before that, provided for the loan of $750,000 to aid in the construction of a road from Kansas City by St. Joseph to the northern line of the State, under the name of the Platte Country Railroad.
>
> This grant, which would now be so greedily taken, lay idle, until Col. William Osborn, who had constructed the west half of the H. & St. Jo. R. R., and who afterward had charge of the construction of the C. B. U. P., with certain associates, secured the control of the company. The Directors of the Atchison & St. Joseph Railroad then proposed to transfer their road to this company, and so secure its completion.
>
> In the meantime, another company, by the name of the Weston & Atchison Railroad, had been organized to build a road from Weston to Atchison. This road was also transferred to the Platte Country Railroad Company. With the State aid and County subscriptions, the road was then completed to Weston, and to Savannah, a distance of fifty miles.
>
> The rebellion occurring, all further work ceased, and this company, like the Pacific and other roads which had received State aid, was unable to pay interest on the State bonds.
>
> The citizens of St. Joseph, blind as ever in their jealousy, deemed this their opportunity, and succeeded in inducing the Legislature to order a sale of the road.
>
> The stockholders of the old companies, the Atchison & St. Jo., and Weston & Atchison, being advised that the sales of their roads to the Platte Country road were illegal, took steps to regain possession of their roads, and to resist the sale by the State. Suit was brought by the State, and an attempt made to dispossess the companies. It failed, and by order of the court the companies were left in possession until the decision of the suit.
>
> Shortly thereafter the Legislature of Missouri met, and Col. J. N. Burnes, as President of the W. & A., and I, as President of the A. & St. Jo., submitted a proposition of compromise. We offered to pay the State the full principal and interest of its loan, in bonds of the State.
>
> Will you believe that the then Mayor of St. Joseph, with other leading citizens of that city, were there, not only seeking to defeat our proposition, but gravely asking instead, that the Legislature should direct the road to be torn up, and the rails and ties to be given to St. Jo. for the construction of a road in Kansas, opposite to St. Jo.!
>
> After a struggle seldom equaled, I am proud to say that the Legislature, under the active lead of W. L. Lovelace, then Speaker of the House, and afterward Chief Justice, accepted our proposition, and prevented the road from being torn up.
>
> While this was pending, and we had possession of our roads under the order of a court of the State of Missouri, its then Governor, Thomas C. Fletcher, fresh from the camp, forgetting that war no longer existed, under the influence of St. Jo., in contempt of law and of the courts of his State, called out the militia and took possession of our roads!
>
> I have no time to criticize such an act. I merely cite it as a historical event, to remind you of the lawlessness which prevails when the military rules the civil power, and to impress, especially on you young men, the danger of military rule.
>
> On the adoption of our compromise, the companies were restored to the possession of our roads. They were, however, defeated in their efforts to make the payments agreed on, and Governor Fletcher again took possession. Before the legislature met, Col. J. Condit Smith purchased the majority of the stock in these roads, and, believing that public sentiment had become more favorable, he presented another proposition to the Legislature. As his attorney I had charge of this proposition.
>
> He did not, as we had, propose to pay the State its claim, but, instead, proposed that the State should release its entire claim in consideration that he should complete the road. Strange as it may seem, this proposition met no serious opposition! The Legislature, instead of destroying roads, now was anxious to aid in their construction. Thus the road was completed from Kansas City to Hopkins. At this point it connected with a branch of the B. & M., of Iowa, and became part of a line from the Missouri River to Chicago.
>
> The two roads had been consolidated under the name of the Missouri Valley Railroad.
>
> Afterward a road was built from Council Bluffs to St. Jo. Then these two roads were consolidated under the present name of "Kansas City, St. Joseph & Council Bluffs Railroad," a name which, in these busy days, no one has time to pronounce, and which has no such significance as its old appropriate and beautiful name, the "Missouri Valley."

> By its latest change, it is understood that the control of its stock and management has passed into the hands of the C., B. & Q. R. R. It has thus, in reality if not nominally, become a part of that great road.
>
> As completed, it is a road of vast importance to Atchison. It has given us, in fact, three distinct lines, by three diverging routes, and is equivalent to three distinct roads leading from Atchison—one east to St. Louis, one northeast to Chicago, and one northwest to Omaha.
>
> By its connections it gives us direct routes to all points, from the cattle ranches of Texas to the sugar plantations of Louisiana, the cotton fields of Mississippi and Alabama, the orange groves of Florida, the rice fields of Carolina, and so on around the coast; by the great markets for our produce, by the great lakes to the lumber forests of the Northwest, and again on to the mines of Colorado and California. Were all the other roads leading to Atchison blotted out, this road would yet give us direct routes to three-fourths of the circle of our continent. The circle is completed by our Kansas roads.

Fully six months before the completion of Atchison's first railroad, her energetic spirit bubbled up in expressions of great joy over her first telegraphic line. In May, 1859, Charles M. Stebbins, President of the St. Louis & Missouri River Telegraph Line, proposed to the citizens of Atchison to connect their city with Leavenworth and thus with the Eastern United States. His provision was that the people subscribe $1,500 in stock. On the 15th of August, 1859, the first message went over the wires. Mayor Pomeroy sent greetings to his brothers, in office, H. B. Denman, of Leavenworth, and O. D. Filley, of St. Louis. The editorial fraternity of Atchison, Leavenworth and St. Louis, also joined hands, metaphorically speaking, and congratulated each other, literally speaking. At this time Atchison was the most westerly telegraph station on the continent; glory enough for one day!

The war put a complete embargo upon the building of railroads. The origin of the Central Branch of the Union Pacific road is found in the charter obtained by Hon. Luther C. Challiss for the building of the Atchison & Pike's Peak line. This was in the winter of 1859-60. During this year he obtained possession of 150,000 acres or land by treaty with the Kickapoo Indians. A company had in the meantime been formed and Mr. Challiss elected President. The referred to tract was situated in Atchison and adjoining counties. To Mr. Challiss, Charles B. Keith, Indian Agent, Col. G. W. Glick, and Senators Pomeroy and Lane, is due the construction of the Central Branch, which gave Atchison its first communication westward into Kansas. Those not familiar with the railroad history of the State often look at the map and wonder what the proposed terminus of the Central Branch was and is. When the charter of this road was obtained, provision was made for building to a point 100 miles west of Atchison. In June, 1860, ground was broken by E. Butcher, of Pennsylvania, the railroad contractor. But the war interfered and it was not until 1868 that Col. William Osborn completed this section to Waterville. Under the grant for a Pacific road, it was proposed, at this point, to make a connection with a branch running from Kansas City to the 100th meridian, near Fort Kearney, Neb. The route of the Kansas City road was changed to Denver, however, and the Central Branch was left to fight its own way westward. The western terminus of the branch is now nearly at the 100th meridian in Northwestern Kansas, and under the push of the Gould interest Denver will ultimately be reached. Thus Northern Kansas has become directly tributary to Atchison.

The Atchison & Nebraska road, running from Atchison to Columbus, Neb., via Lincoln, was commenced in 1868, and completed to Lincoln in August, 1872. Its general direction is northwest from Atchison, and it passes through the most fertile and enterprising sections of Southwestern and Central Nebraska.

In September, 1869, the Missouri Pacific was extended to Atchison.

Late in 1871, work was commenced on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe road. It was completed to Topeka in May, 1872. The construction of this magnificent line is peculiarly the work of Atchison men. Gen. B. F. Stringfellow was a member of the convention which met at Topeka, and was selected as one of a committee of three to draw the bill transferring the lands to the respective companies by the State, to which the grant was made by Congress. Of this road Gen. Stringfellow speaks as follows:

> The charter provided not only for a main line in the direction of Santa Fe, but for a branch from the Neosho to the Gulf. At my suggestion that branch was made a separate road, and extended to connect with the K. P. at Fort Riley. It was intended thus to connect the Gulf States with Kansas and the Mountains.
>
> That branch has become the Missouri, Kansas & Texas.
>
> It not only connects Kansas and the Mountains with the Gulf, but has a branch through Missouri to Hannibal, on the Mississippi, and thus connects the Gulf with the Great Lakes.
>
> This little Neosho Branch, by a blunder of J. F. Joy, secured the exclusive right to a line through the Indian Territory, and thus monopolized the trade from Texas to the North and became one of the great lines of our country.
>
> The construction of the main line by another blunder, was started from Topeka, to reach the coal mines of the Osage. After thus losing for years, the advantages of railroad connection at Atchison, it was forced to begin at its proper starting point, and so place itself in connection with the roads at this place.
>
> Since then it has been extended southwest through Kansas, west through Colorado, and southwest through New Mexico. It has now connection west with Leadville, on the summit of the Rocky Mountains; with Denver, the great city of the vast mineral region of the mountains; it has passed Santa Fe, the oldest city in North America, its apparent destination, on beyond Albuquerque, whence starts the new line to the Pacific—the line favored by Col. Benton, the projector of the Pacific road—and is hastening on through Arizona, crossing the Southern Pacific, and on through the old Empire of Mexico to Guaymas, on the Gulf of California.
>
> As already said, this road, in conjunction with the St. Louis and San Francisco, is building another road to the Pacific from Albuquerque, and a line of its own to Guaymas, one of the best harbors on the Pacific. This line will be by a thousand miles the shortest to the continent of Australia and the shores of India and China, thus commanding the trade of countries whose population is of such countless millions that a number equal to the entire population of our country might be destroyed by pestilence or famine and not be missed.
>
> So admirable is the management of this company, so ample its credit and resources, that the oldest of us may confidently expect to go on an excursion to celebrate the opening of the line to San Diego and San Francisco, and the other line through Mexico to Guaymas, with a possible extension of the trip, by invitation of the President, to his Capital, Mexico, the City of the Aztecs.

It may be further added that L. C. Challiss was chiefly instremental in obtaining the charter of the A., T. & S. F. road, and that Atchison County subscribed $15,000 in stock.

The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, that great corporation which passes to the famed city of the Northwest through the old and rich sections of the West, was one of the last of the "cart-wheel" of eight railroads to make direct connection with Atchison. Originally the line was projected to Leavenworth, but Atchison was speedily made its western terminus. The construction of the Atchison branch was begun early in 1872, and on July 14 the first train run into the city. In November the extension of the H. & St. Joe was completed. The Burlington & Missouri Company run trains to and from Atchison, using the track of the K. C., St. J. & C. B. between Hopkins and this point.

To speak more particularly of Atchison County—the A., T. & S. F. passes southwest through the eastern and southeastern portions of the county, Parnell and Cummingsville being stations along its line. It joins the Central Branch of the Union Pacific at Parnell Junction, a few miles from Atchison. The branch runs southwest and west through the center of the county, its stations beyond Parnell Junction being Farmington, Monrovia, Effingham and Muscotah. Oak Mills and Dalby, on the Missouri Pacific, which follows the river in the southeastern part of the county, and Larkin, on the Kansas Central line which cuts through the southwestern part of the county, are other stations on these lines of roads centering at Atchison.

In July, 1882, the first through train from Atchison to Omaha run over the new line of the Missouri Pacific R. R., and thus is opened another valuable medium of communication. It is generally admitted that this line passing through the most fertile portions of Kansas and Nebraska, is a benefit to the whole northeastern part of this State, and primarily to Atchison. Thus it is that Atchison has fulfilled the prophecy made by those pioneers who saw in her geographical position the natural transportation center of a broad expanse of country, although she has St. Joe only twenty miles to the northeast and Kansas City fifty miles to the southeast. For further and more general information in regard to the railroads of Kansas the reader is referred to the State history. At this point they are treated merely as they have a local bearing and interest.

The great iron bridge which spans the Missouri river at Atchison, and which really connects the Missouri Pacific, the Central Branch, the A. & N., and the A., T. & S. F. lines on the western bank with the K. C., St. J. & C. B., the C., R. I. & P., the B. & M., and the Hannibal & St. Joe on its eastern shores, was commenced in August, 1874, and completed in July, 1875. Its length is 1,182 feet, with an approach of 500 feet on the western side and 1,500 feet on the eastern. The structure consists of one draw span and three fixed spans. The stone for the piers and abutments was taken from the celebrated Cottonwood quarries. The bridge is floored, and is used for highway as well as railroad traffic, the superintendent of the company operating an engine for crossing trains. The American Bridge Company, of Chicago, was the contractor for this magnificent piece of work.

But the most important and the finest of the "concentrating railroad agencies" which Atchison put in force was the building of her costly union depot, which was dedicated with impressive ceremonies September 7, 1880. Gen. Stringfellow, Col. Glick and Messrs. Brown and Bier were especially active in securing its fine location on Second street. But it was by the energy of J. F. Barnard, Supt. of the K. C., St. Joe & C. B. R. R.; to J. B. Carson, General Manager, and T. L. Dunn, Chief Engineer, of the H. & St. Joe R. R.; to A. Kimball, Supt. of the C., R. I. & P. R. R.; to A. A. Talmage, Gen. Supt. of the Missouri Pacific R. R.; to W. B. Strong, General Manager of the A., T. & S. F. R. R.; to W. F. Downs, late Supt. of the C. B. U. P. R. R.; and to L. W. Towne, late Supt. of the A. & N. R. R., that its construction really became an accomplished fact. The citizens of Atchison had seen for a long time that the building of a union depot was a necessity. On the 8th of January, 1879, the Atchison Union Depot Company was formed—President, Mr. Towne. Their capital stock was $100,000, of which amount the seven railroad companies whose roads terminated in this city, took $70,000. The cost of the building before its completion was $120,000. Its architect was Wm. E. Taylor, who had built the union depot at Kansas City, and who was considered one of the greatest experts in his line in the country. The work was let to Capt. James A. McGonigle, of Leavenworth, who had built the union depot at Kansas City, and was the "author of many superb works" throughout the State of Kansas. Work was begun in the fall of 1879, and the dedicatory ceremonies occurred Sept. 7, 1880. Gothic is the prevailing style of architecture. The finest of pressed brick from St. Louis and the beautiful stone from the quarries at Cottonwood Falls were used in its construction. Its length is 235 feet, with an L ninety-six feet. The width of the main building and L is forty-four feet. The center of the union of main building and L is of two stories, each in height eighteen feet; with a mansard in height seventeen feet. There is a basement under the entire building with rooms for an engine to heat the building, and other rooms for cellar use. Though its nominal length is 235 and its width forty-four feet, its real length is 346 feet and its width 146 feet, being the extent covered by the improvement of open roofs. It is thus, too, capable of indefinite extension. The contrast between the dark red brick and pure white stone, of which the pilasters are composed, is very pleasing. The interior of the depot, both the general railroad quarters and the space devoted to the wants of the fine union depot hotel, is in keeping with the taste evinced outwardly. Two stories in height, with ornamental mansard roofs, and a tower which rises from their midst to an elevation of eighty feet from the ground, the union depot is a structure of which any city might be proud, and is a fitting monument to her enterprise and to the magnitude of her railroad interests.

The ceremonies which took place upon the formal opening of the depot, September 7, were witnessed by a large crowd, many of them distinguished guests from all parts of the State. One of the popular features of the day was the competition of decorated engines for a $500 prize offered by the Exposition Company. Central Branch engine, No. 162, carried off the prize. A speech by Gen. Stringfellow, filled to overflowing with timely facts and common sense—which is always timely; an elegant banquet served in the large assembly room, in the second story of the depot; a visit to the Exposition grounds; a grand procession, illumination and ball were all participated in, as indices of the joy felt by Atchison and the State at the completion of this last binding power of a complete circle of railroads.

On June 3, 1882, a fire broke out in the second story of the depot, and before the flames could be stayed the mansard roof in the west wing was destroyed, and much damage done by water. The total loss was $10,000. Rebuilding commenced at once.

MAIL SERVICE.

Robert S. Kelley, the first postmaster of Atchison and associate editor of the Squatter Sovereign, received his commission April 10, 1855. The office opened in a small, one story stone building in the block now occupied by the Otis House. The room was about 20x26 feet, but large enough for all practical purposes. Mr. Kelley held the position but a few months and resigned. His successor was a bright young South Carolinian, John H. Blassingame. The location of the post-office was removed in May, 1856, to the store of Messrs. Woolfolk & Cabell, on the Levee. During "the war in Kansas," in August, the head-quarters of the United States mail service were removed to the law office of P. P. Wilcox, on C street, who ran the office while Mr. Blassingame was away on military duty. At the end of Mr. Blassingame's term of service in the postoffice, Henry Addoms and O. F. Short assumed the duties and responsibilities of the position for a few months. In February, 1858, Col. John A. Martin was appointed postmaster. For some time after the establishment of the service in the town, its citizens depended upon the Atchison, St. Joe and Lecompton United States Mail Line, and irregular "posts" received by river steamers. The mail line made regular tri-weekly trips between Lecompton and St. Joe via Atchison, running four-horse stages. At Lecompton it connected with the lines to Topeka, Fort Riley, Lawrence, and Grasshopper Falls, and at St. Joe with the Hannibal & St. Joe R. R. The head-quarters of the line in Atchison was the Massasoit House, and the arrival of the four-horse stages, with passengers and mail, was quite a social and business event. But with the building of the Atchison & St. Joe R. R. in 1860, and of the lines to the North and West within the next decade, the stages melted away before the quick breath of the iron horses, like snow before the noon-day sun, so to speak, and daily mails were taken as a matter of course, by the same public which only a few years before looked upon a tri-weekly service as considerable of a luxury. Col. Martin retained the office until 1873, when he gave place to Benjamin B. Gale. After five years' service Mr. Gale died, and John M. Price became postmaster, retaining the position until his resignation in April, 1882. M. G. Winegar then received the appointment. In July of this year the free-delivery system was inaugurated in Atchison, which, with her money-order department, equipped her post-office with "all the modern improvements."

THE SCHOOLS OF ATCHISON.

After 1857, when the Pro-slavery and Free-soil men of Atchison agreed tacitly to forget political differences and remember only the well-being of the town, several ladies opened small private schools for the accommodation of the growing young community. Among those who commenced the earliest and labored late in the work of education, was Miss Lizzie Bay, daughter of Hugh Bay.

School District No. 1 was established by Henry Kuhn, County Superintendent of Common Schools, and the first meeting in the district was held, pursuant to his notice, at the house of T. J. Dillon, in September, 1858. At this meeting was elected the first District Board, consisting of a director, a treasurer and a clerk, viz., James Coulter, O. F. Short and F. G. Adams. Mr. Short removing from the county, W. H. Grimes was, in December, appointed to fill the vacancy. He resigned after serving a few days, and Hugh Bay succeeded him. Mr. Grimes, Col. P. T. Abell, P. H. Woodard and L. A. Alderson were prominently identified with the educational interests of District No. 1, during these early days.

A month after the formation of this district—on the 20th of November—the Atchison Free High School was opened in Bury's new building, corner of Fourth and Commercial streets—Prof. P. D. Plattenburg being its principal. It was faithfully conducted, and merits a high niche in the historical gallery. Although the financial responsibility attaching to those interested in school matters could not have been heavy in those days, the fact is of record that Col. P. T. Abell, the Treasurer of the School Board, was laboring along at this time under a $20,000 bond. There was actually some difference of opinion as to whether that period of civilization had arrived, when the community would be justified in supporting schools. Even as late as 1860, the School Board refused to levy a tax for educational purposes. But from that time to the present, more sensible counsels have prevailed, until now Atchison has as well-regulated a system of public schools as is to be found in Kansas.

Having wandered, however, there is no other way but to turn back. The corner-stone of a central building for the city school was laid in August, 1858. In October, 1869, the edifice was burned, and the present school building, on Fifth street, was erected on its site. The basement of the Congregational Church, Price's Hall, the Masonic Hall and a room over the Kansas Bank were all made to serve the cause of public education in Atchison. Up to the year 1866, no particular system was apparent, and private and public education seemed to be almost synonymous terms. Mrs. Wickham, the Misses Dickinson, Miss Bryning, Orlando Sawyer and David Negley were most faithful stewards in this particular educational vineyard. Prof. D. T. Bradford returned what had been committed to his care with interest, for he not only was a most faithful and efficient teacher, but he brought an admirable graded system out of a partial chaos. The graded system of the Atchison public schools was established chiefly through the labors of Prof. Bradford. Prof. Owens, Rev. H. M. Jackson, Prof. I. C. Scott, Prof. C. S. Sheffield and Prof. Richard C. Meade succeeded him in his work. During the few years that Prof. Meade has been at the head of the city schools, he has brought them to a far higher state of proficiency than they ever attained before. He is well qualified to continue the work of improvement, being a graduate of the Highbury Training School, London, and having been since an educator in this country for many years.

In pursuance of an act of the legislature, approved March 1, 1867, providing for a Board of Education in cities of the second class, consisting of two members from each ward, the first annual election for members of the Board of Education of the city of Atchison was holden June 3, 1867. This board superseded the old District Board of School District No. 1. The first board, which served from June, 1867, until May, 1868, was as follows: President, Wm. Scoville; Vice President, John A. Martin; Clerk, M. L. Gaylord; Treasurer, Wm. Bowman; First ward, Wm. Scoville, Wm. C. Smith; Second ward, M. L. Gaylord, L. R. Elliott; Third ward, John A. Martin, Julius Holthaus; Fourth ward, Geo. W. Gillespie, Jacob Poehler. When Atchison was made a city of the first class in 1881, the members of the Board of Education from each ward were increased from two to three. They are now as follows: First ward, A. E. Gushing, Louis Rochat, G. L. Florence; Second ward, Joshua Garside, A. F. Martin, J. C. Fox; Third ward, J. H. Talbott, Augustus Lang, S. C. King; Fourth ward, J. B. Kurth, H. R. Bostwick, Dr. R. D. Hudson. Officers of the board: J. C. Fox, President; J. B. Kurth, Vice President; James H. Garside, Clerk; Richard C. Meade, Superintendent.

Under the energetic management of Prof. Meade, a regular high school was established in 1880, and placed in charge of Prof. F. W. Bartlett, who is still principal. Before the close of the first year the attendance had doubled, and the school, situated in the Central building, is so increasing that Prof Bartlett will be furnished with an assistant. The course of study is of so high a grade that its graduates are admitted to the Freshman classes of the State University, Washburn College, Baker and Lane universities, and other leading colleges of Kansas, without further examination.

The graded course of study pursued in the public schools is in accord with the most advanced methods adopted in the East a certain programme of work to be accomplished annually being strictly carried out by the teachers of the different grades. Besides the Superintendent of City Schools and Principal of the High School, twenty-nine regular and two substitute teachers are employed in the maintenance of public education in Atchison. The average daily attendance (May, 1882) is 1,886 out of an enrollment of 2,310. The wards of the city are so overcrowded, however, that when State legislation has been obtained enabling the city to issue bonds, certainly two new school buildings will be erected—a High School building, to be located near the Central building, and an additional structure for the accommodation of pupils in northwestern Atchison.

Central School.—The building was completed in 1870 to replace the one destroyed by fire in October, 1869. Located on Fifth street, between Santa Fe and Atchison streets, the structure is one of the finest in the West. Its cost was $35,000. Prof. Meade, the Superintendent of Public Schools, has his office on the second floor, the High School is located on the third floor, the other rooms being devoted to the public school proper. The building is of brick, three stories, cut stone foundation and trimmings, dimensions 63x88 feet. The grounds surrounding the building are 310x225 feet. The Central Building, is a structure which is one of the noble looking landmarks of Atchison, standing as it does on an elevation which overlooks the thickly settled portion of the city. The attendance is 800.

Washington School (South Atchison) is situated on the corner of Fifth and Q streets, and was erected in 1873, at a cost of $15,000. It is built of brick, three stories in height, and next to the Central Building is the most imposing school edifice in the city. The principal of the school is Prof. F. M. Draper, who also has charge of the Douglas (colored) school, on Q street, between 5th and 6th streets. The attendance at both schools is 506.

Prof. J. F. Thorn is principal of the Franklin school, the building being located on Commercial street. The average daily attendance is 260.

The Lincoln school (colored) is located on Atchison street, between 7th and 8th streets, and is attended by 320 pupils. Prof. Thomas Morton is the principal.

The Atchison Institute was founded in September, 1870, by Mrs. H. E. Monroe, who is still its proprietor and president. The school, now known as the Institute, was first opened in a little building on Fourth street and was afterwards conducted in the unfinished part of the Kansas Avenue M. E. Church. In November, 1871, the first building upon the present site of the Institute, northwest corner of Third street and Kansas avenue, was occupied. A wing was added in 1876, and the large brick building in 1879. And now even more room is required. The location of the Institute buildings is high, healthful and beautiful, the property at present representing a valuation of $25,000.

The success of the enterprise has been phenomenal; without assistance from city, county, State, church or private donation; from a beginning of only nine students it has had for more than three years past an annual enrollment of nearly 300 students. Its musical department alone numbers seventy, and its art department fifty. It admits no superior in the Missouri valley for these two specialties. It has the following departments: Kindergarten, primary, intermediate, and academic grades. Its collegiate department consists of a Preparatory, Scientific, Classical, and Belles Letters course. It also has the Normal, Art, Musical, and Commercial course. Its teachers for 1882-'83 are: Mrs. H. E. Monroe, President and Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature; B. F. Nihart, A. B., Vice-president, Professor of Didactics, Languages, and Science; Miss Ida A. Ahlborn, Professor of German, Mathematics and Common Branches; Miss Dora Phelps, Professor of Elocution; Miss E. E. Spencer, Principal Primary and Intermediate Grades; Miss Mary J. Whitaker, Assistant Teacher, Kindergarten; Mrs. D. N. Wheeler, Professor of Art; Frederick Wachter, Professor of Music; Miss Josephine Ware, Professor of Music; Miss S. M. Hayward, Professor of Music; Lily M. Gayler, Assistant Teacher of Music; Minnie Parker, Assistant Teacher of Music; making in all thirteen teachers. It has had the only course of successful lectures in the city of Atchison, extending through the term of five years. It also calls to its assistance specialists in the sciences, who give daily lectures and instruction on the subject under consideration.

Its course of Belles Letters is unique and original, and will commend itself to the judgment of thoughtful parents. It is designed as a post graduate course for ladies, as well as for ladies who late in life have time and means to cultivate their mental abilities. It realizes that, while the higher mathematics are always beneficial, they are less so in the education of women than good domestic and literary training. During the course of two years nearly 100 volumes, including the classics of all languages, are read and discussed for training both as to matter and manner in conversation.

It is divided into four chapters or divisions, viz: Chapter of Language, Domestic Chapter, Chapter of Literature and Chapter of Accomplishments.

In the Chapter of Language the following branches are studied: Grammar, Rhetoric, Swinton's Ramble Among Words, Trench's Method of Words, Graham's Synonyms, Smith's Etymology, with a course of reading embracing ten books corresponding to the above.

Domestic economy, the text books being House and Home Papers, American Woman's Home and Cookery as a Science, Domestic Chemistry, Physiology and Hygiene, particularly pertaining to the health of women and children, Mental and Moral Philosophy and Civil Government.

The most eminent ladies of the West lecture before this class and show that they consider no woman's education complete who does not know how to conduct a household, take care of the minds and bodies committed to her care, and prepare citizens for the republic. The next is an extensive course in the histories and literatures of different countries, the history of art and artists, music and musicians, architecture and architects, besides the discussing of forty books on the above subjects. The chapter of accomplishments consists of music to the seventh grade, conversation as a science and art, and painting in oil and water colors, and general decorative art. The substitute for painting or music is cookery as an art.

Academy of Mount St. Scholastica.—Among the educational institutes, which, during the past twenty years has been gradually, but surely establishing itself in the confidence of the community, is the St. Scholastica Academy, under the supervision of the Benedictine Sisters. Its location is one of the most charming and healthful to be imagined. The academy, known formerly as the "Price Villa," is a large and finely arranged brick structure, three stories in height, with a mansard roof, and is situated in the suburbs south of Atchison, on a beautiful elevation commanding an extensive view of the city and the surrounding country. The size of the building is 80x120 feet, large bay windows and wide porticos and verandas giving it an outward appearance of homelike comfort which its interior arrangements do not belie. It is heated by steam, supplied with hot and cold water, bath rooms and every other convenience. The grounds surrounding the academy are being continually improved and ornamented, and are so spacious that they afford ample advantages for exercise.

The academy was established in November, 1863, in the convent opposite St. Benedict's Abbey, North Atchison. Here the school was conducted until July 16, 1877, when the magnificent piece of property in South Atchison, known as the "Price Villa," was purchased and the building adapted to the purposes for which it was intended. The property originally cost over $60,000, and is as finely arranged for educational purposes as any in the State. Nine teachers are employed in instilling a course of instruction which embraces every useful and ornamental branch of education suitable for young ladies Difference of religion is no obstacle to admission; provided the young ladies are prepared to conform with the general regulations of the academy. Semi-annual bulletins are transmitted to parents or guardians, informing them of the conduct, proficiency and health of their children or wards. Mount St. Scholastica Academy, in short, is a home where young ladies are instructed by a Mother and Sisters, who take a personal interest and pride in the well-being and well-doing of their pupils.

THE PRESS.

The Champion.—This, the oldest journal in Atchison, was founded upon the Squatter Sovereign, a Pro-slavery sheet, first issued February 3, 1855. The father of the Sovereign was the Atchison Town Company, or, to be more particular, a resolution passed by that association, September 21, 1854, donating $400 to Robert S. Kelley and Dr. John H. Stringfellow for the purpose of establishing a printing office. The little building, fashioned from cottonwood logs which were borne on the shoulders of Mr. Kelley, was situated on the river bank overlooking George Million's Ferry landing. It is a coincidence that the site afterwards became the resident property of Col. John A. Martin, present editor of the Champion. As stated, the first issue was dated February 3, these gentlemen being editors and proprietors of the journal. In the summer of 1857 the town association disposed of a large share of its property interests to the New England Aid Society, of which Ex-Senator S. C. Pomeroy was agent, and Robert McBratney and Frank G. Adams were active members. The Sovereign passed into their hands, being converted, of course, into a Free-state paper. Mr. Pomeroy soon became sole owner, but in the fall of 1857 sold the paper to O. F. Short. In February, 1858, John A. Martin purchased the establishment and on the twentieth day of that month, christened it The Freedom's Champion. In September, 1861, Mr. Martin commenced his term of service in the Union army, leaving the Champion in charge of George I. Stebbins. Mr. Stebbins had charge of the paper until the fall of 1863, when it was leased to John J. Ingalls and Albert H. Horton. In January, 1865, Col. Martin returned from the army, and resumed charge of his paper, and on the twenty-second of March, 1865, began the publication of a daily.

The next important step in the history of the Champion was taken August 11, 1868, when it was consolidated with the Atchison Free Press, being called the Champion and Press. The Free Press—a Republican daily paper—first appeared May 5, 1864, F. G. Adams, editor and proprietor. In April, 1865, Frank A. Root became a partner. Two years thereafter L. R. Elliott, who had been acting as assistant editor for some time, became joint proprietor with Mr. Root. Mr. Elliott sold his interest in February, 1868, the consolidation with the Champion taking place in August, when Mr. Adams retired.

On May 20, 1869, the office of the Champion and Press was destroyed by fire, but within three weeks the establishment was again in running order, the paper coming to the public now with John A. Martin as sole editor and proprietor. The Champion is, as it has been for the past twenty-four years, bold and vigorous in the enunciation of its policy. With the exception of his term of service in the army, Col. Martin has been continuously at the helm. The Champion is Republican in politics, an eight-column folio in form, and is among the leading journals of the State, whether considered as a newspaper or as a political journal and champion of public measures.

The Atchison Patriot was established by Nelson Abbott, October 25, 1867. In September, 1868, Messrs. H. Clay Park, B. P. Waggener, and Nelson Abbott, formed a partnership, under the firm name of H. Clay Park & Co., and purchased the establishment. In October of the same year, the paper passed into the hands of C. F. and C. P. Cochran, and shortly afterward reverted to Nelson Abbott. In December, 1875, Mr. Abbott delivered his valedictory through the columns of the Patriot. During his ownership of the paper, Dr. H. B. Horn, who is still connected with it as bookkeeper, was business manager of the Patriot, and performed much of the editorial work. On December 6, 1875, Messrs. H. Clay Park, F. L. Vandegrift, and P. H. Peters, assumed control, the latter retiring soon after. In 1877. E. W. Beall was admitted as a partner, the style of the firm being changed from Park & Vandegrift to H. Clay Park & Co. On January 21, 1879, Thomas Stivers, who had been connected with the Champion for eight years, formed a partnership with Mr. Park, Messrs. Vandegrift and Beall retiring.

The Patriot, at present published by Park & Stivers, is a seven-column folio, afternoon issue, daily and weekly editions. It is stanchly Democratic in politics, in fact, stalwartly so, if the expression may be excused. It is a good local and State paper, full of news pithily presented. In a word, the Patriot is a journalistic success.

The Globe was established by E. W. Howe, its present editor and proprietor, December 8, 1877. The daily is a spicy five-column folio, filled with fresh local matter, and touching every topic, editorially, from an independent standpoint. The weekly is a seven-column paper. Both editions are printed in its own office. Attached to the Globe is a good job office. As an afternoon paper it has its own peculiar field, which it alone can and does fill. Mr. Howe, although among the younger members of the editorial profession, is looked upon as one of the raciest writers in the State, and a young man of decided energy and ability.

Kansas Staats Anzeiger.—In 1880, the material for this weekly German paper was brought from Wichita, Kan., by Phillip Schmitz. About the same time, J. Hoernscheidt, who had purchased offices in Great Bend and Wichita, and tried the experiment of publishing a German paper in Topeka, and together they commenced the publication of the Daily Journal and the weekly Kansas Staats Anzeiger. Soon after, Mr. Schmitz sold his interest to his partner, and Mr. Hoernscheidt has since remained sole proprietor. The daily is a six-column folio, and has a circulation of 500, mostly in the city. The Anzeiger is the largest German paper in the State, circulates 3,000 copies, and has an excellent advertising patronage. Both journals are independent in politics. Connected with the paper is a well-appointed job office. The location of the establishment is on Commercial street, between Sixth and Seventh streets.

The Sunday Morning Call, devoted to society, dramatic items, literature, and family reading, was established in February, 1880, by Frank Pearce. A few weeks later, Bowton, Low & Co. became proprietors, and increased its size. January 28, 1881, L. L. Higby became part owner, and the Call was enlarged to its present dimensions—a six column quarto. In July, 1882, Mr. Higby became sole proprietor.

As in all towns of blood and ambition, many newspaper enterprises which were put on foot in Atchison, stumbled and finally fell. That which met with the most prolonged success was the Union, the first number of which was issued June 4, 1859, G. O. Chase, editor and proprietor. It was purchased by Adams & Stebbins in the winter of 1861, and during the succeeding winter was sold to Cochran Brothers. By them it was transferred, early in 1863, to Leland & Marion, who published the paper for about a year, when it was started for Platte City, Mo., but the entire material was capsized in a creek on the way.

A Polish printer, named Pfeifer, established a small weekly in 1859, printed half in English and half in German. It existed only a few months.

The Atchison Bulletin, a Democratic paper, formerly the Lecompton Democrat, was published by Driggs, Faris & Moore, the first number being issued June 20, 1861. Its publication continued until December of the same year, and early in 1862, the material was removed to Leavenworth, where it was employed in establishing the Leavenworth Inquirer.

The Union Banner was issued as a Republican daily campaign paper, by John A. Martin, of the Champion, during an exciting canvass for city officers in 1861.

The Atchison Anti Jayhawker, a Democratic daily campaign sheet, was published by Cochran Brothers during the city canvass in the spring of 1862.

The Democratic Standard, published by W. J. Marion, was first issued November 29, 1862, but was continued only for three months.

The Atchison Free Press, a Republican daily paper, first appeared May 5, 1864, published by F. G. Adams. In April, 1865, Frank A. Root became a partner in the enterprise. L. R. Elliott became assistant editor with Mr. Adams in September, 1866, and editor and joint proprietor with Mr. Root in April, 1867. He disposed of his interest, February 10, 1868. August 11, 1868, the Free Press was consolidated with the Champion, Martin & Root being the publishers of the consolidated journal, Mr. Adams retiring. Mr. Root retired in the spring of 1869.

Die Fackel, a German weekly, was removed from Wyandotte to Atchison, January 1, 1868, and was published there until January, 1869, by H. W. Kastor, when it was removed to St. Joseph, Mo., and consolidated with the Volksblatt.

THE CHURCHES.

Kansas Avenue M. E. Church.—In April, 1857, Rev. James Shaw, of the Detroit Conference, moved into the Territory of Kansas and settled in Doniphan County. After preaching a few times in Geary City and Doniphan, by request he visited Atchison, and in May delivered the first sermon in Gen. S.C. Pomeroy's office, located where the Otis House now stands. During the same month arrangements were made for holding regular services, the new pastor inducing a Congregational minister, Rev. J. H. Byrd, to preach every alternate Sunday. Services were maintained during the summer and fall, and in October the First M. E. Church of Atchison was regularly organized, with Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Short, Mrs. Butt, Miss Willey, Mrs. Ann Harrison, Richard Harrison and W. M. Davies and wife, as members. Of these only O. F. Short and Richard Harrison had been members of the Methodist Church, and consequently the remaining members understood that when they had an opportunity and so desired, they could join their own societies. This new religious organization, however, was so welcome that, during the winter, $2,000 was raised in the city to build an edifice. At the third session of the Kansas and Nebraska Conference, held at Topeka, in April, 1858, Rev. James Shaw was transferred from the Detroit Conference, and appointed to the Leavenworth District, which embraced Atchison. Isaac F. Collins was stationed at Atchison, a lot was donated by Col. Abell, on Parallel street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, and the erection of a church building commenced. Mr. Collins was re-appointed to the charge in the spring of 1859, when the church was finished. In March, 1860, Rev. Milton Mahin became pastor, serving until March, 1861; Rev. Mr. Wentz, from 1861 to 1862; Rev. James Shaw, 1862-63; Rev. Warington Mariatt, 1863-64; Rev. R. L. Harford, 1864-66 (parsonage built); Rev. W. K. Marshall, 1866-68; Rev. H. D. Fisher, 1868-71. In 1869, the old church was sold and the fine edifice on Kansas Avenue commenced. It was entirely completed in the fall of 1873, at a cost of $25,000. The church is of brick, 55x90 feet, entrance on Kansas Avenue. Rev. T. J. Leak served the church from 1871 to 1874; Rev. G. S. Dearborne, from 1874-76; Rev. William Friend 1876-79; Rev. E. W. Van Deventer, 1879-1882. Rev. Philip Krohn, D.D., of New York, was called to the pastorate in 1882. He assumed charge of a most flourishing society, its membership numbering nearly two hundred.

First Baptist Church.—The founder of the First Baptist Church of Atchison is, without doubt, Rev. James M. Challiss, father of George T. Challiss, who located on the present site of the city, in September, 1854. During the next three years, Luther, Dr. W. L. and Joseph Challiss, children all of that Christian old clergyman, then living away off in New Jersey, settled in Atchison; and it was the repeated prayer of the father that the community in which they lived should not longer exist without the holy influences of religion, which finally induced Luther to donate a fine piece of ground, on the corner of Kansas avenue and Ninth street. Aided by the Cohansey Church, of Cumberland County, New Jersey, of which the Rev. Mr. Challiss was pastor sufficient funds were raised to complete a substantial brick edifice, by September, 1858. The Methodists had previously erected a small building, so that this was the second one in Atchison, and the first Baptist meeting-house in the State of Kansas.

It was on the 24th of April, 1858, that Rev. L. A. Alderson, who had been for years a laborer in the pastoral, Sunday-school and missionary fields in Virginia, came to reside in Atchison. Rev. James Shaw, the Methodist minister, had been invited to conduct the services, but being unable to attend, and Mr. Alderson having landed the previous night from the steamboat, arrangements were at once made by which he should preach the pioneer Baptist sermon. The services were conducted in Gen. S. C. Pomeroy's office, a small brick building opposite the old National Hotel, on Atchison street. Regular services were held, a few Sabbaths afterwards, in a room previously occupied as a saloon, on Commercial street, near the wharf. On August 1, 1858, a church was organized, the place of meeting at this time being a room in Allen's building, corner of Commercial and Second streets. Those who then united in church relation were Rev. L. A. Alderson and wife, Mrs. Mary A. Challiss, J. C. Allen and wife, Aaron Stephenson and wife, Deacon Thomas Wise, Wilberforce Dunlevy, and a few days thereafter, Dr. Wm. L. Challiss. The next month the church was completed at a cost of $5,000, and the church was established on a substantial basis. In May, 1861, Rev. Mr. Alderson, who had been pastor of this church since 1858, was succeeded by Rev. A. Perkins, D.D. Rev. Frank Remington commenced his pastorate in May, 1864, serving only a few months, being followed by Rev. J. W. Warder. Rev. H. A. Guild came in May, 1867; Rev. I. Sawyer, D.D., July, 1868; Rev. E. Gunn, August, 1870; Rev. J. B. Hardwicke, November, 1873; Rev. W. T. Fleenor, June, 1877; Rev. J. W. Luke, August, 1880. The Church is now among the strongest in the city, having a membership of (about) 200—a cause for just rejoicing when the contrast is made with that little band of nine who constituted the First Baptist Church of Atchison, a quarter of a century ago.

First Congregational Church.—Although the Congregationalists held services under Rev. J. H. Byrd, as early as June, 1857, no regular church organization was effected until March 20, 1858. Upon that day a society of eight members was formed—Mr. Byrd, Pastor; A. J. Evans, Deacon; B. F. Harrison, Clerk. In the fall of 1859, the foundations of the present church edifice, corner of Kansas avenue and Fourth street, were laid, and during the following season the building was enclosed. The congregation worshiped in the basement for several years. The church was completed and dedicated May 14, 1865. Rev. S. D. Storrs had become pastor in June, 1862. It was during his pastorate that the building was finished. He resigned in 1867 and was succeeded for one year by Rev. J. M. Van Wagner. Rev. L. B. Wilson, D. D., became pastor in 1868, and remained in charge for two years, resigning his position in February, 1872. In September, 1872, Rev. F. T. Ingalls, of Olathe, accepted a call to the church, and was installed in October. With the exception of one year's absence in Europe, from October, 1880, to November, 1881, Mr. Ingalls has had charge of the society since 1872. During that time Rev. William A. Bosworth was stated supply. The church is strong and growing, having a membership of 180. Its property is valued at $15,000. Present officers of the church, (1882): Samuel Hollister, C. Weber, E. A. Markham, J. C. Meacham, A. P. Tenny, Trustees; E. C. Johnson, J. A. Norton, Deacons; J. H. Garside, Clerk; C. M. White, Treasurer; D. T. Bradford, Superintendent of Sunday school.

The First Presbyterian Church was organized October 21, 1858, by a committee of Highland Presbytery appointed for that purpose. The organization took place in a building owned by Mr. Allen, then standing on the corner of Second and Commercial streets. The Rev. Alex. W. Pitzer, of Leavenworth, chairman of the committee, appointed by Presbytery, was present and conducted the proceedings. The number of persons entering into the organization on that day were eight, five by letter and three on profession of faith, viz.: William M. Davies, Mary Davies, George B. Irwin, Rebecca Irwin, Annie Love, Andrew Hamilton, Mampimilia Ireland and Edward Hair. The organization was completed by the election of William M. Davies as Ruling Elder and Edward Hair as Deacon. For several months afterward the church had no settled pastor and held its service in store rooms, halls and private parlors. In April, 1859, Rev. Julius Spencer was engaged as stated supply, and remained with the society for eighteen months. The church was without regular preaching until September, 1863, when Rev. H. H. Dobbins was called and continued to officiate as pastor until March, 1864. Rev. E. P. Lewis' pastorate commenced in April, 1865, and closed in February, 1868. During his incumbency the building near the corner of Fourth and Commercial streets was erected at a cost of $4,500, and in 1865 the congregation commenced worshiping in it. Up to this time the society had had no permanent home of its own, but had worshipped in various places, the last locality being Price's Hall, corner of Fourth and Main streets. Following Mr Lewis was the Rev. Edward Cooper, in December, 1868. He remained with the church until December, 1875, when he resigned and was followed in March, 1876, by Rev. J. H. Clark, who officiated until June, 1878. In November of the same year, the present pastor, Rev. M. F. Howie, was called. In the year 1880, the society commenced the erection of a beautiful new stone building, corner of Fifth and Santa Fe streets, and on the 15th day of September, the corner stone was laid, with appropriate ceremonies by Washington Lodge, No. 5, A. F. & A. M. The building is of blue lime-stone, 75x90 feet, and when entirely completed will be as fine a church edifice as is found in the City of Atchison. The auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 500, is divided from the Sabbath school room by stained glass doors, which can be dropped into the basement when necessary, thus throwing the entire building into one room. The entire cost of the lot and building will be about $23,000. The present membership of the church is 200, and a continuous growth is noted. Officers of the church: Pastor, Rev. M. F. Howie; Elders, A. J. North, A. B. McQueen, A. B. Decker, J. M. Covert; Deacons, Judge J. L. Berry, B. F. Hudson,; Board of Trustees, B. F. Hudson, A. W. Simpson, A. F. Martin, S. D. D. Smith, E. K. Blair, R. B. Drury and David Lukens.

Trinity Church (Episcopal).—What is now known as Trinity, was organized in October, 1857, as St. Mary Magdalene's Church, its original members being Hon. A. G. Otis, Thos. B. Valliant, James L. McClure, Joseph P. Carr and Richard C. McCall. Those who at this early day thus associated themselves together were under the spiritual guidance of Rev. L. R. Staudenmayer. Trinity Church was incorporated February 27, 1860, the first vestry under this organization consisting of the originators of the St. Mary Magdalene's Church, with the additional member, Major R. H. Weightman. The Court House and Price's Hall were used as places of worship for ten years previous to the building of the church. Mr. Staudenmayer, the first rector of Trinity Church, was succeeded by the Rev. Faber Byllesby, in 1861, and he in 1863, by the Rev. J. E. Ryan. After Mr. Ryan's resignation in September, 1864, Rev. T. H. Vail, D. D., was offered the rectorship, which he retained for two years, notwithstanding the manifold other duties which pressed upon him as Bishop of the Diocese. Bishop Vail was succeeded by his son-in-law, Rev. John Bakewell. The society had now so increased in numbers and influence that the need of a suitable church edifice was more than ever felt. In this emergency, the right men and women were found in the right place, and it was due to the personal efforts of Mr. Bakewell, Col. William Osborn, Richard A. Park, Gen. B. F. Stringfellow, and Hon. A. G. Otis, and generous members of the church, especially the ladies, that the elegant and costly structure, corner of Utah avenue and Fifth street, was erected. Its total cost was $20,000. Built of stone in the early English style of Gothic architecture, roof slated, the interior finished in black walnut and pine, spacious and light, the church combines elegance with durability and comfort, and is one of the ornaments of Atchison. In July 1871, Mr. Bakewell resigned, and was succeeded by the Rev. P. N. Meade in January, 1872. Continuing in charge until April, 1874, the latter was followed by Rev. Thos. G. Carver, who resigned in September, 1875. Rev. Frank O. Osborne became rector in February, 1876, and was succeeded by the present incumbent, Rev. Abiel Leonard, in November 1881. There are at present about 150 communicants in the parish and 500 souls in the congregation. Besides the beautiful church building, to which reference has been made, the vestrymen of the society purchased in May, 1882, an elegant two-story brick building on T. street for a rectory. The corporation at present (1882) consists of the following: D. P. Blish, Senior Warden; W. W. Scoullar, Junior Warden; C. S. Osborn, Clerk; H. A. Coats, Treasurer; Chief Justice, A. H. Horton, Messrs. E. A. Mize, W. S. Cain, E. W. Markham and C. E. Styles.

St. Benedict's Abbey.—St. Benedict's Abbey, church and college, are conducted by the Benedictine Fathers. It was in 1846, when Rev. Boniface Wimmer, O. S. B., came from Bavaria to Pennsylvania, and, assisted by some of his brethren, founded the Monastery of St. Vincent's, Westmoreland County. This founder, now seventy-two years of age, is at present Abbot of that Monastery and President of the American-Casinensian congregation.

The first Benedictine Father that came to Kansas was Henry Lemke, who in the year 1855 arrived at Doniphan, where he laid the foundation of a monastery. His labors for the people have left a grateful remembrance in the hearts of the Catholics living in the vicinity of Doniphan. He was soon assisted by some fellow-brethren who were sent by Father Wimmer. They immediately opened a Latin school with a few pupils. But Augustine Wirth, O. S. B., soon found out that, in a few years, Atchison would surpass Doniphan in every regard, and on this account they transferred their home to Atchison (1859), bought a few lots northeast of the city, and laid the foundation of the present monastery and college. They also started the college, as soon as the building was ready. At the beginning only a few pupils. Rev. P. Augustine was appointed Prior. In 1866 the corner-stone of the Church of St. Benedict was laid. Previous to this a small frame building served as church for the few Catholics. The present church is built in the Roman style, and is 168 feet long and fifty-six feet wide. The steeples and the interior of the church are not yet finished. In June, 1868, Rev. P. Louis M. Fink, O. S. B., was appointed Prior, filling the office until December, 1870, at which time he was called to the Episcopal See of Leavenworth. During his priorship the roof of the church was finished so that divine services could be held there. During the erection of the church the college was discontinued, the dormitory of the students serving as a house of worship. After the church had been brought under roof, the college was opened again with ten students. In July, 1871, Rev. P. Hegidius Christoph was appointed Prior. He built the steeples to their present height (July, 1882), laid the floor, finished the ceilings, etc. In January, 1875, Rev. P. Oswald Moosmuller became Prior. Under his direction the monastery as well as the college flourished. Especially his exertions in founding and augmenting a good library are highly to be praised. As the number of members of the community was now sufficient, the Priory was promoted to an Abbey April 7, 1877, and on September 29 Rev. Innocent Wolf elected Abbot. He occupies this dignitary office at present. The status of the house is: Rt. Rev. Innocent Wolf, O. S. B., Abbot; Very Rev. Boniface Verheyen, O. S. B., Prior; Very Rev. Pirmin Koumly, O. S. B., Prior of St. Benedict's, Severance; Rev. Augustine Wirth O. S. B.; Emanuel Hartig O. S. B.; Timothy Luber, O. S. B.; Peter Kassens, O. S. B.; Eugene Bode, O. S. B.; Adolph Wesseling, O. S. B.; Ferdinand Wolf, O. S. B.; Winfried Schmidt, O. S. B.; John Staeder, O. S. B.; Matthew Bradley, O. S. B. Besides these there are four priests from St. Vincent's, Pennsylvania, who act as assistants, viz: Rev. Ambrose Huebner, O. S. B.; Rev. Casimir Elsesser, O. S. B.; Theodore Schmitt and Anselm Soehnler; seven clerics, ten lay brothers, five candidates and ten scholastics. The library of the monastery, to which also the students of the college have access, consists of about 5,000 volumes, mostly theological, philological and historical works. There is one incunabulum in this library which was printed in 1486, shortly after the art of printing had been invented. The library is in charge of Venerable Fr. Herman, O. S. B. The cabinet contains many instruments for physical purposes, and a considerable collection of specimens in natural sciences, principally botany, ornithology, geology, palæontology, entomology, numismatics, archæology, ethnology. The cabinet is in charge of Very Rev. P. Boniface Verheyen, O. S. B.; botany and entomology are in charge of Rev. P. Winfried Schmidt, O. S. B. The college library contains at present 800 volumes, which pertain to English and German literature. This library is constantly increasing. It is in charge of Rev. P. Matthew Bradley, O. S. B.

The parish-school near the church is directed by Rev. Peter Kassens, O. S. B., pastor of the church, and taught by four sisters of the order of St. Benedict. The attendance is this year the most numerous, namely, about 300.

M. E. Church, South.—The church is situated on the northeast corner of Sixth and Park streets. The society was organized in 1856 by Rev. Thomas Wallace, and continued to increase until 1862, when, because of the war excitement, the death and removal of members, etc., the organization was broken up. It was reorganized in 1869, by Rev. H. W. Currin. The following pastors have served the church: Rev. Thomas Wallace, Rev. D. C. O'Howell, Rev. Wm. Barnett, Rev. H. W. Currin, Rev. A. V. Bailey, Rev. W. A. Hanna, Rev. H. D. Hogan, Rev. Joseph King, Rev. G. J. Warren, Rev. J. W. Faubion, Rev. J. W. Payne, Rev. T. H. Swearingen and Rev. C. A. Shearman, the present incumbent. The society has at present (1882), forty-six members. It has suffered an unusually large number of deaths and removals, and once or twice has been nearly disbanded. It is now, however, stronger than it has been for some time.

First German Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Unaltered Augsburg Confession, Atchison, was organized in 1866, by Rev. C. F. Liebe, who was at that time a home missionary of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio, and other States, for the States of Missouri and Kansas. The first regular minister was Rev. Mr. Menge, who was installed in April, 1867. Ill health caused his resignation during the same year. Rev. G. Landgraf succeeded Mr. Menge in December. He was installed on the first day of that month, the church building, corner of Tenth and Commercial streets, being dedicated at the same time. In 1869 a parsonage, adjoining the church, was erected and during the next year Mr. Landgraf accepted a call to Missouri. Rev. C. Janzow, of Weston, Mo., succeeded him, who was followed in turn by Rev. C. Hartman of the St. Louis Theological Seminary. He died in the fall of 1872, and a call was then extended to Rev. W. Zschoche, of Miami County, Kan., the present pastor. He was installed January 15, by Rev. M. Meyer, of Leavenworth, who had been in charge of the society for a few months. Both the church building and parsonage were subsequently rebuilt and enlarged. Under the pastorate of Rev. W. Zschoche the congregation has increased to a membership of 130. Connected with the church is a day school, which, until 1881, was conducted by the pastor. It is now taught by F. C. H. Hoeck, and numbers some sixty pupils.

The English Evangelical Lutheran Church was organized in Atchison in 1870, with Rev. M. S. Boyer as pastor, and a membership of twenty-three. Regular meetings were held in Price's Hall and the Congregational Church for several months, but Mr. Boyer becoming discouraged, he resigned, and the church soon ceased holding meetings. Some months since, however, a reorganization was effected, and the services of Rev. W. I. Cutter, of Effingham, secured. Meetings are held regularly every Sunday afternoon, and the church has a membership of forty-two. The Methodist Episcopal Church South has been secured for the meetings of the organization.

Although the society has no building of its own, it has land in what is known as the Lutheran Church addition—about thirty lots. The elders of the church are: J. H. Berlin, who is also secretary and treasurer, and Nathan Kistler; deacons, W. H. Kuhns, A. B. Zimmerman, Israel Helsy and H. N. Waterbury; trustees, S. K. Clarke and W. H. Smith. The organization has also a Sunday school of forty-five members, of which J. H. Berlin is superintendent.

Church of Christ.—The members of this religious body effected an organization in Atchison in 1869, with James F. Butcher and T. B. McCleery as elders, and J. A. Ham, James A. Patton and J. J. Locker as deacons, and the last named as clerk and treasurer. Elder W. J. Rogers officiated for one year, succeeded by Elder James E. Gaston, who remained in charge eighteen months. The meetings then became irregular for several years, and in 1875 the church as an organization ceased to exist. After the lapse of seven years, by the active exertions of C. F. Saunders and lady and other zealous persons, the church was re-organized December 4, 1881, with a membership of twenty-two. Social meetings were held for a season and Elder J. R. Spencer, of Topeka, secured to preach to the congregation. The following were elected as the advisory board: C. F. Saunders, J. G. Sample, T. B. McCleery, J. T. Allensworth and J. J. Locker. The board finally secured the services of Elder M. P. Hayden, of Columbiana, Ohio, who took charge of the church, April 7, 1882. Under his auspices, and by the co-operation of the advisory board, a permanent organization was effected May 28, 1882, with a membership of twenty-five. Meetings are regularly held in the hall, corner of Fourth street and Kansas avenue, and the "Church of Christ" is growing rapidly. Within one year its membership will undoubtedly reach one hundred.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church of Atchison was organized in the summer of 1868. The first sermon was preached by Rev. John M. Wilkinson, who was sent here by the conference of the African Methodist Church. He labored zealously organizing classes and soon succeeded in building a comfortable frame meeting house, capable of seating 125 persons. Rev. Mr. Wilkinson's successors were: Revs. J. F. Jordon, W. H. Sexton, Thomas Strother, John A. Fourshee, W. L. Herod, V. F. Bates, J. W. Wilson, James H. Hubbard, and J. P. Howard, present preacher in charge, who came to Atchison, October 1881. Four years since the frame church building, located on Atchison between Seventh and Eighth streets, was destroyed by fire, but the congregation immediately set to work and erected on the ruins a brick building, 36x60 feet; the last indebtedness on the church, $500, was paid by subscription in a single day, in May, 1882. The church has a membership of 300. The present officers are: Thomas Reed, B. F. Bonner, Jerry Rucker, Harvey Potter, Washington Smith, stewards; Thomas Reed, Harvey Potter, Phillip Porter, James Eads, Robert Heister, class leaders; James Eads, B. F. Barnard, Jesse Miller, Jerry Rucker, Thomas Reed, trustees; Horace Johnson, superintendent Sabbath school. One hundred and seventy-five scholars in school. Regular services every Sabbath morning and evening; prayer meetings Wednesday evenings.

Ebenezer Baptist Church (Colored).—This religious body was organized in March, 1867. A frame house of worship 35x40 feet, was erected the same year. The church books show a membership of forty at the end of 1867. Elder W. M. Twine was the first preacher. Since the beginning, the following named Elders have ministered to the church: Messrs Twine, Sims, Marshall, Morton, Paris, and the present minister, Elder Smothers. In 1876, another church was organized, but after a short time it was consolidated with Ebenezer. Early in 1877, the members were unfortunate in losing their church edifice, and for several years worshiped in private houses, and occasionally in public; but last September they erected their present substantial brick structure, 42x72, on the site of the burned building, and great prosperity now attends them. Since the advent of Elder Smothers, August 9, 1881, 200 persons have been immersed and received into the church. There are at present a little over 500 members. Services are regularly held, Sunday mornings and evenings, and prayer meetings Wednesday evenings.

COLORED REFUGEES.

The spring of 1879 was noted for the excitement caused by the shipment to Kansas and other localities of large numbers of freedmen and women from Louisiana, Mississippi, and other Southern States. Atchison shared the excitement of the threatened irruption. The leaders of public opinion protested that the city did not desire the presence of unskilled laborers. There were no vacant houses in the city, and the public feeling was almost unanimous that Atchison did not want them as citizens. A few shrewd (?) politicians saw in the Southern exodus an attempt to carry Northern States for particular political parties. But the reply of the friends of the party indicated was: "We are already in an overwhelming majority, and do not need the ballots of these freedmen." On the 1st day of May, word was brought by railway passengers from below that the steamer "Joe Kinney," with 250 colored refugees, was making its way up, and would land her human cargo at Atchison. No attempt was made to resist, and the next day the boat arrived and quietly landed at Ketcham's Mill, below town, sent her passengers ashore, and quickly departed. They were poor and destitute, and clothed in rags. Many were without food. The Daily Champion of May 3d, after describing the pitiable condition of the refugees, contended that white people of any nationality, under similar circumstances, landed without food on a strange shore, would have been deeply dejected and loudly bewailed their fate; but in all that black company there was not a whimper or a cry. A boy with a chain cable held on to his dog, and an old woman smoked, with the remark that when the last pipeful was gone she reckoned some kind friend would furnish another. They were poor enough, and all said they were out of provisions, yet they asked no one for food.

The idea seemed to suddenly seize bystanders of all shades of color, that it was a pitiful thing that a lot of men, women and little children, some of them sick, should be in Atchison without food, and a sort of "relief movement" was organized. Doc. Jennings was on hand with his wagon, and started out to collect provisions, and he got them from citizens everywhere—bread, flour, bacon, and the "staples" generally. The Atchison colored people, to their honor, seemed greatly aroused, and came in from all directions with provisions. It was determined to remove at least the women and children, including the sick, to the two colored churches for shelter. The work was vigorously prosecuted under the supervision of City Marshal Benning and others. Among the colored men who were conspicuous in their efforts in behalf of their people, were Jacob Starr, and Messrs. Jennings, Ransom, Rucker, Logan, Morton, Wilson, and Lett. At a late hour many of the refugees still remained on the river bank, sitting around little fires built of driftwood, as patient and uncomplaining as ever. A "square meal" for the hungry refugees wound up Atchison's first day's experience with the emigration movement, the most singular since the Israelites started out for "soldier claims" in Canaan.

Atchison did its whole duty to those who were so unceremoniously cast into their midst, but as an evidence that they did not propose to shoulder more than their own share of the burden, the City Council met in special session on the 3d day of May, and passed an ordinance forbidding the landing of paupers. About the same time the authorities of the A. & N., and Central Branch railroads, proposed to carry the refugees on their roads to counties north and west, where their services were needed, at the rate of one cent per mile. But the most of them obtained employment, and did not long depend on the charity of the people of the city. The women and children found shelter in the two colored churches, and as the season was not inclement, the men shifted along without suffering. The colored people of the city held a meeting on the 4th of May, and took measures to relieve their unfortunate brethren. In this work, Jacob Starr, P. Porter, Merit Davis, J. W. Wilson, I. Venable, J. A. Paris, R. M. Wilson and P. R. Booker were conspicuous.

CITY INSTITUTIONS AND PUBLIC WORKS.

Atchison Water Works.—From the earliest settlement of the city up to the year 1880, one of the most serious drawbacks to a residence in Atchison, was an inadequate supply of wholesome water suitable for all purposes. During that year the people wisely decided, by a vote of 1,309 to 84, to contract with Sylvester Watts, of St. Louis, for the construction of water works on the reservoir plan. The "Atchison Water Company" was organized under the laws of Kansas, and John R. Lionberger, George E. Leighton, Thomas E. Tutt, Charles Parsons and Sylvester Watts, all of St. Louis, were elected Directors, and T. N. Bontelle, Chief Engineer. It was agreed to furnish fifty hydrants for fire purposes and for flushing sewers, together with a number of public watering troughs, the city paying therefor the sum of $6,000. Six miles of mains were laid, and water laid on the following streets: On Ninth from Commercial to Main; on Ninth to Kansas avenue; on Kansas avenue from Ninth to Tenth; on Tenth from Kansas avenue to Laramie; on Seventh from Commercial to Kearney; on Fifth from southern limits to Division; on Atchison from Fifth to Second; on Fourth from Atchison to Riley; on Riley from Fourth to Fifth; on Second from Main to Parallel; on Fourth from Commercial to V street; on V from Fourth to Fifth; on Main from Fifth to Eighth: on R. from Fifth to Seventh; on Seventh from R to Park. The reservoirs are located on the highest ground within the city limits, the top of the settling reservoir being 227 feet above the level of the Missouri river. They are located at the southern extremity of South Fifth street, in Spring Garden Addition. The ground on which the reservoirs are placed was purchased of George T. Challiss for $2,500. From the embankment a magnificent view is obtained of the windings of the Missouri river, the city of Atchison, and the country west and south. The settling reservoir has a capacity of 1,250,000 gallons. Adjoining this on the west is the storage reservoir, capable of holding 3,500,000 gallons of water. The reservoirs are built in the most substantial manner. The pumping works are located at the west end of the Missouri River bridge, and the water forced to the settling reservoir through a ten-inch pipe, capable of discharging 1,000,000 gallons in twenty-four hours. The suction apparatus is worked by a pair of combination engines and pumps, known by machinists as isochronal engines, of seventy-horse power each. They are of thirty-inch stroke, with cylinders twenty-four inches in diameter. The pumps act independently, and each can pump 1,000,000 gallons in twenty-four hours. But one of the pumps is used at a time, thus preventing any stoppage in case of accident. The Missouri River water is agreeable and wholesome. The sediment consists almost entirely of sand. The water is allowed ample time to settle before being drawn into the storage reservoir, and from thence delivered to consumers. The total cost of the water-works was $150,000, and it is money well expended. In this connection it may be well to remark that as a means for the extinguishment of fires, six streams can be simultaneously thrown a distance of 100 feet and upwards—sufficient for all practical purposes. The Silsbee steam fire engine is now a piece of useless property, and will soon be disposed of by the City Council, to some less favored community. There has been no change in the official management of the waterworks company from the first organization, the following named gentlemen still retaining the management: John R. Lionberger, President, St. Louis, Mo.; John D. Davis, Secretary, St. Louis, Mo.; J. B. Quigley, Superintendent, Atchison.

The Police Force.—For the past few years Atchison has had the benefit of a well-appointed department. The first City Marshal, Milton R. Benton, was elected in the spring of 1858, under the first act of incorporation. In September of the same year he was re-appointed, and held office one year. At present the force is divided as follows: One City Marshal, one policeman to guard city prisoners, one keeper of city prison, and nine patrol police. The police is divided into five night and five day men.

From the last annual report of Thos. B. MacGee, Police Judge, it is learned that the 1,511 cases brought before him carried $14,039.65 into the city treasury. About one-half of this sum was paid in fines, and one-seventh "worked out" on the streets by the unfortunates of the chain gang. The most common kind of offenses were: drunk, 149; prostitution, 187; vagrancy, 86: discharging fire arms within the city limits, 81; visiting houses of ill-fame, 59.

The Atchison Gas Company was organized January 21, 1870, with the following directors: Geo. W. Glick, president; A. H. Stryker, secretary; R. A. Park, treasurer. The capital stock of the company is $100,000, all paid up. In 1881 the old works were entirely replaced by new ones, built on a large scale, and including all the modern improvements. Over five miles of mains have already been laid, and the system is being continually extended. The present officers of the company are as follows: A. G. Otis, president; W. W. Guthrie, vice president; H. M. Glancy, secretary; J. P. Brown, purchasing agent. The works are situated on Main street, west of Seventh.

The Atchison Street Railway Company was chartered by the legislature in the winter of 1880, and organized in the spring of 1881 by the choice of the following officers, who are still serving the company: J. A. Beeson, president; W. W. Hetherington, treasurer and secretary; E. H. Luitwieler, superintendent. Under the provisions of their liberal charter, the company has constructed several miles of road, and supplied their lines with good cars. The Fifth street line extends from the water works in the south to the Catholic Church in the northern part of the city; the Commercial and Main street line from the Union Depot to Harmony Garden in the western section; the Commercial and Tenth street line from the Union Depot to the end of Tenth street, with a branch up Kansas avenue. The company employ nine cars, fifteen men, and forty horses and mules.

Fire Department.—The fire department of Atchison was first organized on the volunteer system during the year 1860. Sol. Washer was the first chosen president, and Maj. W. S. Downs the first foreman, with a full force of members. Hand engines were used until 1876, when a Silsbee steamer was purchased, and three years later the volunteer system gave place to a paid department, although Atchison has still a goodly number of volunteers. The wise introduction of the reservoir system has revolutionized the fire department. At present the Silsbee steamer is more ornamental than useful, the water works being capable of throwing large streams of water over the highest building in the city. The present officers of the force are: Samuel H. Kelsey, chief; John Compton, foreman; Wm. Hoover, pipeman; H. H. Wilson and J. H. Johnson, drivers; James Young, watchman.

The Great Fire.—On Sunday afternoon, June 9, 1867, the most destructive fire that ever visited Atchison occurred. Within three hours, two large and valuable blocks of buildings—on both sides of Commercial, between Fourth and Fifth streets—were swept away; twenty-one store rooms, with an immense amount of goods, were reduced to heaps of smouldering ashes; and twenty-five persons were thrown out of places in which to transact business. The lowest estimate placed the loss at sixty thousand dollars. The fire had its origin in a defective flue, and probably burned a considerable time before it was noticed. About one-sixth of the loss was covered by insurance. But as usual there was not the great loss without some compensating gain. The burnt district was soon covered with fine business blocks, and even some of the owners were actually benefited by the conflagration. Better buildings commanded better prices.

BANKS AND COMMERCIAL UNIONS.

In January, 1857, an act was passed, making it a grave offense for any person or persons to either form themselves into an association to carry on banking transactions, or to subscribe to such a purpose. The penalty for its violation was a fine, ranging from $400 to $1,000, or imprisonment of from six months to twelve months. The act establishing the Kansas Valley Bank, at Leavenworth, was approved February 19, of the same year. It provided for branches at Atchison, Lecompton, Doniphan, Fort Scott and Shawnee, Johnson County. As an anomaly in nature, it may be stated that, although the Leavenworth parent was never born, a vigorous son sprang into being in Atchison. Furthermore, the act made the branches entirely independent of the trunk. Startling contradictions! The capital stock was fixed at $300,000, bills payable in gold or silver. John H. Stringfellow, Joseph Plean and Samuel Dickson were authorized to open subscription books. The Atchison Branch of the Kansas Valley Bank was the first institution of the kind in the Territory. The books were opened and an organization was effected early in the spring of 1858, and the capital stock was finally fixed at $52,000; securities $100,000. G. H. Fairchild, late of Waverly, was manager; Board of Directors, Gen. S. C. Pomeroy (Pres.), W. H. Russell, L. R. Smoot, W. B. Waddell, Judge F. G. Adams, S. Dickson and W. E. Gaylord. In denial of the statement made by rival towns, such as Sumner and Doniphan, that the bank was about to suspend, the directors published a statement of its condition soon after the institution was established, from which it appears that the assets were $36,638, and liabilities $20,118. Before the end of the year, Gen. Pomeroy resigned the presidency of the bank, in favor of William H. Russell, of the firms of R. Majors & Co. and Smoot, Russell & Co., two of the largest Government contracting firms in the country. Gen. Pomeroy was chosen vice-president. For many years Col. R. L. Pease was manager of the bank. In 1861, it retired from business, and its legitimate successor, Hetherington's Exchange Bank continued to accommodate Atchison's financial demands.

In January, 1861, by legislative enactment, the name of the bank was changed to the "Bank of the State of Kansas," with W. H. Russell, Pres.; G. H. Fairchild, V. Pres.; R. L. Pease, cashier. It continued business until March, 1866, when the stockholders wound up the concerns of the bank and made arrangements for the redemption of its circulation. E. B. Allen was president of the institution after 1862.

Exchange National Bank of Atchison.—This, the oldest banking institution in Atchison, was established in 1859, as Hetherington's Exchange Bank, in the basement of a building at the corner of Third and Commercial streets. Its founder was William Hetherington. Save for one year during the war, its doors have been open daily. Repeated attempts to plunder it then induced Mr. Hetherington to close out his business and wait for better times. In 1869, it removed to the fine building on the corner of Fourth and Commercial, erected by Mr. Hetherington for the express uses of the banking business, and provided with every requisite for the transaction of business and the security of deposits. In 1876, Mr. Hetherington admitted his son W. W. Hetherington, who had been for a long time a clerk in the bank, to a partnership, and in 1881, another son, C. S. Hetherington, became associated in the business.

"The Exchange Bank of William Hetherington & Co." was changed to the "Exchange National Bank of Atchison," August 1, 1882. The formal change was made on July 21, when the incorporators deposited with the Comptroller of the Currency $100,000 in Government bonds, and completed the steps required by law; but the bank did not commence business until August 1. The directors are William Hetherington, W. W. Hetherington, B. P. Waggener, Frank Bier and J. S. Galbraith.

The officers are: President, William Hetherington; Vice President, J. P. Pomeroy;

Cashier, W. W. Hetherington; Assistant Cashier, C. S. Hetherington; Attorneys, Everest & Waggener; Bookkeeper, John V. Jillich; Assistant Bookkeeper, Charles E. Reck; Collector, Sam Lanphear.

First National Bank.—Organized in 1867. David Auld being elected the first president, in June of that year. W. R. Stebbins, who was elected cashier, remained with the bank one year, when J. T. Coplan, present incumbent, succeeded him. The bank commenced business July 1, 1867, with a capital of $50,000, and a surplus of $20,000 for an increase of capital. One year later, the capital was increased to $100,000. The present surplus is nearly $50,000. The first year's deposits amounted to about $75,000; present deposits, $350,000 to $400,000. Present officers, David Auld, Pres.; C. G. Foster, V. Pres.; J. T. Copland, cashier,; A. M. Lanphear, teller.

Atchison Savings Bank was established in 1869, William C. Smith being president, and R. A. Park cashier. In 1871, A. G. Otis was elected president and still holds that position. Israel S. Parker was the first vice-president of the savings bank, and was succeeded by his son, James W. Parker. The capital stock is $100,000.

German Savings Bank.—Organized in 1873, with the following officers: George Storch, president; Robert Forbriger, vice-president; John Belz, cashier. These gentlemen have continued to serve in the same capacities ever since. The capital stock of the bank is $10,000, and its deposits $100,000. A general banking business is transacted, collections are made in all parts of Europe, and a regular savings department is connected with the institution.

The Atchison National Bank was organized April 1, 1873, with John M. Price as president, M. Barrett, cashier. Present officers: C. J. Drury, president; R. H. Ballentine, vice-president; M. Barratt, cashier. Average deposits, from $125,000 to $150,000; capital stock, $100,000. G. D. Harrison, of Iowa, was president of the bank after Mr. Price until 1878, since which time Mr. Drury has held the position. When it commenced business the capital was $100,000, which, in 1877, was reduced to $50,000.

New England Loan and Trust Co., Des Moines, Iowa.—L. A. Grant, president; D. B. Lyons, vice-president; D. G. Edmundson, secretary; John C. Avery, manager.

John C. Avery established this Kansas department of the company at Atchison, July, 1880, having had charge of the business in this State since that time. The business amounts to about $750,000, principally east of the sixth principal meridian, and they contemplate working the entire State, expecting in 1882 to do a business of, at least, $1,000,000. They now employ about sixty local agents in various parts of the State negotiating loans, mainly on improved farm and city property.

The Atchison Board of Trade was incorporated by the Legislature November 29, 1881, and since that time has been of great benefit to the business men of the city. Elegant and commodious rooms have been fitted up on Fifth street, and the usefulness of the board is now universally acknowledged. The object of the movers is stated in article one of the act of incorporation. To increase the business facilities, advance the commercial character, and promote the manufacturing interests of the city of Atchison, by bringing buyer and seller nearer together; by inculcating just and equitable principles of trade; establishing and maintaining uniformity in the commercial usages of the city; acquiring, preserving and disseminating valuable information. Residents of Atchison may become members by the payment of an initiation fee of $25. The officers are: William Bowman, president; S. R. Washer, vice-president; T. B. Gerow, secretary; R. A. Park, treasurer. Number of members 112.

The Merchants' and Bankers' Mutual Benefit Association of Atchison. Organized November 15, 1879. First Directors: A. H. Lanphear, Robert Forbriger, W. W. Cochrane, A. B. Bradish, M. Bosworth, H. M. Glancy. Present officers: A. H. Lanphear, president; Robert Forbriger, vice-president; W. W. Cochrane, M. D., medical director; D. B. Rogers, secretary; John Francis (State Treasurer), medical director; W. W. Cochrane, A. H. Lanphear, A. B. Bradish, P. I. Bonebrake, M. Bosworth, H. M. Glancy, Robert Forbriger, board of directors. Headquarters on Fourth street near Commercial.

The Atchison Industrial and Agricultural Fair Association was organized in the summer of 1880, and an exhibition given the same year. The association purchased forty acres of ground two miles southwest of the city for $12,000, and during the first season expended $17,000 more in buildings, and in adorning and beautifying the grounds. It is claimed that the half mile race track belonging to the fair association is one of the most beautiful in the West; that 50,000 people can see every foot of track during a racing contest. The first officers of the association were: John Seaton, president; C. Rohr, vice-president; Edward Fleischer, secretary; W. W. Hetherington, treasurer; B. P. Waggener, chief marshal; John Seaton, Edward Fleischer, B. P. Waggener, C. Rohr, W. W. Hetherington, J. C. Crall, G. W. Glick, board of directors. The officers for the present year are: John Seaton, president; M. L. Sargent, vice-president; H. R. Bostwick, secretary; L. L. Todd, treasurer; Dr. D. J. Holland, chief marshal; John Seaton, D. J. Holland, J. C. Tomlinson, M. L. Sargent, L. L. Todd, P. R. Peabody, board of directors.

Atchison Typographical Union, No. 18.—This society was organized by charter from the National Typographical Union June 10, 1881. At present the organization has twenty-seven members, and the following named persons fill the several offices: H. C. Patchen, president; John T. Reilly, vice-president; J. L. A. Anderson, recording secretary; James M. Jones, Cor. and Fin. Sec.; John C. Root, treasurer; S. E. Cline, sergeant-at-arms; Samuel Filson, C. W. Blakeley, C. L. Mathers, directors; James M. Jones, delegate to the thirteenth session of the International Typographical Union. The regular meetings are held the first Sunday in the month in the Daily Champion office.

Atchison Cigar Makers' Union, No. 61.—Charter was granted by the International Union April 17, 1880. Present officers: John Knott, president; Curtis Stripp, vice-president; George Phingstay, treasurer; John C. Herd, financial and recording secretary. Present number of members thirty-eight.

MANUFACTORIES.

City Mills.—In 1867 Messrs. E. K. Blair and W. W. Auld established their present business in their present location. The building is 24x90 feet, fronting on Fourth street, while on the south is a brick elevator of 15,000 bushels capacity. The entire property is valued at $60,000, the machinery, which has been improved and renewed several times, costing about $15,000. The mills have four run of stone, their daily manufacture being 150 barrels of flour. The brands of which the City Mills make a specialty are "Alpha" (patent), "City Mills" (fancy), and "White Rose" (family).

Central Mills.—In 1871 Capt. William Bowman and Col. Thomas Murphy erected a large three-story brick building on the corner of Sixth street and Kansas avenue. Col. Murphy died in 1879, J. S. Kellogg becoming a partner in the business during that year. The Central Mills are now operated by Bowman & Kellogg. The elevator is situated on the south side of the main building. The firm do a large business, there being some $40,000 invested in buildings and machinery. There are seven run of stone and three sets of rollers, the daily capacity being 200 barrels. Messrs. Bowman & Kellogg employ sixteen hands in their manufactory, and turn out "Ivanhoe Patent," "Central Mills," and "Sterling," as their peculiar brands.

Diamond Mills.—Among the leading manufactories of the city are the Diamond Flour Mills, situated on Main street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. The building is of brick, four stories and basement, and was completed in January, 1879. The main structure is 52x60 feet. Messrs. David Lukens, W. C. North and A. J. North are members of the firm which operates the mills, and although they have been in their present business but a few years they have so expanded it that their transactions amount to $350,000 per annum. The machinery and arrangements of the building are of the most modern stamp, equipped altogether at an expense of fully $60,000. A large sized Salem engine, six run of stone and three setts of rolls, comprise the most important of their machinery. The building is, moreover, well protected from the dangers of fire. The capacity of the mills is 125 barrels of flour per day, the brands manufactured being "Golden Crown" (patent), "Diamond Gem" (fancy) and "Cyclone" (family). A branch of trade that has been carried on extensively of late is the shipment of corn meal to Texas.

Atchison's Elevators are located in the midst of the finest agricultural region of America; with eight railroads centering here, it is not strange that Atchison has become one of the leading grain markets of the West. From the report of the secretary of the Board of Trade it is learned that the grand total of Atchison's grain trade for the year 1881-82 reached the sum of four million bushels, distributed among the several elevators as follows: Elevator "A," total storage, 1,671,000 bushels; Elevator "B," total storage, 200,000 bushels; Elevator "C," total storage, 175,000 bushels; Atchison Elevator Company, total storage, 1,063,000 bushels; Elevator "D," total storage, 250,000 bushels; Goodell's Elevator, total storage, 1,049,445 bushels; Trimmer's Elevator, total storage, 237,500 bushels. There are two other elevators, from which the figures could not be obtained, but estimating their business would make the total transactions for the year over 4,000,000 bushels. With fair crops in 1882 and increased railroad facilities a large increase over 1881 may be confidently expected. Sketches of the principal elevators are herewith appended.

Elevator "A," or Atchison Elevator Co., is the pioneer, and was erected by White, Washer & King in the winters of 1875-6. The original firm was Washer & White, and was composed of Sol. R. Washer and George B. White. It was organized in 1868 and commenced business in a little office down near the river. In 1869, C. J. White, son of George B., came in and the firm became George B. White & Co. In 1870 C. J. White retired, the firm continuing under the name of George B. White & Co. In 1874 S. C. King was admitted and the name was changed to White, Washer & King. In 1878 George B. White retired, and his son C. J. became again a member; in 1879 the firm was again Washer & White. The elevator is located corner of Main and Eleventh streets, north of Central Branch and the A., T. & S. F. tracks, and is easily reached by all the eight railroads centering in Atchison. The storage capacity of the elevator is 80,000 bushels. The engine is thirty-five horse power. It is thoroughly equipped for receiving, cleaning and delivering grain of all kinds rapidly and cheaply. The bulk of the grain handled by this elevator comes from the country tributary to the Central Branch railroad and branches, but they also receive from the A. & N., B. & M., and A., T. & S. F. roads.

Elevator "B" was erected by F. P. Halsey and ready for business October 1, 1877. It was located south of Main street near Tenth, and fronting on the A., T. & S. F. and Central Branch railroad tracks—accessible to all the roads. The structure was substantially built with a warehousing capacity of 20,000 bushels a day, and a holding capacity of 50,000 bushels. On January 1, 1880, the building was destroyed by fire, involving a heavy loss in grain in addition to the house, machinery, etc. The site was disposed of to T. J. Templar & Co., who, when the building was nearly completed failed, and the property passed into the hands of Otis & Co. It will probably be leased to a prominent grain firm. The elevator is divided into two parts, the "high" and the "low." The "low" part is 60x78 feet 54 feet high, and the "high" 30x60 and 95 feet high. The elevator contains forty-eight bins and has a total storage capacity of 200,000 bushels. Cost of building, $35,000.

Elevator "C." The following named gentlemen compose the company organized for the erection of the above-named elevator: W. F. Downs, R. M. Pomeroy, of Boston; Henry Day and A. S. Barnes, of New York. Major Downs is president and general manager, and the elevator is operated under his personal supervision. The incorporation of the company was effected in 1878, and the elevator has now operated for two years and a half. The building contains twenty-four large bins, and has a storage capacity of 175,000 bushels. It is equipped throughout with all the new and improved machinery known to the business, and wholly constructed with a view to economy and dispatch in handling grain. The cost of the building was $40,000. At the time Elevator C was erected it was the largest and finest in the State, and at the present time there are only two of larger dimensions. It contains seven of Fairbanks' standard scales, four of which are improved track scales. The building is 48x85 feet, and stands 101½ feet high.

Elevator "D."—The erection of this mammoth elevator is mainly due to the sagacity and perseverance of Col. M. Quigg, a citizen of Atchison. It is the largest grain-holding building west of the Missouri river. The building is 50x97 feet and stands 127 feet high, with an 18 foot basement beneath. The engine is of the Corliss make, and is of 200 horse power, with two boilers of immense size. In the construction of the building 750,000 feet of lumber was used, and its storage capacity is 250,000 bushels—50,000 bushels more than any other elevator in the Missouri Valley. Exclusive of ground and side tracks the building cost $50,000. By the use of one of the newly-invented steam shovels two men can unload a car of grain in four minutes. Two years and a half since Col. Quigg made the first move for the erection of this building and his efforts were promptly seconded by capitalists connected with the A., T. & S. F. railroad. The stockholders are: T. Jefferson Coolidge, Thomas Nickerson, Alden Speare, W. B. Strong, E. Wilder and M. Quigg. More than one hundred thousand dollars have been expended by the stockholders.

Atchison Foundry and Machine Works.—The above is the title of one of Atchison's most important industrial enterprises. Ten years since, induced by a handsome donation from citizens, Capt. John Seaton, of Alton, Ill., removed to Atchison and erected on the corner of Third and Park streets the foundry, etc., for the manufacture of architectural work, iron and brass castings, steam engines, boilers, jails and sheet iron work. The buildings comprise a two-story brick office, 20x30 feet; machine shops two and a half stories in height, 40x60 feet; iron foundry, 35x100 feet; brass foundry, 20x25 feet; two core ovens, one 12x20, and the other 4x6 feet; a boiler and sheet iron shop, 30x50 feet; a fire-proof pattern store room, 30x50 feet, and a brick blacksmith shop 30x55 feet. The cupola capacity is six tons an hour. This establishment furnished the massive iron work for the Union depot in Atchison, the Union depot at Denver, the Ogden block, the Champion building, and many other fine buildings both at home and abroad; has shipped store fronts for many western towns in Kansas, Nebraska and other States. As an evidence of the magnitude of this interest it may be stated that during the years 1881 and 1882 the amount of work done foots up $300,000. Two years since Mr. Lea became a member of the firm and during the past year Seaton & Lea have established a branch foundry at Lincoln, Neb.

Atchison Furniture Co.—This firm commenced business in April, 1876, at their present location, on the corner of Third street and Utah avenue, under the name of the Atchison Furniture Company. The factory is built of brick, 40x64 feet, three stories high, with basement. Adjoining is the engine house, 18x40 feet, containing an engine of twenty-five horse power; a drying room 16x40 feet supplied with one thousand feet of steam pipe, and facilities for producing a temperature of 200 deg. Fahrenheit. A two-story finishing room, 30x40 feet has been added. The best modern machinery is used in the manufacture of bedsteads, bureaus, washstands, tables, etc. The members of the firm are, S. R. Stevenson, C. H. Farwell and L. H. Sahler—all practical men. They give employment to thirty-five workmen. To accommodate the city trade the company have a handsome salesroom No. 318 Commercial street, where a display of their elegant workmanship is at all times open for inspection. The Atchison Furniture Company employ commercial travelers on the road, and have a large and growing trade in central and western Kansas and Nebraska.

Atchison Sash, Door and Blind Factory.—In the fall of 1878, Messrs. Doane, Marshall & Park, commenced near the corner of Eighth street and Kansas avenue, in a two story building erected for the purpose, the manufacture of sash, doors and blinds, mouldings, brackets, scroll and ornamental work of all kinds. They were successful from the start, and were soon, by the press of business, forced to enlarge their quarters. Their factory is 30x45 feet, three stories in height; engine room of stone, 15x25 feet; and a dry kiln, 20x25 feet. Their engine is forty horse-power. All their work is done on order, and besides Kansas, some of their superior articles are used in Missouri, Nebraska and Colorado. They employ fifteen men. The present style of the firm is Marshall & Park; Mr. Doane withdrew from the firm March, 1882.

The Carriage and Wagon-making interests of the city are represented by J. C. McCully, Sixth street; J. J. Potter, on Main street, carriage makers, and George & J. Ostertag, in the wagon-making line. In the aggregate they employ thirty-six men, and sell wagons and carriages to the amount of $40,000. The pioneer in the wagon, plow and buggy trade was Anton Ostertag, who commenced business in Atchison in 1870. The firm now occupy commodious quarters near the corner of Seventh and Commercial streets.

Atchison Brewery.—From the effects of the State prohibitory law or some other cause, this branch of trade is not as extensive in Atchison as the reports show it to have been three or four years since. At the present time there is capacity for brewing an immense amount of beer, but the sales are mostly confined to the city. Where "prohibition prohibits" the trade has been cut off, and at the present time the brewery is not running to its full capacity. Another fact tends to cause the home manufactured article to meet with obstacles. Large consignments are imported into Atchison from the extensive St. Louis, Quincy and Milwaukee breweries. The establishment now in operation is located in the southwest part of the city near Tenth street.

Linseed Oil Works.—This mill was built by Bryning & Sherer (corner of Park and Third streets), in August, 1878. Soon after Mr Park became a partner by purchasing the interest of Mr. Sherer. The house is built of brick, 30x40 feet, two stories high, with boiler room adjoining, 15x28 feet. They have an engine of twenty horse-power. All the machinery in the mill is first-class. To show the importance of this industry to the farming community it may be stated that when this mill was started four years ago the culture of flax-seed was almost unknown in Atchison County, and at the present time the annual average purchase is seventy thousand bushels. The price paid for the seed is about one dollar per bushel. From one bushel of seed two gallons of oil are produced. This of course shows the annual production of the mill to be about one hundred and forty thousand gallons of linseed oil, for which a ready sale is found within the borders of Kansas. Messrs. Bryning & Grimes are the present proprietors of the works. An average of fifteen hands are employed. The warehouse of the oil works for the storage and sale of stock is located on Main street, convenient to the railroad tracks.

Cracker Factory.—Nearly four years ago Alfred Welsh commenced the manufacture of crackers on the north side of Kansas avenue between Sixth and Seventh, where he leased a commodious house 60x70 feet. He has gone forward steadily increasing his trade from that time to the present. He gives steady employment to eight men, and makes goods to the amount of $3,500 per month, for which he finds ready sales in Atchison and on the several lines of railroads centering in the commercial metropolis of the State. Wherever introduced his brand of crackers has an excellent reputation.

Flax Mill.—In the fall of 1879, two brothers named Backus purchased nearly a block of ground near the Tenth street bridge, and soon erected a tow factory. Their house is 20x60 feet, and but for the great difficulty in procuring straw they would long since have had a very large and profitable establishment; but they have never given way to discouragement and every year make improvements over the preceding year. They have added hemp-breaking to their business, and now manufacture bagging upholsterers' flax and hemp tow. Their products meet ready sale in Atchison, St. Louis and Denver. Backus Brothers have invested $8,000 in machinery, and have purchased since the commencement several hundred tons of flax straw, paying therefore an average of six dollars per ton, and receiving an average of two to three cents per pound.

HOTELS AND PUBLIC HALLS.

In September, 1854, the Atchison Town Association assessed each of its one hundred shares of stock $25, that the citizens might be provided with a bona fide hotel. Accordingly during the succeeding spring workmen might have been seen near the corner of Second and Atchison streets, busily engaged upon a one-story frame structure, with basement. This was christened the National Hotel, and was managed by O. B. Dickerson. In the summer of 1857, the National Hotel was purchased by the New England Aid Society and greatly enlarged. Its sitting room was the first court room, and the hotel itself, was, all in all, quite a gathering place for politicians. The National Hotel, or the "old National House," as it is now called, still stands on the original site but is occupied as a private dwelling house.

Although the National Hotel had been enlarged and improved to meet the wants of a really increasing "public," work was continued on the new Massasoit House. The stone for the foundation was taken from the bluff terminating on the north side of C street, and the hotel, a large four-story structure was opened September 1, 1858. Col. Abell seems to have been the principal mover in this enterprise, as in many other schemes for the good of Atchison, and replied, consequently, when the new hotel was "toasted" at the banquet held on the first of this month. Col. Thomas Murphy was the landlord and a popular one. The Massasoit House was destroyed by fire September 1, 1873.

Otis House.—This hotel, the leading one of Atchison, was opened in May, 1873. It was built by Mr. Eldredge, of Lawrence, at a cost, with furnishings of $60,000. The building is of brick, four stories, 105 feet on Commercial, by 120 feet on Second, and contains 113 rooms, or accommodations for about 200 guests. The proprietors of the Otis House have been Savage & McDaniel, Eldredge & Everest, George L. Andrews & Co., C. C. Burnes & Co. Moor & Webb, G. L. Webb and Alexanders & Webb. The hotel has a well-deserved and constantly increasing patronage.

The Lindell Hotel is a fine looking brick structure, three stories in height, located on the corner of Utah avenue and Fourth street. The size of the building is 150x40 feet, and the fifty rooms which it contains are large and well ventilated. It was erected by Jacob Leu in 1873, and first managed by Col. J. W. Lapier, formerly of the Massasoit and Otis houses. Col. Lapier retired in November, 1881. Mr. Leu and David Lugton, formerly of the Otis House, assuming control. The hotel is conveniently situated, and draws its full share of public patronage. The property is valued at $40,000.

Union Depot Hotel.—This new and elegant house extending from Second to Third streets, on Main was opened by J. H. Gardner, in the fall of 1880, and he continued to manage the house until October, 1881, when it was closed until the present proprietors, H. B. Salls & Co., took charge the beginning of 1882. The Union is first-class in every respect. Having leased the St. James as a lodging house, Salls & Co. can accommodate a large number of guests. Attached to the Union and St. James are sixty-five first-class bed rooms.

Atlantic House.—This is one of the first-class hotels of Atchison, the main building being erected as a private residence. Its size is 45x80, the house being situated on the corner of Utah avenue and Fifth street. The house contains 30 rooms, and comfortable and home-like accommodations for 60 guests. The property is valued at about $13,000. Mrs. N. K. Wakefield is the proprietress.

The Tremont House, a commodious three-story frame building, corner of Second and Main streets, was erected for a hotel in 1860, and has been occupied as a hotel ever since by Mr. John Reisner, the proprietor. The Tremont contains thirty-six rooms, and its central location has always given it popularity.

The Kansas House is a new two-story and basement brick, built for a hotel in 1881, by Patrick Laugan, and contains fifteen rooms. It is located on the northeast corner of Ninth and Main streets.

The Pacific House, corner of Fourth and Main streets, a two-story and basement brick house, located within ten rods of the Union Depot, has been occupied as a hotel for two and a half years by George Iverson, Jr. The Pacific has a large number of day boarders, and ample accommodations for transient guests.

The Avenue House, on Kansas, between Sixth and Seventh streets, was erected for hotel purposes in 1867. The earliest mangers were Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Stokes. J. G. Hutchinson, the present popular proprietor has conducted its affairs for the past three years. The Avenue is noted for its quiet comforts.

In the year 1871, the opera house, known as Corinthian Hall, was erected by Judge C. G. Foster, of Topeka, C. J. Drury and Dr. J. M. Linley, of Atchison. The hall occupies the second story of a block on the west side of Fourth street, between Kansas avenue and Commercial street. Corinthian Hall has seventy-five feet front, is eighty feet deep, and has a seating capacity of six hundred. The stores below are occupied by Frank Howard and Jansen & Co.

Turner Hall, located southeast corner of Kansas avenue and Sixth street, was erected by the Turner Society in 1867. The house is two stories in height, the lower story of which is used as a gymnasium, and the upper floor, 45x70 feet, for concerts, balls, etc. The society employ a teacher of gymnastics, who in addition to members of the Turners' organization, gives instruction to a class of seventy-five pupils. Connected with the premises is a garden, one hundred and fifty feet square, supplied with water and gas, that is a fashionable resort during the summer months.

CEMETERIES.

Oak Grove Cemetery.—On the 1st of December, 1863, a meeting of citizens of Atchison was held at the Congregational Church, to organize a cemetery association. S. D. Storrs acted as chairman and J. S. Harker, secretary. Messrs. John M. Crowell, John M. Price, Theodore Bartholow, James W. Martin, George W. Howe, C. M. Stebins, E. Cheesebrough, G. W. Bowman and P. H. Bowman were elected trustees. It was voted to name the association the "Atchison Cemetery Association." On March 8, 1864, a meeting of the trustees was held and P. H. Woodard was elected president; James Martin, vice president; John M. Price, secretary; John M. Crowell, treasurer. Thomas Wise and John C. Auld were elected trustees. During the year twenty acres of land was purchased for cemetery purposes. The price paid was $2,000. The grounds were laid off, but in June, 1872, the ground was sold to P. L. Hubbard, H. C. Park and V. W. Parker. These gentlemen determined to organize a cemetery association, and, accordingly, on June 2, 1873, a meeting of the "Oak Hill Cemetery Association" was held, and the following officers elected: John M. Price, president; P. L. Hubbard, vice president; H. Clay Park, secretary and treasurer. Articles of association were adopted and measures taken for beautifying and improving the grounds. The association, in charge of the same officers, has gone steadily forward in the work of improvement. Atchison's resting-place for the dead has been well named, as tall, elegant oaks grow thickly upon the hill. It is also desirably located upon a beautiful rise of ground, with easy-sloping sides, every part being easily accessible by carriage drives, commanding a delightful view.

Mount Vernon Cemetery Association.—In April, 1864, a number of citizens purchased twenty acres of the Challiss property, about a mile and a half southwest of the city, for the purpose of providing a burial ground. On the 23d of that month, Messrs. Jacob Saqui, William Jackson, John A. Chase, Jacob Leu, Robert Forbriger, Manuel Frank and Henry Diesback met and organized with the first named gentleman as chairman of the association. In 1882, the association purchased another twenty acres. The cemetery is on high ground, and is tastefully improved. Present officers of the association, A. G. Otis, president; Jacob Leu, vice president; Robert Forbriger, general manager and secretary.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

SCOTT AIKEN, carpenter, came to Kansas, March 5, 1877, and located in Franklin County, where he was engaged in farming, and where he remained until January 1878. From there he went to Neosho County, where he remained about four months, then came back to Franklin County and remained a couple of months; then went to Johnson County, where he remained the same length of time; from there went to Burr Oak, Kan., where he lived eight months, and from there came to Atchison, where he has since resided. Mr. Aiken is a member of Castalia Lodge, No. 4, I. O. G. T. He was born in Lawrence County, Pa., February 7, 1858, and remained in his native place until he came to Kansas. He was married in Atchison, May 17, 1882 to Anna Oxandale, who was born in Norton, near Moulton, Yorkshire, England.

EDWIN C. AINSWORTH is a native of New Jersey. In 1848, he removed to Wisconsin, where he resided until he came to Kansas in 1871, and located in Atchison. He is now manager of the extensive business of Hewitt & Rounds, having been with the concern since it was started by A. B. Bradish & Co., in December 1871.

FRANK P. ALLEN, livery and sale stable, North Fourth street, was born in Cass County, Mich., March 22, 1851, but came to Kansas in 1857, with his parents, who settled on a farm eighteen miles west of Atchison. When 15 years of age, the subject of this sketch began freighting across the plains, and made five trips to Salt Lake and one to California. He is doing an excellent business at his livery and sale stable, sometimes keeping as many as fifty horses; also runs a sample room in connection with it. Mr. Allen was married in this city, in 1877, to Miss Jennie, daughter of Peter and Jenette Reid, who came to Kansas as early as 1858.

PHILLIP N. ALLEN, teamster, residence on Fifth street, between Division and L streets, was born in Moniteau County, Mo., September 2, 1840. His parents were Alfred H. and Varana—the former of Irish and German extraction, the latter from Switzerland. His father kept a boat store and hotel at St. Joseph, same State, but in 1854, opened the first hotel in the city of Atchison. Here the subject of this sketch lived until 1860, when he left for the mountains—his employment, freighting across the plains. This he continued six years, then returned to Atchison where he has since made his home, and where his father died in 1879. Being here during war time, Mr. Allen saw a good deal of and met with various encounters from the Pro-slavery band, and at one time old Pardee Butler was taken from his father's house, and an attempt made to hang him. They changed their plans, however, and set him afloat on the Missouri River instead, and after he returned they tarred and cottoned him, as feathers were too scarce.

SAMUEL JESSE ALLEN is a native of Washington County, R. I., and was born April 30, 1821. He was the son of Stephen William Allen, a well-known citizen of Washington County. The subject was raised and educated in his native State, and learned the machinist's trade. He was crippled in the lower limbs when 12 years of age, caused by a fall. He was an operator and builder of machinery in Rhode Island for a considerable length of time, and here for six years has pursued the same vocation. In 1857, came to Illinois, residing for a time in Will County, and for about ten years was a resident of LaSalle County. In 1867, came to St. Joseph, Mo., and for a short time was in business there, coming to Kansas in the spring, 1868, locating in Doniphan County, where he still owns a fine farm. This he made his home while attending to his special line in different parts of the State. In 1878 took up his abode in Atchison. During his sojourn, he has done a large amount of contracting and building. He owns one of the best quarries in Atchison County. At present he is interested in the flour and feed trade, doing a business that will compare favorably with any in the city. Mr. Allen was married in Rhode Island, in 1840, to Miss Alice A. Clark. By this union they have five children: Jesse C., Ada (now Mrs. Whitney), Samuel S., Lorinda C. (now Mrs. William Anderson) and Frank. He was born in Holbeck, near Copenhagen, Denmark, September 5, 1838, and lived in his native place until he came to Kansas. He was married in Rondas, Denmark, November 12, 1871, to Dorothea Bernsen, a native of Denmark. They have two children, one of whom, Atlantic Barth, was born at sea, while his parents was coming to this country. As his birth took place at the exact moment the captain of the vessel had completed his observation for the day, it was easy to ascertain the precise latitude and longitude where the little stranger was ushered into existence, which is latitude 38 deg. 26 min. north, and longitude 48 deg. 34 min. west, and which accounts for the first part of his name. Their other son is named Julius Gearhardt.

JAMES ANDERSON, manager of the street railway, for the Atchison R. R. Company, came to Kansas in 1865, and from that time until October, 1880, had an interest in the Transfer Line at Lawrence. He then came to Atchison, and in April of the year following engaged with the above company. Mr. Anderson has the supervision of twenty-five men and nine cars. He was born in Loudoun County, Va., March 18, 1848, where his father followed farming, and was killed in battle, as captain of the Loudoun Rangers in the Confederate army. The subject of this sketch also had an older brother, Fleming, who was a soldier in the same company, and was killed while talking to his mother in his own home at Taylortown, Va. Mrs. Anderson was formerly Miss Josephine, daughter of John and Frances Oliver, who were among the early settlers of Atchison County. They were married at Leavenworth in 1872. In 1870 he settled in Washington County, Kan., and engaged in farming until 1876, when he removed to Atchison, and contracted getting out railroad ties until he established his present business.

W. S. ANDERSON is a native of Allborg, Denmark. He was born January 31, 1854, and came to America with his parents, Niels and Sophia Anderson the following year. They first located in Missouri, where they remained until 1857, when they moved to Kansas. Mr. W. S. Anderson was married in Atchison, July 30, 1877, to Emma E. Page, of McHenry County, Ill. F., and is now engaged in the grocery business, No. 805 Commercial street, Atchison, Kan.

R. S. ANDREWS, dealer in wall paper. Among the pioneer painters in Kansas is the subject of this sketch. He is a native of New York, and was born in Otsego County, March 2, 1834. At an early age he removed to Oneida County, thence to Chenango County, where he learned the painter's trade, after which he came to Illinois, and was in the employ of the C., B. & Q. R. R., painting the depots along its line, with headquarters at Galesburg. The spring of 1859 he came to Atchison and bought out a paint shop. Being in limited circumstances it may be said of him that he made his fortune in Atchison, on its bed rock. From that date he has been almost constantly identified with the city's interest, and a large amount of the artistic work in the city has been done by him. In 1861 he enlisted in Company G, Eighth Kansas Volunteer Infantry. Aside from being after Quantrell, in Missouri, he was at Fort Leavenworth, in the Government employ, having charge of the painting at the fort, where he remained two and a half years, and returned to Atchison. The first house he owned in Atchison he resided in for twenty years. Mr. A. is a pleasing and well informed gentleman, and is one of Atchison's most solid citizens and business men. He married in the autumn of 1859, Miss Lucy Ensign. By the union they have had ten children, six of whom are living—Clara, Winford, Grace, Benjamin, Charles R., Lucy; lost, four—Randolph, Minnie Belle, George and Willie. H. and N. W. Arthur. The business was established in 1879. W. H. Arthur, of the above firm, was born in Quincy, Ill., January 16, 1853, received his education in his native city, and at an early age commenced clerking in the stationery business, and with slight exceptions has since continued in it. In 1879 he moved to Kansas, settled in Atchison, and organized the present firm. He was married in Quincy, Ill., May 6, 1880, to Miss Minna Sommer, a daughter of Aldo Sommer, Esq., a leading wholesale druggist, of Quincy, Ill. They have one child—James Sommer Arthur. N. W. While in his native State his occupation was that of a merchant, and in 1857 he came to Kansas. His first engagement with the U. S. Express Company was at Lawrence, this State, the same year of his arrival here, being deliverer and general helper in the office at that place. After two years' trial at this he was advanced to messenger on the road, his route being changed a number of times, and in 1873 located at Atchison, and in 1878 was appointed to his present position. Mr. Ayres is now among the oldest expressmen in the State, and by strict attention to business, and the adept manner in which his various duties have been performed has acquired the reputation of a man thoroughly acquainted with his business.

LIEUTENANT DAVID BAKER. One who has figured conspicuously in the growth and development of the Western country is David Baker. He is a native of Indiana, and was born in Tippecanoe County, July 7, 1833, near the town of Dayton. He is the son of William and Hannah Baker, the former being of English extraction. The first of the family to come to America was Thomas Baker, a Colonel in the English army, who resigned that position to come to the Colonies, settling on Long Island, while it was yet in possession of the Dutch. William Baker was born in New Jersey, and emigrated to Ohio, settling in Butler County, in 1807. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. In 1827 he moved to Indiana, being among the pioneers of Tippecanoe County. There he opened a farm in the timber, and endured the hardships and privations subsequent to the first settlement of a new country. He was a man closely associated with religion, and class leader in the United Brethren Church, and his house, for a number of years, was used to hold services in. His death occurred February 19, 1844. He was married twice. By his first wife he had six children. One son—Robert, lived in Dayton, Ind. The other—Thomas, is proprietor of the Grand Hotel in Indianapolis. Mary Ann was married to Moses Graft, a prosperous farmer. Had a large family. Rachel married a well known physician—Dr. D. H. Crouse, of Dayton, and is now deceased. Two of her children are living, one of whom is Rev. M. V. Crouse, an able clergyman of the Presbyterian Church, of Franklin, Ohio. The other two children of William Baker died when they were young. His second marriage was with Hannah Moore, a native of this country, but of Irish parentage. William Moore was in the war of 1812, and in General Hull's surrender, and then paroled, but in a short time returned to the army and fought until the close of the war. Hannah Moore Baker was the mother of six children, three of her sons being farmers—Abner in Kansas, Josiah in Illinois, and Samuel in Indiana. The youngest—George W., died in infancy. Her only daughter—Martha Jane, married Dr. J. A. Wood, who, for a number of years, was a resident of Atchison County, Kansas, but since the war has been a resident of Monticello, Ind., at which place he died in 1878, leaving a family of five children. Mrs. Baker, after the death of her husband, married Henry Goble, and removed to Clinton County, Ind. She was a pious woman, and a faithful adherent to the United Brethren Church. Her death occurred in 1851, in the full triumph of her faith. Her last words were: "Glory! Glory!" As she opened her eyes once more, to behold her son David, for whom she had seemed to be waiting for hours just at the door of death, then she sank peacefully away. The education of David Baker and his brothers was limited, owing to the poor school facilities in Indiana at that early day. His chief amusement while pursuing the routine of the farmer boy, was that of hunting and fishing. When fourteen years of age he went to Dayton to learn the carpenters' trade with his brother Robert, serving an apprenticeship of three years, when he followed the trade for about the same length of time in Lafayette, Ind. On the 4th of June, 1855, he married Margaret J. Alexander. She lived only until the following year, June 20th, when her death occurred, leaving one infant daughter—Alfaretta Jane, who died a few months later. She was a religious and educated lady, fond of literature, and an admirer of poetry. A few months after this Mr. Baker came to Kansas, arriving in Atchison County September 19, 1857. He purchased a share in the Summertown Company, and pre-empted 160 acres of land near Lancaster, ten miles west of Atchison. He left Kansas December 5, in company with thirteen others, in a skiff, and rowed to Jefferson City, where they took the cars, he returning to Indiana. The 9th of March, 1858, he married Rebecca Foreman, daughter of John Foreman, a pioneer of Indiana. Returned to Kansas with his wife, arriving at Sumner April 29. There he worked at his trade two years. In 1858-59 was township collector and treasurer, and in 1859-60 was marshal of the town of Sumner, an unenviable position at that day, owing to the border element, and Mr. Baker had in many instances some of the most noted outlaws to deal with. Being a Free-state man he took an active part in the affairs of the time, and was a delegate to the first Republican County Convention. His life is replete with incidents too numerous to mention, but A. D. Richardson, the author of "Beyond the Mississippi," who was a personal friend of his, has pictured the scenes of those times to perfection. In 1861, he began to open his farm, but as the war of the Rebellion was fully upon us, he entered the military service. He was mustered into the volunteer service as a private soldier, in Company G, Eighth Kansas Infantry, November 11 1861, and on the 14th was ordered to Lawrence for drill. While there, November 21, 1861, was promoted to the rank of First Sergeant of the company. From December 20, 1861, until January 16, 1862, the regiment was guarding the border. Three companies, A, D and G, were ordered to Fort Kearney, where they arrived on March 12, and remained until April 15, when Company G was detached and sent to Scott's Bluffs, on the overland mail route, to quell Indian troubles. On May 22 the company was ordered to Fort Laramie, where they remained on garrison duty until January 12, 1863, when they were ordered to join the regiment at Nashville, Tenn., marching from Fort Laramie to Leavenworth, thence by rail and water to Nashville. They assisted the regiment on provost duty in the city until June 7, 1863, when all the companies were ordered to Murfreesboro, Tenn., where the regiment was assigned to Third Brigade of the First Division, Twentieth Army Corps, and on June 24 marched under General Rosecrans to Tullahoma, then to Winchester and Stephenson, Ala., and across the river to skirmish with the enemy. While at Winchester, July 25, 1863, Mr Baker was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Company G, but as it was then below the minimum number, he was not mustered on his commission, and on September 9 received a commission as First Lieutenant, but was again not mustered, as the army was on the move, but acted as First Lieutenant in his company, and on September 19, 1863, was engaged in the battle of Chickamauga, where he was severely wounded in the left leg, and taken prisoner, lying four days on the field without any attention. His leg was amputated by a surgeon of the U. S. Army, who was also a prisoner. After twelve days he was paroled and sent through the lines, and was taken to the officers' hospital at Chattanooga, where he remained until sent to Nashville, Tenn., November 10, 1863. November 30 he received leave of absence for thirty days, to visit his wife and friends at Lafayette, Ind., when he returned and made application to be mustered in on his commission, which was granted by the War Department, and he was mustered November 21, 1864, to date from September 9, 1863. He was then ordered to report to Major A. W. Gazzona, commanding the Veteran Reserve Corps at Nashville, Tenn. Was detailed for duty with detachment of the 148th and 151st companies of the Second Battalion of the Veteran Reserve Corps, at general hospital No. 19, on the 12th of January, 1865. He was released and ordered to report to Captain J. H. Meyer, at the Cumberland Hospital, January 18, 1865. He assumed command of the 154th company of the Second Battalion of the Veteran Reserve Corps, and in addition had command of the 152nd company of the same battalion. May 31, 1865, he was released from duty from the hospital, and assigned to duty as acting assistant quartermaster and acting assistant commissary of subsistence of the Veteran Reserve Corps. June 27, 1865, he also assumed the duties of acting assistant adjutant of the corps. He served on general court martial duty for some time, and continued in his duties for the Veteran Reserve Corps until the close of the war. December 11, 1865, he left Nashville and returned to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he was mustered out January 10, 1866. He is deserving of special mention and the commendation of all true patriots, for the active part he took in quelling the Rebellion. Mrs. Baker also is to be complimented as a woman who shared the hardships of camp life with her husband. With two children she accompanied him to Fort Laramie. At this place was born their third child, November 24, 1862, a son whom they named Robert Laramie, in honor of the birthplace. When her husband was sent to Nashville she left him at St. Louis and went to her parents in Indiana; remained about one year; while there Robert Laramie died, his sickness beginning the evening of his father's return on leave of absence, after being wounded, and his death occurred six weeks later, February 12, 1864, when Mrs. B. went South with her husband; was an eye-witness to the battle of Nashville, and remained with him to the close of the war. Her two oldest children were born in Sumner, Kansas—Addie L., March 12, 1859; Solon Byrd, September 8, 1860. The others were all born in Atchison—Mary Eldora, April 4, 1867; Edwin M., February 5, 1869; Eva Hortense, January 24, 1870; David H., January 30, 1873; Estella, July 13, 1876; Ruth, March 30, 1878, and Blanche, born January 28, 1881. Addie L. was married December 15, 1880, to William Carlyle, one of Atchison's well known business men. At the close of the war Lieutenant Baker returned to Kansas, locating in Atchison. He entered the drug business with Dr. Horn, but lost his whole stock by fire in 1868. At present he is engaged in the grocery trade, in connection with a meat market, and doing a thriving business. Mr. B. is a member of the Methodist Church. Politically, he is a strong Republican, and in 1871 was elected by that party to the office of County Treasurer, discharging the duties creditably to himself and the satisfaction of his constituents. He was a prominent candidate for the following term, but was defeated by a small majority. He was also a candidate in 1874 for State Treasurer, but finally withdrew in favor of one of the opponents. Since that time he has been leading a quiet life, the surroundings of his home and happy family indicating comfort and prosperity.

H. W. BARKOW, of the firm of Barkow & Ash, boot and shoe dealers. This gentleman is a native of Germany, and was born in Prussia, October 16, 1830; was reared and educated in his native country. In 1869 came to the United States, locating temporarily in Milwaukee, Wis., after which he came to Atchison. Mr. Barkow being in meagre circumstances on arriving in Kansas, engaged in working on a farm outside of Atchison, and the first money he earned in this country was in tilling the soil. For three years he was in the employ of Judge Otis, in Atchison. In 1877, he engaged in the boot and shoe trade in company with H. A. Sore (now deceased); his present partner, Mr. A. J. Ash, joined him in 1880. Mr. Barkow is one of the most genial gentleman, and has a host of friends throughout Atchison County. He married January 10, 1878, Miss Katie Sutter. By this union they have three children—Minnie, Frank and Lillie.

F. M. BARNES, hardware salesman, came to Kansas in August, 1871, located in Penn Township, Osborne Co., and engaged in farming there until March, 1881, then removed to Osborne City in the same county, where he remained until he came to Atchison, March 1, 1882. Employed in the same position which he now fills since he came to this city. He was married at Osborne City, September 18, 1879, to Clara S. Bliss, a native of Illinois. They have two children—Lena and Albert. Mr. Barnes was born in Middleburgh, Pa., November 23, 1852. Removed from there in infancy with his parents, John L. and Catherine L. Barnes to Reading, Pa. They lived there until August, 1871, when the family came to Kansas, where they resided until the mother died in 1874; father now resides in Osborne City, Osborne Co.

Prof. B. had been a teacher during his vacations at the college, and after graduating came to Pennsylvania and accepted the position of associate principal of the Mt. Joy Academy at Mt. LUTHER C. CHALLISS, was born June 26 18 9, at Imlaystown, N. J. His father was the late Rev. James M. Challiss, a distinguished Baptist clergyman, of whom a memoir was published in 1870. The education of Luther was limited to the common schools of that early day, consequently his success of later years can be attributed to natural ability. At an early age he left the home of his childhood and went to Philadelphia, where he was apprenticed to the mercantile business, and remained till nineteen years of age. Then having a desire to try his fortune in the West, he emigrated to Booneville, Mo., where he entered the mercantile house of Caleb, Jones & Co., as clerk, but after serving one year as such he was taken into partnership. In 1855 he sold his interest with that firm and came to Atchison, Kan., and was among the first settlers of that place. His brother George had preceded him and in 1854 erected the first building and opened the first store at this place. Upon arriving here, Luther purchased his brother's store, and did a large business, a good deal of his trade coming from the various Indian tribes. He was also commission merchant for the Mormons and for Major Russell & Co., government freighters. Mr. C. was afterward a banker and a member of the first Free-state Council in 1859-60, exercising a controlling voice in some of the most important measures. He was a member of the first City Council, and proprietor of what is now known as L. C. Challiss' addition to the City of Atchison, now among the most important parts of the city. In 1857, in connection with his brother William, he established the ferry across the Missouri River, and owned it until the erection of the bridge in 1875. Among the many acts which gave Mr. Challiss prominence in the State Legislature, while he was a member of the Senate, was the plan which he projected and completed for the building of the Central Branch of the M. P. R. R. Indeed it is conceded that he is the father of this great enterprise. He framed the bill to authorize its construction, and secured its passage, and negotiated the famous treaty with the Kickapoo Indians, for their reservation to aid in the construction of the road. He was elected president of the same, which position he retained several years. He was also an incorporator and director of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, the most important railroad in the State, and was from the start among the foremost in shaping the railroad system of the State, especially the roads which center at Atchison. In the exercise of his political power in the State, Mr. C. became intimate with United States Senator Pomeroy, and was mainly instrumental in electing that gentleman to the Senate. In 1862 Mr. Challiss began to divide his time between Atchison and New York City, and during the gold excitement incident to the war, he was intimately associated with A. G. Jerome and Anthony Morse in their numerous operations, and with them was accounted one of the heaviest dealers in the stock and gold market. His success was such that he ranked among the most opulent of that great city and was among the foremost in enterprise and financial ability. Mr. Challiss is now leading a quiet life at Atchison in the management of his estate.

In the spring of 1858, he built another storehouse, and again commenced and continued business alone until 1860, when he sold out and engaged in dry goods trade with S. P. Walters, under the firm name of S. P. Walters & Co., this partnership continuing until Mr. Challiss sold out his interest to Mr. Walters in the summer of 1864. In 1866 he was engaged in freighting to Salt Lake City, and in the fall of 1867, commenced a wholesale and retail trade in groceries in partnership with his brother, Dr. C. Challiss,—firm of Challiss Bros., which has been the firm name since that time, excepting two years when they had a partner. Challiss Bros. discontinued the retail department in 1870, since that time doing exclusively a jobbing business which now amounts to about $500,000 per annum and gives employment to nine men—three of whom are traveling salesmen. Their sales are principally in Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado. Mr. Challiss was born in Imlaystown, Monmouth Co., N. J. His parents moved to Burlington, N. DONALD BROS. This great dry goods firm consists of three brothers—Walter F., William T. F., and James F. They are all young men, and thorough workers. Having been reared in the business they are to-day as conversant with the details of, and possess the necessary requisites to manage such an extensive business as many older heads, and have shown by every move they have made that shrewdness, wisdom and energy are not lacking. Their progress is little less than wonderful, and is the best possible example of what unflinching work and common sense, coupled with economy and watchfulness, will do. As this establishment is the largest dry goods house in Kansas, and forms a very important factor in the growing industries of the State, and at the same time fast assuming proportions and gaining patronage that will place it at the very head of this line of business in the West, we deem it not at all out of place to give a brief description of the same, and a short sketch of the brothers. Both stores are thoroughly metropolitan in their appointments. The Atchison establishment includes four entire floors, with a frontage of fifty feet and depth of 150 feet, supplied with elevators, electric light, and modern heating and ventilating process. Employs thirty salesmen and four cash boys. S. A. Ashmun, of whom mention is made elsewhere in this work, is cashier and credit man; audits all accounts, and has general supervision of this branch of the business. Everything is conducted in an orderly, clock-work manner; and, although "strike while the iron is hot," is one of their mottoes, there is no tumult or confusion so often incident to a large business and frequent rush of custom. While it is not our mission or intention to flatter or puff any particular individual or concern, we can unhesitatingly say that, to the spirit, pluck, and industry of such men as the Donald Bros., is much of the prosperity of these river towns due. Their parents, James Donald and Susan Ferguson, his wife, are natives of Scotland, the former being born and reared in Glascow; while Mrs. Donald first saw the light of day in historic Sterling, under the eaves, as it were, of the famous castle bearing that name, and in the shadow of the wierd walls of the once grand Dumbarton, which the pen of Scott has forever immortalized. Both parents imparted to their children the best of Scottish traits and teachings, for both having received a liberal education, they knew the importance to be attached to it, and the three sons in their boyhood completed an academic course in the eastern schools of this country. Walter F. was born in New York city, September, 1852, and, after finishing school, was immediately placed under the tutorship of his uncle, William T. Ferguson, of the well-known dry goods house of Sheperd, Norwall & Co., of Boston. This uncle, a young man scarcely thirty years of age, was as competent a man in his business as Boston contained; and, although commencing but a few years prior to this as salesman in the linen department at A. T. Stewart's wholesale house in New York, had accumulated a fortune of $100,000 ere he reached the above age. But he had overestimated his physical powers, and the great strain he had undergone mentally, undermined his health, and at an early age he, to whom the brothers of whom we now write owe much of their success on account of his teachings and example, passed to a better home. After the death of his uncle, Walter F. remained in the Boston house but a few years, then entered the employ of his uncle's friends, Taylor, Kilpatrick & Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, where he remained until his advent at Atchison, as senior member of this firm, and is, perhaps, the most competent dry goods expert in the West. William T. F. was born in November, 1854, at Cohoes, N. Y., and after finishing a preparatory course of study in the High School of that city, completed a thorough mathemathical course at Troy, same State. Forty-eight hours had not elapsed after getting his diploma ere he was behind the counter of Cleveland's great dry goods house of Taylor, Kilpatrick & Co. He remained with this firm until 1879, when he came to Atchison. His Cleveland experience was alike both pleasing and profitable to himself and employers, and at the time of leaving for the great West, to drive the stakes for his own store, had attained a high position there, being at the head of the dress goods department, and also buyer for that class of goods. In the firm of Donald Bros. he devotes most of his attention to the wholesale house, and is general business manager. James F. is also a native of Cohoes, N. Y., born in October, 1858. Commenced his education in that city, but most of his school days were passed in Cleveland, Ohio. Prior to coming to this State had been attending Lawrence University, at Appleton, Wis. He is a very competent business man, and anything outside of his work has no attraction for him whatever. Although perceptibly Scotch in discipline, and considered by indifferent people as severe in manner, is just and open-handed in all his transactions. He has charge of the Wichita branch of the business, which is fast growing in importance.

From St. Joseph he went to Omaha, Neb., where he remained about one year and a half and was in the employ of C. F. Goodman, wholesale and retail druggist, as chief prescription clerk. He was in the United States Navy Service in 1864-65, on Admiral Dahlgren's Flag Ship, "Philadelphia," and was mustered out of service in the year 1865. Mr. Douglas was born in New York City, April 26, 1840, and lived in his native city until his eighth year, when his parents removed to New London, Conn., where he remained twelve years, when he removed to Brooklyn, N. Y., and was engaged in the drug business there, until he came to Kansas. Mr. Douglas engaged in the drug business in New London, Conn., in 1857, and with the exception of the year and a half spent in the United States Navy, has been engaged for a quarter of a century continuously behind the counters of a drug store. He was married in Brooklyn, N. Y., in October 22, 1863, to Miss R. Jennie Terry, a native of Orange County, N. Y.

In 1850 began his railroad career, on the Indianapolis, La-Fayette & Cincinnati road, working at the construction of the same until it was completed and was then put on as conductor, and has served in that capacity nearly all the time since, on various roads. Conductor Finkbine is the oldest, most prominent, and we may safely say, the most successful conductor in the West, and is held in high estimation by all of the most important railroad companies. In the fall of 1859, when the Prince of Wales took his extended tour through the United States, the subject of this sketch had charge of the train that took the Prince and party from St. Louis to Vincennes, General McClellan being superintendent of the road. At the time General Lyons was killed at the battle of Wilson Creek, Mo., his train also took the General's remains and its escorts to his former home. In 1881, he came to Atchison and took his present position. Conductor Finkbine was one of the charter members of the Railway Passenger and Freight Conductors' Mutual Aid and Benefit Association of the United States and Canada, and also of the Railroad Conductors' Life Insurance Association of the United States and Canada, the former organization at Chicago, Ill., the latter at Columbus, Ohio. He also belongs to the Knights Templar in Masonic Society, and is a member of the Knights of Honor. His wife was Miss Mary Woodward, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., whom he married October 6, 1847. They are the parents of five children, only one of them now living, namely—E. Cora, now Mrs. G. N. Petty, of Kansas City, Mo. During the war, in 1864, a particular friend of Mr. Finkbine's, one James W. Gaft, wished him to start steamboating, and to exemplify the high esteem in which Mr. Finkbine was held as an enterprising business man, Mr. Gaft even went so far as to give him a boat, which he afterward ran until the close of the Rebellion, and continued to run until the spring of 1867, when he lost the Lady Franklin by fire at New Orleans, when he was running her from New Orleans to Jacksonport, on the White River of Arkansas, under the auspices of Dean, Adams & Gaff, cotton merchants of New Orleans. In the spring of 1865, while running the Lady Franklin, and having the steamboat Eclipse in tow, when near Johnsonville Tenn., the latter boat exploded, setting it on fire, and 150 lives were lost. This is a well known fact, and is recorded in the history of the Rebellion, in connection with the Ninth Indiana Battery. Had over 100 on the Lady Franklin, ice bound, at Paducah, Ky., under medical treatment in his care for three weeks before the ice broke up, so he could take them to Evansville (Indiana) Hospital, where they all got well.

This occurred at the time of the expected penitentiary riot at Lincoln, going from Ashland, Neb., to the former city, a distance of twenty-four miles, in twenty-five minutes. His first experience was as fireman on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, but after one year was given an engine, first as switch in the Elkhart yards and afterward on the road. From this he was advanced to freight conductor, then to passenger conductor for this company, and one year after the Chicago fire engaged with the North-Western R. R. Co. Upon recovery he came to Newton, Kan., where he was engineer until 1875, then entered the employ of the M. K. & T. R. R. as freight conductor, being soon advanced to passenger, and running to Texas. During the early part of 1881, Mr. Fuller got his foot caught in a "frog" at Emporia, and an engine backed over it, which laid him up again four months. When able to be around again he came to Atchison, in July, 1881, and engaged with the Central Branch of the U. P. R. R., but on the 5th of August of that year, he was caught between an engine and a car, which confined him to his bed until October. Albert H. Horton.

CHIEF JUSTICE HORTON. The antiquity of the Horton family is established by the fact that one Robert de Horton manumitted a bondman to his manor of Horton, long before the time of Henry Larey, Earl of Lincoln, who died in 1310. It is also ascertained that the Hortons had a manor house in Great Horton, at a remote period. The word Horton, in the Anglo-Saxon language, means an enclosure, or garden of vegetables. It is said to be derived from ort and tun, ort meaning plant, and tun, enclosed. The name is evidently of Latin origin, and has been known in England ever since the conquest of Cæsar. The Horton coat-of-arms in England is as follows: A stag's head caboshed, silver; attired, gold; and for distinction, a canton ermine. Crest, out of the waves of the sea proper, a tilting spear erect, gold; enfiled with a dolphin, silver, finned, gold, and charged with a shell. The motto, "Quod vult, valde vult:" What he wills he wills cordially and without stint. William Horton, Esq., of Frith House, in Barksland, Halifax, descended from the above mentioned Robert Horton. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Hanson, Esq., of Toothill and died about 1640. He had issue as follows: William Horton, of Barksland, or Bark Island Hall, who purchased in the fifteenth of Charles I, the estate of Howroyde, was born about 1576; Joseph Horton, born about 1578. Barnabas Horton, the ancestor of the Horton family in America, was the son of Joseph Horton, above mentioned, and was born in the little hamlet of Mously, Leicestershire, on the 13th of July (old style), 1600. He came over in the ship "Swallow," between 1633 and '38, and landed at Hampton, Mass. In 1640, he came to New Haven, Conn., and on the 21st day of October, 1640, assisted by the venerable Rev. John Davenport and Gov. Eaton, organized themselves into a Congregational Church, and sailed to the east end of Long Island, now Southold. They had all been members of Puritan churches in England. He built the first frame dwelling house ever erected on the east of Long Island, and that house, in 1876, was still standing and occupied. He died at Southold, on the 13th day of July, 1680, aged eighty years. This Barnabas Horton is known in the history of the Horton family as "Barnabas, the old Puritan." He was a man of sincere piety, and a warm advocate of civil and religious freedom. His third son was born in the autumn of 1640, and was called Caleb. He settled at Cutchogue, Southold Township, Long Island, and died October 3, 1702. Caleb's first child was born September 22, 1666, and was named Barnabas, after the "Old Puritan." Barnabas, number two, had a second son who was also named Barnabas, who was born in Southold, Long Island, about 1690. In 1732, he moved to Goshen, N. Y. The fifth son of Barnabas the third was born in Southold, Long Island, in 1730, and was named Silas. The sixth child of Silas was born the 30th of June, 1770, in Goshen, N. Y., and was also called Barnabas. He married, in 1794, Millicent Howell, and died October 24, 1823, in Minnisink, Orange Co., N. Y. The third child of Barnabas the fourth was born in Goshen, N. Y., February 1, 1800, and was named Harvey. He was married to Mary Bennett, and died May 10, 1840. His children were as follows: Harvey Addison, born March 13, 1832; Millicent Ellen, born September 3, 1833, and Albert Howell, born March 12, 1837. Dr. Harvey Horton was an educated and skillful physician, and practiced his profession with success in Minnisink and the adjoining towns, and enjoyed the confidence of all who knew him. His son, Harvey Addison, was instantly killed September 3, 1861, by the fall of a bridge with a train of cars upon it, one of which he was in, which spanned the Little Platte River, nine miles east of St. Joseph, Mo. The bridge had been partly burned by Confederates, but left standing, ready to fall when the cars came upon it. Millicent Ellen died March 24, 1841. Albert Howell Horton, the subject of this sketch, is the second son of Dr. Harvey Horton and Mary Bennett. He was born near Brookfield, in the town of Minnisink, Orange Co., N. Y., March 12, 1837. He attended the public schools of West Town, N. Y., until thirteen years of age, and then was prepared for college at the "Farmers' Hall Academy," at Goshen, Orange Co., N. Y. In 1855, entered the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, Mich., as a freshman, and remained two years, but was obliged to leave college on account of inability to study, owing to an affection of the eyes. In 1856, he entered the law office of Hon. J. W. Gott, at Goshen, N. Y., as a law student, and remained there until December 15, 1858, when he was admitted as a counsellor and attorney-at-law, at a general term of the Supreme Court, held in Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1859, he came West with his brother, Dr. Harvey A. Horton, and selected Atchison, Kan., as his home, and has resided there ever since. In 1860, he was appointed the City Attorney of Atchison by the Mayor, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of the elected City Attorney. In the spring of 1861, he was elected City Attorney of the city, upon the Republican ticket. In September, 1861, he was appointed District Judge of the Second Judicial District of the State of Kansas, by Gov. Charles Robinson. He was twice elected to the same office, and then resigned, to resume the practice of his profession. In 1868, he was elected one of the electors on the Republican State ticket of Kansas, and was selected as the messenger to take the vote of Kansas to Washington. From 1861 to 1864, in addition to attending to the duties of Judge of the District Court, he assisted in editing the Weekly Champion, a newspaper printed and published at Atchison City. On May 26, 1864, he was married in Middletown, N. Y., to Anna Amelia Robertson, daughter of William Wells Robertson and Adeline Sayer. The children born to them since their marriage are as follows: Carrie Robertson, born in Middletown, N. Y., April 22, 1865; Mary Bennett, born in Atchison, Kan., July 12, 1868; Rosa Sayer, born in Atchison, Kan., June 2, 1871; Albert Howell, Jr., born in Atchison, Kan., April 1, 1874. In May, 1869, Mr. Horton was appointed by President Grant, U. S. District Attorney for Kansas, and held the office until his resignation on July 18, 1873. In November, 1873, he was elected to the House of Representatives of the Legislature of Kansas, from Atchison City, and in November, 1876, was elected State Senator to represent Atchison County. January 1, 1877, he resigned the office of State Senator to accept the appointment of Chief Justice of Kansas, tendered him by Hon. Thomas A. Osborn, the Governor of the State of Kansas. Under this appointment he held the office of Chief Justice until the regular election in the fall of 1877, when he was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of his predecessor, Hon. Samuel A. Kingman. In November, 1878, he was elected Chief Justice of the State for a full term of six years, and holds that office at this time. At the session of the Kansas Legislature, held in 1879, the Republicans had a large majority of the members, but were unable to agree upon a caucus nominee for the U. S. Senator. His name was presented as one of the Republican candidates to be voted for, and upon the final ballot in the joint convention of the Legislature, he received eighty votes. John J. Ingalls received eighty-six votes, and was declared elected. Three votes were scattering. Mr. Horton has been for years a member of the orders of Free Masons and Knights of Honor. He has also been one of the contributing editors of the Central Law Journal of St. Louis, Mo., ever since his promotion to the supreme bench. He is one of the vestry of Trinity Parish, Atchison, and also a trustee of Christ's (Episcopal) Hospital of Topeka. In the summer of 1859, then less than a year in the Territory, Mr. Ingalls was elected Delegate from Atchison County to the Wyandotte Constitutional Convention, being at that time in his twenty-sixth year, and, according to the testimony of one present, "a comely youth to look upon," as well as "the recognized scholar of the convention." R., was robbed of $25.000, by three men, one of them engineer for the same road. The subject of this sketch was chloroformed while the robbery was committed, but six days after he started in pursuit of them, finally succeeding in capturing one of the party. Alfred G. Otis

ALFRED G. OTIS was born in Cortland County, N. Y., December 13, 1828, being the son of Isaac and Caroline A. Otis. While yet a mere boy his father removed to Barry County, in the then new State of Michigan, and engaged extensively in farming. His son, Alfred, with other members of the family, were thus brought up on the farm, and shared all the labors and hardships of a pioneer life. At the age of twenty Mr. Otis resolved upon a professional life, and determined, as the first step, to obtain a thorough classical education; and as the father was burdened with the care of a large family, the son set about the task of getting it for himself. His first studies in Latin and Greek were commenced in the evening upon the farm after the day's work was done. Afterwards, by teaching, he acquired means to prosecute his studies at the Kalamazoo Branch of the Michigan University. Entering as a sophomore in 1849, he graduated in regular course, in 1852. He then went South to the State of Mississippi, where he taught and studied law at the same time. From there he attended the Louisville Law School, where he graduated in 1854, and commenced practice in that city. In October, 1855, he removed to Atchison, Kansas, where he has resided ever since. He engaged at once in the active practice of his profession, and was for several years extensively engaged in the land litigation which, about this time, sprung up in the new Territory, and in which he took a leading and important part. In 1860, Judge Otis, then in full practice, formed a partnership with Hon. George W. Glick, a lawyer of about his own age, recently from Ohio. This partnership continued until 1873, and the firm did their share of the legal business of the State, both in State and Federal courts, and before the United States Land Office. They were the regularly employed attorneys of the Central Branch, Union Pacific Railroad, from 1865, during the whole of this period, and after the dissolution of the firm in 1873. Judge Otis retained the same position until he was elected to the bench in 1876. During this period, though in the full tide of actual business and professional labor, he yet found time to actively aid the Episcopal church, of which denomination he was a member, being the warm personal friend of Bishop Vail, the Episcopal Bishop of the diocese of Kansas. He was also prominently identified with the business and railroad enterprises of Northern Kansas, Atchison being then as now the commercial center for that section of the State. In 1876 Judge Otis, though a prominent Democrat, was elected District Judge of the Second Judicial District, then largely Republican. He served his term of four years to the general satisfaction of the people and the Bar, and, at its close, took an active part in the management of the Atchison Savings Bank, one of the leading banks of the city, and of which he had long been President. This, with the care of his own private business, engrosses, at present, his time and attention. In 1862 Judge Otis was married to Miss Amelia Harres, of Philadelphia, and has by her six children still living—William A., Amy, Mark E., Pearl, Theodore and Carl. The eldest, William A., a young man of eighteen, is a student at the Lawrence University. The rest are still a part of the home circle. The family were in all eight children, two—Grace and Harrison G., having died in infancy. Judge Otis still resides in a beautiful residence overlooking the Missouri River, surrounded by a grove of trees of his own planting, where he first brought his wife in 1862. Of the same family Judge Otis has two brothers, George L. and Charles E., a law firm at St. Paul, Minn., and also two brothers, Ephraim A. and Arthur G., well known lawyers at Chicago, Ill. Another brother, Isaac N., recently deceased, was a devoted minister of the Presbyterian Church at Boulder, Colorado. The father of this family, Isaac Otis, died in 1854. The mother, Caroline A. Otis, is still living.

From there they came to Walnut Township, Atchison County, where they reside at present. When Mr. Owens first came to Atchison, he was employed by Joseph Gottesburen for some time. He then engaged in farming for two years, in Atchison County, and then entered the employ of J. W. Burkhart & Co., dealers in ice, with whom he continued one and a half years. He next entered the service of Gottesburen & Seitz, grocers, and after leaving them, worked in the machine shops of the Atchison & Nebraska R. R., in Atchison, where he remained nine months, and then entered the employ of John M. Bowen & Co., wholesale dealers in wines and liquors, with whom he remained until he went into business on his own account.

Page, who came to Atchison in 1855, and took a claim on Deer Creek, three miles north of the present city, on which he lived two years. He then removed to Atchison and opened a butcher shop, where the subject of this sketch was born, September 27, 1857. He attended the schools of Atchison, and worked at various occupations until 1879, when he commenced railroading with the above company, first as wiper for one year, then as fireman, which he has followed since. Mr. Page is a member of the Locomotive Fireman's Brotherhood of Atchison, No. 31. His wife is Elizabeth, daughter of William Ross of Wellington, Kan., who was one of the early pioneers of that section of the State. They were married August 26, 1878. Mr. Page's father now resides near St. Joe, Mo.

H. CLAY PARK, editor of the Patriot, was born in Irvine, Estill Co., Ky., March 2, 1845. His father died June 30, 1849. When twelve years of age he moved to Platte City, Platte Co., Mo., where for five years he attended the male academy of Prof. F. G. Gaylord. In 1862 he removed to Camden Point, in the same county, and continued his studies under the same preceptor. In July, 1864, he moved to Atchison, Kan., and began the study of law under the instruction of Hon. John M. Price. The following spring he was appointed Deputy Clerk of the city of Atchison. As Mr. Root was then actively engaged in the publication of the Daily Free Press, the labors of the Clerk's office fell mainly on young Park, who performed the work diligently and intelligently, and that he made a faithful officer is evidenced by the fact that at the succeeding election he [illegible] chosen for the Clerkship by an almost unanimous vote of the people. In 1867 he was re-elected, and by appointment of the Mayor and City Council he held the office until 1871. In 1868 he became junior partner in the real estate firm of Fox & Park—at the same time publishing the Real Estate Bulletin. In the autumn of the same year, Mr. Park became associated with Hon. B. P. Waggener and Nelson Abbott in the editorial and business management of the Atchison Daily Patriot, under the style of H. Clay Park & Co. The following year Mr. Park withdrew from the firm and associated himself with his former law preceptor, Hon. John M. Price, in the real estate business. In the spring of 1873, and for a brief period, engaged in the grocery trade with T. K. Park. In 1873 he was elected to represent the Fourth Ward in the City Council, and in 1875 was admitted to the Bar, and in April, 1876, he was elected Chief Justice of Atchison, but after a year's service resigned. In December, 1875, he purchased, in connection with F. L. Vandegrift, the Daily Patriot, and has been its chief editorial writer ever since. The Patriot is ably and successfully managed, and is the oldest daily democratic journal in Kansas. In January, 1879, Mr. Vandegrift disposed of his interest in the Patriot to Thomas Stivers, who attends to the "local" of the office. Mr. Park is respected by his fellow-citizens, and that he stands high in the estimation of his political friends the evidence is found in the fact that he has served as candidate for Presidential elector, delegate to several State conventions, and for two terms a member of the City Council. He has also "passed the chairs" in several secret societies—is a member of the Masonic, Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias organizations. December 24, 1867, he was married to Miss Lizzie Armstrong, of Newmarket, Platte Co., Mo., by whom he has had two children—Mary C., and Gilbert C. Mr. Park is active and influential in all schemes for the upbuilding of his adopted city. As a citizen he is public-spirited and liberal, as a politician frank, bold and outspoken, and a man warm in his friendships. He despises tricksters and time-servers, and like his great namesake, had "rather be right than be President."

He is a native of Vermont, was born in Windsor County, August 22, 1825. His parents were old settlers of the Green Mountain State and removed to North Adams, Mass., when A. N. was very young. Here he resided until thirteen years of age. Early in life he took up the study of medicine in Pittsfield, Mass., afterwards in Syracuse, N. Y.; took lectures in New York City, and in the spring of 1845 graduated in the Crosby St. College of Physicians and Surgeons in that city. He practiced his profession in New York State, Louisiana and Ohio, being located in Rochester, of the latter State, and came from there to Kansas, arriving in Atchison May 1, 1860. He was in very limited circumstances, having but $1.50 when he arrived at the pioneer town of Atchison. He was obliged to sell a large part of his library at a sacrifice, owing to the fact that purchasers of medical works were scarce in Kansas at that remote period. His early experiences in Kansas were fraught with all the drawbacks incidental to the first settlers in a new country. As the county began to settle up his practice extended out, and he was frequently called long distances from Atchison. During the war, like other patriotic citizens he belonged to the militia; was on the Price raid in Missouri a few years after, locating in Atchison, he built a residence and dealt extensively in town property; was engaged in freighting on the plains and in this line was eminently successful for a time, but unfortunately he lost one entire train, on account of an Indian raid; the loss he sustained amounting to $12,000. There are but few citizens who have been more closely associated with Western enterprise than Dr. Sprague, or are more universally popular. When he first came to Atchison there was considerable sickness, and the people were in poor circumstances. He attended to their wants, dealing out hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine which he had in stock, gratuitously, without any prospects of ever being recompensed. During his long sojourn in Atchison he has been noted for the active part he has taken in all matters pertaining to the moral status of the city. He has always been an active worker in the temperance cause and for a number of years was Grand Worthy Patriarch of the Sons of Temperance in Northern Kansas. The doctor has been married twice, first in Albany, N. Y., in 1854, to Miss Louisa Hunt. They had two children—Eugene and Nettie, both deceased. Eugene died in Ohio, and Nettie in Atchison; Mrs. S. also died in Atchison in 1867. Miss Annie Haskins became his wife in 1868. JOHN E. WAGNER, retired merchant, residence on Fourth street, South Atchison, is a native of France, born in Valenciennes, July 20, 1822. Emigrated to the United States in 1850, and for eight years was connected with a large hardware store in Cincinnati, Ohio. In 1858, having a desire, as thousands of other business men of the eastern cities had, to transfer his place of business to some of the young, enterprising towns of the West, he accordingly set forth, in July of that year, to look up a location, having his eye on St. Joseph, Leavenworth, or Kansas City, all three of these towns at that time bearing a good name in the East. After his further examination of several of the western towns, Mr. Wagner decided that Atchison was a very desirable location, but was doubtful of the propriety of opening a hardware store in so small a place. He, however, met with Senator Pomeroy, whose faith in the location of Atchison as one that, in time, must make a large city, inspired Mr. Wagner with a similar confidence, and his decision was that this place should be his future home. Removing from Cincinnati, he at once opened his stock of hardware in the then only brick building in the town, standing on Commercial street, near the Levee, of which Mr. Wagner was the first occupant. Here he did business for two years, meeting with a liberal patronage of the people, and then removed to a frame building on the same street, between Second and Third; but after three years, the growth of the city had been so large that his place of business was too far from the business center, and he erected a brick building on the corner of Fourth and Commercial streets, three stories high, and 25x75 feet, for his business had grown to such an extent that it needed a great deal of room for the display of goods. Here Mr. Wagner continued business until January, 1871, when he sold out to Messrs. Blish & Silliman, and during the same year, in company with his wife, took a trip embracing Colorado, California, Panama, Jamaica, and San Domingo; and since that time they have made several voyages to Europe. Mrs. Wagner was born in Lierre, France, and both are original members of the Congregational Church of this city. In 1862, being in poor health, he sold his interest to his partner, and in 1864 came to Mount Pleasant and opened a general store. On the re-establishment of the post-office at this place, in 1864, he was appointed Postmaster, and has held the office ever since. In 1871, served as Township Treasurer, and in 1874 was elected School Director, and held the office for five years. In 1881, was elected Justice of the Peace. At eighteen years of age he went to Adams County, Ill., where he engaged in farming until 1854, when he moved to Buchanan County, Mo., and in September of that year moved to Walnut Township, Atchison Co., Kan. In 1857, he moved to Mount Pleasant Township, and located on Section 19, Town 7, Range 20, buying 280 acres of land. He now owns 380 acres, all fenced with hedge, stone, and wire; 240 acres under cultivation, with good buildings, grove, and orchards. FRANK NEERMAN, farmer and stock raiser, Section 20, P. O. Atchison; is a native of Germany, and was born in the Kingdom of Hanover, April 30, 1836. When thirteen years of age, came to the United States, locating in St. Louis, Mo., where he learned the harness making trade, after which he went to California, and engaged in the harness and saddlery business in Georgetown, remaining four years, being very successful. In 1858 he came to Kansas, locating in Atchison County, near Lancaster, opened a farm, being one of the first in that portion of the county. He had many serious drawbacks to contend with, which, however, he overcame by untiring industry. After a residence of about nine years on that farm, took up his abode where he now resides, which is one of the most desirable homes in the county, the general surroundings indicating comfort and prosperity. Mr. Neerman was married in 1859 to Miss Isabella Rust, daughter of Henry Rust, a Kansas pioneer. They have by this union six children—Ida, Charles, Alma, Nellie, Mabel and an infant.

FRANCIS MARION POTTER, farmer, P. O. Mount Pleasant, came to Kansas, October 16, 1854, locating in Walnut Township, Atchison Co., where he lived until 1856, when he moved to Buchanan County, Mo., where he resided until 1861, when he entered the United States service as a member of Company K., Fifth Missouri Cavalry, in which he enlisted January 2, 1861, at St. Joseph, Mo., and was discharged June 22, 1863, in the same city. On the 14th day of February, 1864, he again enlisted, at Fort Leavenworth in Company M., Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, and was finally discharged from the United States service in December, 1865, at Fort Leavenworth. He participated in the battles of Sibley, Mo., and Powder River, Montana, and numerous engagements with Quantrell in Southern Missouri. Mr. Potter was First Sergeant of both companies in the two regiments to which he belonged, holding this position from the time he enlisted until his final muster out. Before his final discharge, however, he received a commission as Second Lieutenant of Company M., Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, but was not mustered in, owing to the muster out of the regiment. Mr. Potter is clerk of the Township in which he resides. He was born in Lincoln County, Ky., September 13, 1828, and lived in his native State until his tenth year, when his parents moved to LaFayette County, Mo., where they lived two years and then removed to Buchanan County of the same State, where he resided until he came to Kansas. Mr. P. has a choice and valuable farm of sixty acres, all enclosed and all in cultivation, which this year yielded twenty-five bushels of wheat to the acre. His corn crop yielded sixty bushels and the year before seventy-five bushels to the acre. He has a fine young orchard, which has one hundred bearing apple and about thirty cherry trees. He also has a small vineyard on his farm, the vines being mostly of the Catawba and Concord varieties. He has an abundance of small fruits, such as raspberries, currants, blackberries, and gooseberries. He has a good well on the property and a large spring which flows through the farm furnishing sufficient water to supply his stock.

ROBERT M. PRATHER, farmer, residing on Section 23, Township 6, and Range 20 east, Atchison County, Kan. This old and well-known citizen, a native of Rutherford County, Tenn., was born July 28, 1813; when very young his parents emigrated to Kentucky, and located in Warren County, where his father, William Prather, was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Young R. M. remained and lived with his father until he was twenty-two years of age. During the time of his minority the facilities for obtaining a practical education were very limited, there being nothing better than small and poorly arranged schools, but by dint of perseverance and energy, he succeeded in obtaining a limited education. On the 19th of November, 1835, he was united in marriage with Miss Celia Ann Dyer. After a brief but happy life of three years, Mrs. Prather was called to join that great and innumerable company of the ransomed host. On October 10, 1838, she calmly and peacefully passed away. The fruit of this marriage was two lovely children—Susan H. and William M., both of whom have long since died. In the fall of 1839, Mr. Prather for the first time visited Missouri, having relatives living in Platte and Buchanan Counties—it then being a new country, and known as the Platte Purchase. He remained until the fall of 1840, when he returned to Kentucky. In the fall of 1841, his father and mother with the remaining portion of their family, and Mr. Prather and his two little children removed to Missouri, and located in Buchanan County, where he lived about fifteen years. During this time he was engaged for five or six years in a woolen mill during the summer season, and for about four years was employed as Deputy County Surveyor of Buchanan County, doing a large amount of work in that line. With the exception of these years he has always been engaged in agricultural pursuits. December 26, 1843, he was united in marriage with Miss Martha Jane Walker, who was young and beautiful, and with whom he walked side by side for more than thirty years. In the spring of 1855, Mr. Prather sold his farm in Buchanan County, Mo., and removed to Leavenworth County, Kan., locating on what was known as the Delaware Trust Lands. In the winter of 1856 and '57 these lands were sold at public auction, the bona fide settler having the preference of bidding the appraised value; his claim was knocked down to him immediately. At these sales Mr. Prather bought in his claim of land, consisting of 160 acres. In the spring of 1857, he sold his 160 acres of land for $6,000, and bought a claim three miles from Atchison City, Atchison Co., adjoining Leavenworth, where he resides at this time. This claim in Atchison County was on the Kickapoo lands, for which the General Government had treated with the Kickapoo Indians, and it was subject to be held and entered under the preemption law of the Goverment. When that law was fully complied with, and in April of the same year, Mr. P. moved on to his claim in Atchison County, built a house and improved, and in due time entered the same by pre-emption. At this time his family consisted of himself, wife, and four little girls. His father, William Prather, died in Buchanan County, Mo., on the 29th of August, 1845, aged sixty-four years and one day. His mother, Frances Prather, died at his home in Atchison County, Kan., February 14, 1867, aged eighty-four years. Mr. Prather has been a frontiersman most of the time for forty years, and has endured many privations and difficulties in trying to develop the resources and benefits which might accrue to somebody by the subjugation of the wilderness. Mr. Prather has always been an earnest and true friend to morality, benevolence and religion and to the educational interests of the community in which he lived. He can not remember an instance in forty years of ever having been appealed to for aid in any benevolent enterprise that he did not respond to as best he could. In the year 1860, he, with a few others, conceived and put into execution the idea of building a church edifice near the corner of his farm, mainly for the use of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, but it has always been open for the use of all evangelical denominations of Christians to worship in. The fruits of Mr. Prather's second marriage was eight children, five daughters and three sons, seven of whom are living—the eldest child, Armilda Jane, who was united in marriage with G. W. Carpenter, in February, 1866, died October 19th, 1880. Mr. Prather's wife by his second marriage, though not robust nor physically strong, was a woman of indomitable energy, industry and perseverance. Very much of the success and prosperity of the family and of her husband is attributed to her diligence and untiring efforts to make all who came in contact with her feel happy and contented. Her kind disposition made friends of all who knew her. But alas! The fell destroyer had marked her out as his victim. About the year 1871, her health began to decline and continued to do so until October, 1874. On the 16th of that month the lamp of life was blown out, and her happy spirit was released from her suffering body, and went to dwell where there is no sickness nor suffering. The subject of this sketch is still living at his home, surrounded by some of his children, and at the advanced age of sixty-nine years is feeling hearty and well for a man at that stage in life, and hoping and desiring that when the summons shall come for him to close up his accounts with earth, he may be fully ready and equipped for the journey.

A. SPARKS, farmer and stockraiser, was born in Scott County, Ind., in 1819, and raised in that State. In 1834 he learned bricklaying at New Albany, Ind., and followed that trade until 1845; he then went to Texas, where he remained one year, going to Platte City, Mo., where he ran a boot and shoe store, and a farm, until 1855, when he came to this State and engaged in farming. Was married in Clark County, Ind., in 1843, to Miss Sarah Ellen Campbell, who died in June, 1865, leaving three children—Charles A., Rachel Carrie, and Martha Alice. In 1868 he was married again to Miss Rebecca A. Fisher. They have five children—Joseph, Albert, Andrew, Eveline, and Annie. In 1864 he bought the quarter Section 34, Township 6, Range 20, in Mount Pleasant. He now owns 240 acres of land all under cultivation, enclosed with hedge, stone, and wire fences. Has good buildings, orchard, and grove.

MARION THOMPSON, farmer and stock raiser, P.O. Atchison. One who was favorably known among the first settlers in Atchison County, and figured closely with the development for a number of years was Mr. Isaac Thompson, who came with his family in 1856, locating near where his son resides. His death occurred in Osage County in 1875. The subject of this sketch is a native of Indiana, was born in Putnam County June 1, 1838. He came to Missouri with his parents in 1839, and lived there eight years. After a short sojourn in that State they removed to Oregon Territory in the year 1849, residing four years. During this time went to California, made quite a raise in gold mining, when they returned to Missouri, making the trip by the Isthmus of Panama. Resided in Missouri until they located in Kansas in the spring of 1856. In 1862 Mr. T. enlisted in Company C, Second Kansas Volunteer Cavalry. His duties were principally in Arkansas and Missouri. He participated at the battles of Fort Wayne, Prairie Grove, and Fort Smith, and was on Steele's expedition. He served three years and two months, and was honorably mustered out at Fort Leavenworth. Mr. T. has traveled considerably in the western country and is quite familiar with its topography. Has been constantly a resident of Kansas since 1854 aside from his term in the service and while he was at Pike's Peak. He married in 1866 Miss Nancy J. Southard, an estimable lady. By this union they have eight children living—Albert, William, Mary, John, Melville, Benjamin, Milton, and an infant; lost one by death—Orrin P. The family is identified with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, of which he is an elder. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson, nee Fisk, died in 1852 on the Missouri River when the family was returning from Oregon.

GEORGE W. THOMPSON, farmer and stock raiser, was born in Georgetown, Ky., in 1827. In 1843 his parents moved to Parkville, Mo., where he learned the trade of bricklayer, which trade he followed until his removal to Kansas in 1855, settling five miles south of Leavenworth. In 1856 he moved to Section 34, Township 6, Range 20, Mount Pleasant Township, Atchison County, and has 160 acres, eighty under cultivation, with good fences, orchards, buildings, and timber. In 1859 was elected County Superintendent of Schools, but refused to accept the office. In 1864 was a member of the Twelfth Kansas Militia, holding a commission as First Lieutenant of Company A, and was at Westport, Mo., and took part in the battle against Price's force. Was elected to the Legislature and served in houses of 1867-68-69 as member from the old Eighth district. Was married in Platte County, Mo., in 1850, to Miss Rebecca E. Steigers; have seven children—Benjamin, Mary C., Harriet M., John, Dora, George M., and Clara A.

It has a number of churches, a good district school attended by sixty pupils, a Masonic lodge, a cornet band, seven general stores, a blacksmith shop, a wagon shop, a furniture store, a millinery store, a bakery, a shoe shop, and three doctors. The Presbyterian Church of Effingham was organized in November, 1872, the first members being Peter Carmichael, E. T. During the season of 1877 a frame structure was erected for religious purposes, but the society grew so rapidly that a larger building was found necessary. This was completed in 1881, the original structure being sold to the Baptist society.

The Catholic Church was first built in Effingham, Kan., was in 1872. It was then attended by the Benedictine Fathers of Atchison. In 1876 a resident priest, Rev. During the past year the former church, a frame building 28x38 was remodelled, and forty-two feet added to its length, making now a commodious building 28x80. Close to the church a cemetery was purchased. Lots were lately bought for the purpose of soon establishing a Catholic school.

The First Baptist Church was organized in October, 1881, with fourteen members. Rev. W. D. Abrams, of Whiting, and Rev. Frank Rice, of Valley Falls, acted as pastors the first year, preaching alternately. The church building was purchased of the Presbyterians in December, 1881. Although it now consists of but two stores and about fifty people, possessing a district school attended by sixty pupils, and a Methodist Episcopal Church, in charge of Rev. W. C. Day, Atchison, it is one of the oldest points in the county, the town having been platted as early as 1856. Caleb May was President of the Town Company. Elijah Jones, N. Conley, L. H. Bishop, Col. Coulton, and other early settlers were interested in the town site. Among other early settlers who located in Monrovia and vicinity were S. J. H. Snyder (now dead), who settled west of town; John Helwig, now living in Topeka; N. Connelly and brother; Dr. J. C. Batsle, three miles northwest of town; John Graves, four miles southwest; Samuel Hipple and his son John; Daniel Campbell (dead); Jos. H. Talbott, now of Atchison; Len. BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—BENTON TP.

A. F. ACHENBACH, liveryman; Effingham. This popular citizen and gentleman is a native of Pennsylvania, and was born in Clifton County, January 12, 1847; was there reared, educated and resided until he came to Kansas, in 1869. He first located and was identified with the business interests of the towns of Washington and Hanover, being in the employ of some of the leading merchants of both places, who were engaged in merchandising, and in the grain and lumber trade. In 1876, came to Effingham and engaged in the livery business, in connection with operating a farm he owned in Jackson County. Mr. A. is a public spirited and progressive citizen, and eminently popular with all who know him. He is a member of the Masonic Fraternity, and secretary of Mackay Lodge, No. 48, of Effingham. He was married in 1875, to Miss Hattie Gish, of Kansas, a native of Ohio. By this union they have two children—George and Glen.

GEORGE P. ALLEN, dealer in merchandise, hardware and grain; Effingham. One of the representative merchants of Atchison County, is the subject of this sketch. He is a native of New York, and was born in Brockport, Monroe County, February 12, 1836. He was educated and spent his earlier days in his native town. His father, Philemon Allen, was a prosperous merchant and real estate owner in Clarion County, and was widely known throughout that portion of Pennsylvania. When George P. was fourteen years of age he became a clerk in one of his father's stores, and it may be said that in merchandising he was literally bred in the business. When nineteen years of age he assisted in managing a branch of his father's business. He eventually embarked in business in Brockport, in the manufacture of furniture, conducting a store in this connection, the firm being Smith & Allen; the style was afterwards known as Allen & Paine. Mr. A., in 1871, concluded to come West, where he could find a larger scope for his energies, and in that year engaged in the nursery business on the Salt Creek Valley, a short distance from Leavenworth, Kansas, continuing in that industry until 1878, when he engaged in merchandising at Nortonville, Kansas, and in the spring of 1879 established himself in Effingham. The firm, until the spring of 1882, was known as Allen & Way. Mr. Allen is a progressive, energetic business man, and has been eminently successful in his undertakings. He is a member of the Baptist Church, and among its liberal patrons and supporters. Mr. A. has been twice married, first in 1858, to Miss Juliet A. Spring, now deceased. By this union he has three children—Edgar A., Herbert M. and George A. In 1866, Miss F. Smith became his wife.

He came to Kansas with his parents in 1857, locating in Doniphan County, where his father, R. D. Bartlow, Esq., was familiarly known as one of the pioneers, residing two years; the family then removed to Brown County, where the senior Bartlow is still a resident, his home being near the town of Marak. G. M. was reared in Brown County, his early life being spent in agricultural pursuits. In 1875 he removed to Muscotah, where he followed the carpenter's trade, in which he is proficient, for four years, coming to Effingham from that point. DR. JOHN C. BATSELL, P. O. Monrovia. Among the best known and popular gentlemen of Atchison may be mentioned Dr. Batsell, who for upwards of a quarter of a century has been one of its representative physicians. He is a native of Kentucky and was born in Marion County, March 16, 1818. His father, Thomas Batsell, and his mother, Kesia Knoll, were natives of Culpeper County, Va. He was raised and educated in his native county. He there took up the study and became proficient in the science of medicine. He commenced to practice his profession in Valeene, Orange Co., Ind., where he continued successfully for over seven years. The autumn of 1855 found him in Kansas, and after reconnoitering in Atchison County went to DeKalb, Mo., remaining until the spring of 1856, when he pre-empted the claim which is now his present home, and engaged, in connection with farming, to practice medicine, being the first practitioner west of Atchison in the county. He made long rides, being frequently called into Doniphan and Brown counties. Malarial diseases prevailed to a great extent in those early days; the people were in stringent circumstances. He furnished medicine and attended to their wants, losing largely financially, as the greater portion of the first settlers moved away. In 1863 the Doctor organized one-half of Company D, Thirteenth Kansas; was tendered the captaincy of the same, but declined and accepted the position of First Lieutenant. After a forced march through the Indian Territory and Arkansas, was taken dangerously sick and was obliged to resign and return to his home, serving three months in the army. He was also Major in the Twelfth Kansas during the Price raid. After the close of the Rebellion, he was elected to the Legislature by the Republican party. While a member of that body acquitted himself creditably and satisfactorily to his constituents. He was originally an old Line Whig. Upon the organization of the Republican party accepted of its principles, always being in favor of the abolition of slavery. The Doctor of late years has been discontinuing his practice, and devotes his time to the cultivation of the farm. His home is pleasantly situated, and one of the most desirable in the neighborhood. He was married in Carmelsville, Ky., to Miss Rhoda A. Hazlewood. They have had eight children: Missouri J., Josephine A., Lee H. and Cora R. Four deceased: Thomas A., Samina E., Kate N. and John B.

HON. MILTON R. BENTON was born in Madison County, Ky., May 3, 1815. His father, Jesse, was a farmer and an extensive trader in Kentucky, having been engaged for twenty years in driving stock across the mountains through the Cumberland Gap, and at one time was a member of the Kentucky Legislature. His mother, Phoebe Quick, was born in North Carolina and brought by her parents to Boon's Fork, Ky., in her infancy. She was a pioneer in the latter State. Milton was taught in the select schools of Kentucky, but his principal education was obtained by his own exertion under embarrassing difficulties. He began trading in stock at an early age and was particularly fond of good animals. He followed that vocation for about eight years, buying in Kentucky and driving to South Carolina and Virginia. He has been a farmer the greater part of his life pursuing that business in Kentucky and Kansas. He emigrated to the latter State in 1857, locating in Atchison, where he resided until 1867. In the latter year he removed to his farm in Atchison County. He was the first Marshal of the city of Atchison, being elected in 1858. He is an Odd Fellow and passed through several chairs of the fraternity. Is also a Master Mason. His early religious education was received under the discipline of the Baptist Church, to which he was attached when fourteen years of age. He afterward joined the Christian Church, of which he is still a member. His political education was the Democratic, but before he cast his first vote, he approved and accepted the doctrine of Cassius M. Clay in opposition to slavery, and identified himself with that movement. He was a Free-state man in Kansas. Was an ardent supporter of A. Lincoln and the Republican party until the close of the war. He was then favorably impressed by the policy of re-construction advocated by President Johnson and supported his administration. In 1872, supported Horace Greeley, and has since been identified with the Democratic party. He endorsed the course of President Hayes. He was married February 4, 1838, to Miss Angelina Wilson, of Kentucky. She died in 1851, leaving five children. In 1853, he was married to Elizabeth Walters, of Kentucky, daughter of Samuel Walters, Esq. Mr. Benton had two sons in the late war—Coleman D., who was Captain in the Eighth Kentucky Infantry, and Curtis M., Captain of Company K, First Kansas Volunteers, and a son-in-law, G. J. Martin, who was a Lieutenant in a Kansas Regiment. He is an active business man and devotes himself to the real estate business besides carrying on a farm. DOWNS, presiding elder of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Atchison Circuit, is a native of Delaware, and was born in Kent County, November 25, 1841, and was reared in his native State, receiving the advantages of a good academic education in the academy at Smyrna. His early aspiration was to become an expounder of the gospel, and after thoroughly familiarizing himself with the important facts of the profession he adopted, was ordained. In 1868, he came to Missouri and joined the Missouri Conference, and for three years had charge of the Wyandotte Circuit. He next went on the Oskaloosa Circuit, where he continued one year; was next on the Leavenworth Circuit for two years, one year on the Palona Circuit and four years on the Council Grove Circuit, from which appointment in 1878 was placed in charge of the Atchison Circuit. Elder Downs has been one of the most successful ministers in the cause of Christianity in Kansas, and has contributed an ample share towards the upbuilding of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, which is one of the most flourishing denominations in the State. He is a diligent worker, a firm and impressive speaker, and handles the subject of his discourse in a masterly manner. The Elder is eminently popular, not only in the pale of his own church, but with all denominations. In 1873, Miss R. E. Bowls, of Kansas, became his wife.

Y., residing there a considerable length of time. He was married to Miss Ann Skelly, in Scotsville, Wheatland County, N. Y., October 15, 1855, and left for Michigan October 18. He settled in Salem, Mich., and worked on a farm there three years. April 18, 1859, he came to Kansas, settling at Atchison. He was one of the first settlers, and was closely associated with the early development of the Great West. He engaged in freighting across the plains, his destination for seven years being Denver. In 1·67 he turned his attention to agriculture. His success in this line has been pre-eminent, as he now possesses one of the finest farms in the county, in a high state of cultivation. He has five children—Willie, James, Mary, Agnes and Jane.

For one and one half years he sold goods for them on the line of the Kansas & Texas R. R. When that line was being constructed followed up the construction until it reached Dennison, Texas. For two years he was connected with his father in trade at Valley Falls. In 1875 embarked in trade at Monrovia. In 1856 he came to Kansas, locating at Easton, Leavenworth County. Embarked in mercantile business in connection with operating a large farm. He was the pioneer merchant of Easton and closely identified with that county until 1864, when he removed to the city of Leavenworth, where he engaged for a considerable length of time in the livery business and stock trade, and also dealt largely in city real estate. In 1873 came to Atchison County, and turned his entire attention to the cultivation of the farm; but the pursuit of agriculture was too monotonous for a man like Mr. Gallagher who had been an active business man so long, and in 1874 he engaged in the grocery and drug business in Effingham, and has been before the public the greater portion of the time since. Mr. G. is a man of excellent judgment and has been very successful in all of his undertakings. He has seen Northeastern Kansas develop from a barren and trackless plain to a garden spot that any country might well be proud of. During his long sojourn in the county Mr. Graves has not been a political aspirant, preferring the quiet of his regular pursuits. He owned an interest in a mill in Hartsville, Mass., for two years, and sold out and came to Kansas with his uncle, William Phillips, in 1856. William Phillips was killed while in his own house by the border ruffians who were under the leadership of Frederick Emery, September 1, 1856. His uncle, Jared Phillips, was in the house at the same time and was shot in the left arm and side; his arm was amputated near the shoulder. He was afterward killed by the Indians in 1862, on his way to California. William and Jared Phillips were prominent Free-state men and hence were hated by all that wished to make Kansas a slave State. Mr. Albert Phillips was largely interested in agricultural pursuits in Leavenworth County, where he lived until 1870, when he came to Atchison County and settled on the farm four and a half miles south of Effingham, where he has since lived. Mr. Phillips is a gentleman who has had a wide experience in the western country, and is thoroughly conversant with the early history of Kansas; is a great reader, and is familiar with the current events of the day, and political issues. He has a fine farm and a pleasant home. He was married in 1857 to Miss Mary A. Curtiss, of New York. She is an estimable lady. They have two children--Edward Walter and Gracie Elizabeth.

In 1870 he became identified with the Greenback party, and is a prominent worker, and has been a member of every County, District, and State convention held in his State. In 1880 was a delegate to the National Convention held in Chicago, Ill., from this State. From 1871 to 1877 he was Deputy Grand Master of the Iowa State Grange, and was a prominent organizer of granges throughout that State. Detective force in Chicago. For upwards of twenty years Mr. S. was well known in the political circle of Cook County, and was recognized among the solid men of the times. In 1865 he came to Kansas, engaging in the lumber trade in Atchison, and was one of the leaders in that branch of trade for a number of years. A few years ago he became interested in a large tract of land where he now resides, and in the year 1880 became a resident thereon. Mr. S. is a gentleman of more than ordinary ability, is very familiar with the political history of the country, and an entertaining conversationalist. He was married in 1843 to Miss Lucinda Lasher. They have a family of four--E. J., Orland C., Freeman and Giles. Orland C., son of William Scoville, was born in Cook County, Ill., February 4, 1846. Was there raised and resided until 1864. He enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Thirty-second Illinois, being appointed Sergeant; served eight months. In 1865 came West, being for four years in California. For several years he has been following agricultural pursuits in Atchison County. He was married in 1873 to Miss Virginia Williams. They have one son--William.

In 1849, went to Pennsylvania and engaged in railroading on the Pennsylvania Central, and became proficient as a locomotive engineer, continuing with that company for five years. He then located in Indiana, and engaged in the boot and shoe trade, being identified in that capacity for several years. After a temporary sojourn in Illinois he came to Kansas in 1870, locating in Concordia, Cloud County, where he embarked in trade, continuing until 1875, when there was a disastrous failure of the crops throughout that section, owing to the grasshoppers. In that year Mr. Spencer returned to Indiana and resided until 1879, when he again became a resident of Kansas, engaging in the restaurant business in Atchison. The spring of 1881, took up his abode in Effingham, and established present business. Mr. S. is the right man in the right place, and is thoroughly conversant with the details of his line. He is a genial gentleman, and has a good trade. He was married in 1862, to Miss Margaret Moore, an estimable lady. Her father was one of the pioneers of Cloud County, Kansas.

W. H. STEWART has been prominently identified with the educational advancement in Atchison County. He is a native of Washington County, Ohio; was born July 22, 1847. At an early age he removed to Guernsey County, with his parents, where he was reared and educated, receiving the benefits of the Fairview College, at Fairview, Ohio. During the Rebellion, he responded to the call for 100-days men, serving that period. For two years he pursued the vocation of teaching, in Ohio. In 1868, he came to Kansas, and assumed the garb of teacher. In the spring of 1869, he engaged to teach the Monrovia school, and taught that year, and also the years 1870 and 1871, in Monrovia. He has been constantly teaching in Atchison County for fourteen years, during all this time in the immediate neighborhood of Monrovia. He participated in the second battle of Bull Run, Cross Keys, Port Royal and other notable engagements. Was honorably discharged at Fort McHenry, in 1863, on account of disability. After returning to Ohio, he applied himself to the study of his adopted profession, and took a course of lectures at the Miami University in Cincinnati, Ohio. In 1870, he came to Missouri, and located in Alpha, Grundy County, where he practiced medicine very successfully until 1877, when he came to Kansas, locating in Eden, where he continued to practice until April, 1881, when he took up his abode in Effingham. The Doctor has served a long and closely applied period in the medical profession, and is a very close student. In 1880, attended the Keokuk Medical College, and graduated from that institution. The Doctor is a brilliant conversationalist and interesting gentleman. He married in 1863, Miss Mattie Long, of Ohio. By this union they have three children—Charles C., Lewis E. and Viola. R. H. TALIAFERRO, farmer, P. O. Effingham; was born in Alabama, August 15, 1827; at an early age returned to Mississippi with his parents, locating in Copiah County, where he was raised and educated, following in that State the vocation of cotton planting. He became a resident of the State in the spring of 1857, pre-empted a claim in Center Township, in the part which is now Benton Township. In 1858, he went to Pike's Peak, and for a time figured in the far West. The spring of 1860, came to Kansas, purchasing a large tract of land where he now resides. In the early part of the Rebellion, he was appointed enrolling officer in Atchison County, a very unenviable position to hold, as the county was about equally divided on the pro and con question. Mr. W., however, was a strong Union man and a Republican, and when he came to the State brought his politics with him, proposing to stand by them, let it cost what it might. In 1863, he was elected Sheriff, and re-elected in 1865. During his four years in that office, took thirty-seven prisoners to the penitentiary. There was undoubtedly more lawlessness in the State at that time than before or since. He has been identified with minor offices, educational interests, etc., and is a staunch advocate on the prohibition question. When Kansas is composed entirely of men like Ben Wallick, the millennium will have come. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. He was married in Ohio, to Miss Mary Fisher. They have eight children, B. F., E., M. E., Kate, John, George, Ada and Charlie.

He was one of the first carpenters there, and erected many of the early buildings that have since passed into oblivion. For over a quarter of a century Mr. Walters has been a contractor and builder, in Atchison County, and few people are more popularly and universally known. When Effingham was laid out, Mr. W. built the first house, a store for Mr. P. J. Martin. Since then he has erected a large number of the fine buildings in Effingham. Mr. Walters is a public-spirited citizen, and has a host of friends in northeastern Kansas. He married in 1853, Miss Ann M. Barron, of Winchester, Ky. In the spring of 1869, came to Kansas, taking up his abode where he now resides. He has large landed interests in the State, and is one of Atchison County's most substantial citizens. In 1874, he was the choice of the Republican party to represent Atchison County in the Legislature, and was in the extra session that year, which was called to take action in behalf of the grasshopper sufferers. He has held the office of Township Trustee, and other positions, during his sojourn in the county. During the Rebellion, Mr. W enlisted twice, each time being rejected on account of disability. He was married in Illinois, to Miss Appaloua Maxwell. They have seven children, John W., Olive, Frank B., Emmet R., Eddie, Carrie and Albert H.

PARDEE.

The first settlement in Center Township was made by Caleb May, in October, 1854. He was President both of the Monrovia and Pardee town companies, being now a prominent citizen of Southern Kansas. Freeman Graham, who came with him, is dead. The town of Pardee was platted in the spring of 1857 by James Brewer, being named in honor of Pardee Butler. S. G. Moore, the first settler, located July 1, 1858. In the winter of 1857 Mr. Butler preached the first sermon in Pardee, the services being held in the school house, which had been completed during the previous fall and opened by James Brewer in December. In the fall of 1858 Mr. Butler located near the town. In August, 1855, the first postoffice in the township was established at Ocena, with William Crosby as postmaster. In 1858 it was removed to Pardee, and S. G. Moore appointed postmaster. The first town officers were: Pardee Butler, president; Milo Carlton, secretary; William J. May, treasurer; S. G. Moore, A. Elliott and W. Wakefield, trustees. Mr. Moore opened the first store in the town in 1858, and in 1874 Milo Carleton put a wind mill in operation.

Pardee is now a town of about 100 people, off the line of railroad and therefore not growing, containing two stores and two churches. The Methodist Episcopal Church was established in the spring of 1868. It has now a membership of forty-six, being in charge of Rev. A. S. Embree. The Christian Church was organized by Rev. Pardee Butler before the town was platted. He is still its pastor, the membership of the society numbering about thirty. Pardee contains a good district school, and a private seminary or normal school, whose principal is Miss Mary J. Willis.

Near Pardee the Seventh Day Baptists have a strong church of over ninety members. It was first organized in August, 1863, its first pastor being Elder A. F. Randolph. After his death came Rev. S. R. Wheeler, who served the church for nearly fourteen years. He resigned in November, 1881, and since that time the church has been without a pastor. Services have been held in the school house, but a church edifice is now being erected.

OTHER TOWNS.

Cummingsville, on the line of the A., T. & S. F. R. R., southwest of Atchison, in Center Township, was laid out in the fall of 1872, being named in honor of Wm. Cummings, a resident of the town. Robert Kennish, the first settler, upon the town site, located in November 1872, he being appointed postmaster when the office was established the next fall. He also opened the first store in December, 1872. In April, 1873, D. C. Harris and family located in Cummingsville, their child, Lorenzo, born August 24, 1874, being its first native. His was also the first death, March 25, 1875. The marriage of E. G. Hilton and Sarah W. Harris, July 8, 1878, was the first. In the winter of 1880-1881 R. C. Ripple taught the first school, the Methodist Church South building a church in 1880. The first sermon had been preached in Odd Fellows' Hall by Rev. Mr. Cook in 1875. Cummingsville is now a town of about seventy people, is situated on a prairie in a valley, has several business houses and bids fair to grow into still more of a thriving settlement.

Farmington is a small station, consisting of a few families, situated on the Central Branch. It has a district school, in which the services of the Christian Church are held. This church was organized by Pardee Butler in October, 1867. It is now in charge of Rev. Z. S. Hastings, who has been a resident of Farmington since 1875. The society numbers about thirty-five members. Among the earliest settlers in the vicinity of Farmington are the McBride brothers.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—CENTER TP.

H. R. ACHENBACH, R.R. agent and Postmaster, Farmington; one of the most genial and popular gentlemen on the line of the Central Branch. He is a native of Pennsylvania, and was born in Clinton County, December 5, 1844. He was reared and educated in his native State, graduating from the People's Commercial College at Reading. After leaving this college, he clerked in the Prothonotary and Register and Recorder's office, at Lock Haven, Clinton Co., Pa. Then he went to Williamsport, where he was engaged in the confectionery and bakery business with his brother. His father, Hon. George A. Achenbach, is one of the leading citizens of Clinton County, and for a number of years has been prominently identified officially. We clip from the sketch-book of legislatures of Pennsylvania, in 1876, the following: "George A. Achenbach, Representative from Clinton County, is a gentleman of reputation on the Democratic side of the House. He was born in Columbia County, October 22, 1815, before the birth of the common schools, consequently was educated in the subscription schools, which were in vogue at that day. At twelve years of age he became a clerk in a store. In 1835, he moved to Sugar Valley, then in Center, but now in Clinton County, where he engaged in managing the mercantile interests of a furnace company. In 1860, he was elected to the Legislature from Clinton and Lycoming Counties, serving his constituents so satisfactorily that he was returned by a large majority. He was a Delegate to the Constitutional Convention, serving on some important committees. Mr. A. is very unassuming at his post of duty, and is emphatically a business legislator. He is a man stout built, but not corpulent, with gray hair, large head, and closely shaven face, his countenance indicating good nature." H. R. resided in Pennsylvania until 1877, when he came West, arriving in Atchison County, July 6. He at once engaged in merchandising. In that capacity he was identified until the summer of 1881. During that time he took up the study of telegraphy, and was appointed railroad agent October 27, 1880. He had received his appointment as Postmaster, October 24, 1877. In both capacities he is eminently qualified, and without the radiant countenance of "Auchy," at the station, Farmington would have but few attractions. He was married June 24, 1869, to Miss Annie E. Ayers, a native of Chester County, Pa., an estimable lady. They have had four children—Mary E., Preston A., Harry S., and James P. Mr. A. is an Odd-Fellow, and in 1876 was District Deputy of Clinton County, Pa., organizing Salona Lodge, No. 937, June 24, 1876. He is also Master Mason.

Samuel followed canal-boating during his earlier days in Illinois, though his principal vocation was farming, which he adhered to until he came to Kansas, in 1871, locating where he now resides. His estate consists of 320 acres of choice land. Mr. A. is one of the most successful of agriculturists, combining the practical with the theoretical. He was married in 1851, to Miss Sarah Hagerman, of Wayne County, Ohio. They have fourteen children—Elizabeth, Amanda, William, Flora Ella, Charles, Adaline, Daniel, Isabella, Cynthia, Josie, Walter, Joseph, Hattie, Herbert. Mr. and Mrs. A. and family are identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

GREGORY G. ASHE, farmer, Section 27, P. O., Pardee. A pioneer in Kansas, and one who has contributed more than an ample share toward the early development of Atchison County, is Mr. Gregory Ashe. He is a native of Ireland, and was born in the County Kerry, December 26, 1826. When twenty-two years of age, came to the United States. For several years he traveled, and resided temporarily in different parts of the country. The summer of 1855, came to Kansas, and pre-empted the 160 acres that is now his homestead. In 1858, went to St. Jo., Mo., residing until 1860, when he took up his permanent abode where he now resides. Being among the first inhabitants, he endured many privations and drawbacks. During the war he belonged to the State Militia, and was on duty at Kansas City during the trouble there. Mr. Ashe is an industrious, go-ahead citizen, and just the kind of a man to build up the reputation of a new country. He has been twice married, first in Ohio, to Miss Rachel A. Stanton; they have two children, Fred M. and Eugene; lost one—Frank. Mrs. Ashe, as far as can be ascertained, taught the first school in Center Township (in 1856). Her death occurred in Kansas. His present wife was formerly Annie C. Bechtel. By this marriage they have three children—Frank G., James W., and Edith M.

O. W. BABCOCK, stock raiser and dealer, P. O., Nortonville, well known as one of the prominent stockmen of eastern Kansas. He is a native of New York, and was born in Jefferson County, December 30, 1839; was there educated, reared, and resided until 1866, when he emigrated to Wisconsin, locating at Albion, Dane County, where, in company with Mr. O. Davis, they carried on general merchandising for several years. The spring of 1873, came to Kansas, locating where he now resides, himself and Mr. O. Davis purchasing a large tributary to Nortonville. Mr. Babcock is, in every sense of the word, a man who commands the respect of his fellow-men. He was married in Allegany County, N. Y., to Miss Harriet A. Lamphear, of that county. Himself and wife are closely identified with the Seventh Day Baptist Church.

A. S. BEST, farmer and stockraiser, P. O. Monrovia, is one of the most substantial agriculturists of the county. He is a native of Pennsylvania, and was born in Clinton County, June 27, 1839, was reared and educated in his native State, his boyhood days being spent in tilling the soil. The spring of 1860 his father, Mr. J. W. Best, with his family, including A. S. came to Kansas, locating in Center Township, Atchison County, the subject of this sketch taking and locating on his present homestead, where he erected a house and assiduously set to work to make a comfortable home and develop a farm. How well he has succeeded is known to those acquainted with him, as his farm, residence, orchard, etc., are in conformity with the name of the owner, "the Best." Mr. B. has been closely identified with the growth and development of the county. During the war he was Captain of a Militia Company in Center Township. At present he discharges the duties of Township Clerk for Center Township. In 1860 Miss Melinda Bricker, of Pennsylvania, became his wife. LUCIUS H. BISHOP, farmer and stockraiser, Section 18, P. O. Monrovia. There are but few people within the boundary line of Atchison County more widely known as pioneers than L. H. Bishop. He is a native of Vermont; was born in Orange County, June 5, 1824. When young removed with his parents to Allegany County, N. Y. His father was a blacksmith by trade, and L. H., in his earlier days, assisted some at the forge. The spring of 1857 found him at Atchison, Kan., which at that time consisted of a few very diminutive buildings. He pre-empted some land, which is now embodied in his present estate, and built a log claim cabin which is intact, still standing adjacent to his residence. He was among the first farmers of this portion of the country, and as an agriculturist has been very successful. He has a fine farm in a high state of cultivation, and the surroundings indicate comfort. Mr. B. passed through all the difficulties subsequent to the first seekers of the new country, and the obstacles he had to encounter at that day and age were different from those generally incidental to a pioneer life. During the Rebellion he was in the Twelfth Kansas Militia Regiment, and participated in the engagement at Westport, Mo., where his horse was shot from under him. Mr. B. was a strong advocate for the abolition of slavery. At an early day was a member of the Board of Township Supervisors, and identified with the educational interests of District No. 6, of which he made the first report to the County Superintendent. Was reared, educated, and resided in his native country until 1851; came to the United States, and for two years worked on a farm in Kentucky, after which for a few years he resided in different parts of the country engaged in various pursuits. In 1857 Kansas attracted his attention and in March of that year he pre-empted the 160 acres of land which is now his own, being one of the first settlers in that part of the county. He had many obstacles to meet at that early date which were only overcome by untiring industry. In 1862 he enlisted in Company K, Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry. He participated at the battle of Prairie Grove and other notable engagements of the war, serving three years when he was honorably discharged. Returned to Atchison County where he has since been a resident. His wife's maiden name was Miss Ann Quinn. By this marriage they have five children—Mary Grace, Annie, John F., Daniel, and an infant.

He was married March 22, 1862, to Miss Marie Cushman, an estimable lady. They have one daughter, Annie L., an accomplished young lady. Mr. Butin's mother came to Kansas, where she died in 1860. He has two sisters living within half a mile from him, Catherine E. Perry and Alma L. Maris, both well situated in life, and each the mother of three children—two boys and one girl. The family is identified with the Baptist Society of the Seventh Day denomination.

REV. PARDEE BUTLER, P. O. Farmington. Was born in 1816 in Onondaga County, N. Y. His parents were from Connecticut. In 1819 they emigrated to the Connecticut western reservation in northern Ohio. This was the only exclusively Puritan colony that was ever planted by the New England States, though they have furnished a predominating portion of the population of many of the western and northwestern States. The Western Reserve was an unbroken wilderness, and the settlers were proverbially poor, provided men can be called poor under any circumstances who have Yankee thrift, pluck, and intelligence. Mr. Butler remembers how his father, Phineas Butler, used to say that the only money he had for one year after coming to Ohio, was a quarter of a dollar, which he refused to spend, because he would not be wholly without money. Wheat would not bring twenty-five cents per bushel in Cleveland, but furs and peltries brought fair prices, and became a sort of legal tender; and so Phineas Butler became a noted hunter. There is yet preserved a local tradition how he and a brother hunter had a savage fight with a she bear, which they found in an alder swamp with her cubs one night when they were hunting raccoons. Frederick Brown, uncle to Ossawatomie, John Brown, lived in the same settlement, and under his impulse a Congregational Church and Sunday-school were organized in the log schoolhouse, which was followed soon after by a Debating Society, in which the subject of our sketch took his first lessons as a public speaker. Lyman Beecher's sermons on temperance, delivered in Litchfield, Conn., made on the Western Reserve a deep impression, and our young reformer took his first lessons at the hands of mobs by being pelted with eggs for delivering temperance lectures. At an early day he became identified with the anti-slavery movement. In the elections of 1844 he voted with the Liberty party for James J. Birney. A friend and a man of some position said to him: "Now, Mr. Butler, you are just starting in life, and will you throw yourself away by voting with such an insignificant minority?" He replied, "My father was an old Henry Clay Whig, and I admire Mr. Clay very much, but I think a new party necessary and I shall vote for James G. Birney." The Liberty party was the nest egg, out of which was hatched the Republican party. Alexander Campbell, and his father, Thomas Campbell, were Scotch Presbyterian ministers. Changing their views with regard to the action of baptism like Adoniram Judson, they became identified with the Baptists. They refused, however, to adopt any sectarian name or any creed but the Bible, seeking thus the union of all Christians, and were therefore compelled, finally, to set up for themselves. Having many things in common with the New England Puritans, their views spread rapidly on the Western Reserve, and the subject of our sketch, together with his father and mother, became identified with this movement, and he has spent thirty years of his life promulgating these views in the West, never, however, having forgotten his devotion to temperance and anti-slavery. He came to Kansas, and settled in Atchison County, in the year 1855. His boldness in expressing his disapprobation of the measures of the pro-slavery party soon marked him out to the leaders of this party as a man too dangerous to be tolerated in the country, and on the 15th of August of the same year a mob seized him in the town of Atchison, and put him on a raft of two logs, and set him adrift on the Missouri River. They threatened that if he should return they would certainly hang him; and he replied, "Gentlemen, do your duty as you understand it, and I will do my duty as I understand it; I ask no favors of you." In due time he returned. The next spring he was taken by a company of South Carolinians, and tarred and feathered, his life only having been saved by the interposition of Judge Tutt, of St. Joseph, Mo. He was married in 1843 to Miss Sibyl S. Carleton, also of the Western Reserve, who is now living. They have had seven children born to them, of whom three are now living. He has been a farmer for a life time, and his work as a preacher, anti-slavery, and temperance lecturer, has been largely without charge. He has never had but one law suit. He prosecuted a man for petty larceny, and proved his charge; but the Justice dismissed the case and awarded the prosecutor with the costs. Among the many valuable lessons he has learned in this wicked world he regards this as one of the most valuable. And now, before he has attained the age allotted to men, he finds slavery forever abolished, and the dram-shops prohibited by constitutional provision in the State. Meantime, there is a strong moral certainty that they will in like manner be ere long prohibited throughout the United States. A great advance has also been made toward the union of all Christians in one fold and under one Shepherd. Public integrity, private virtue, and good government have made encouraging progress; and the subject of this sketch feels, now as he is drawing near the end of a somewhat stormy and eventful life, that he has not wholly lived in vain.

He was then in his twenty-first year, and one of the most promising young men. HURON.

Huron Station, the newest town in Atchison County, is located on the just-completed Omaha Branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, in Lancaster Township, seventeen miles northwest from Atchison. The town site and several hundred acres in the immediate vicinity are owned by Col. D. R. Anthony, of Leavenworth. He donated to the railroad company twenty acres of land and the right of way for one mile. On the 1st of April, 1882, the surveys were made, and the town named and platted. Two side tracks, each eighty rods in length, have been laid down. Within six weeks of the completion of the surveys, five dwellings were erected, and the business interests of the village are well represented. Application for the location of a postoffice has been made, and the request will be favorably acted on by the Postoffice authorities at an early day, and the change from "old Huron" will be made to the new town. W. D. Starr will be appointed Postmaster. Several houses are now under contract, and before the close of the year 1882, Huron will contain fifty dwellings. Among the buildings to be put up this season are two church edifices—Presbyterian and Baptist. Whenever a desire is manifested to build a church, Col. Anthony generously donates a good-sized lot on which it may be placed. By July 15, a comfortable and roomy station-house will be finished at Huron. Like all the Missouri Pacific stations, it will be large and well-built. Situated almost half way between Atchison and Hiawatha, and not less than fifteen miles from either of those cities, Huron must soon grow into importance as a trading and grain-shipping town. Among the houses soon to be completed is a commodious hotel. Property is rapidly being sold to new comers.

MUSCOTAH.

In the extreme western part of Atchison County, at the junction of Little Delaware Creek and the Delaware River, and on the Central Branch Missouri Pacific R. R., is the thriving and growing town of Muscotah. It contains over 500 inhabitants, and is the largest town in the county. Muscotah has four general stores: one grocery store, three drug stores, three blacksmith shops, one bakery, one meatshop, two shoemaker shops, two cabinet shops, one pump dealer, one nursery, three hotels, two livery stables, one lawyer and three doctors. A good grist mill is operated by Daniel McCuaig. There are two churches, Methodist Episcopal and Congregational. The District School is attended by about sixty pupils.

The Congregational Church was organized August 6, 1866, having been in charge of Revs. L. Pomeroy, J. M. Von Wagner, A. A. Hurd and T. S. Roberts. The latter is acting pastor at present. The church building was erected in 1869 at a cost of $2,500, and the present membership of the society is forty-four.

The First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized in the early part of 1855, at the residence of Rufus Gooding, who was the second settler in Grasshopper Township. Rev. F. M. Williams preached the first sermon.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was connected with the Monrovia Circuit until the session of the annual conference of 1877, when it was detached, and in connection with Whiting and Kennekuk formed what was known as the Muscotah Circuit. At the conference of 1879, Whiting was detached, and in 1882, Kennekuk. Until March, 1879, the congregation worshiped in the Congregational Church. The new church was dedicated March, 1879. It was built at a cost of $1,400, and upon the day of dedication the full amount was provided for. The Society was first organized in 1870, the following being a list of the pastors: Revs. John Cook, J. A. Amos, J. C. Dana, George De Sette, E. H. Bailiff, N. Taylor, G. W. Miller, D. D. Campbell, F. M. Pickles, J. H. Green and J. S. Smith.

Muscotah Lodge, No. 116, (Masonic) was organized in October, 1868. It has at present (August, 1882,) the following officers: E. Bullock, W. M.; E. M. Brindle, S. W.; George Peabody, J. W.; J. C. Heath, secretary; H. S. Heath, treasurer. Membership about forty.

The name Muscotah, or written in Indian style, Musco-tah, signifies "Beautiful Prairie," or "Prairie on fire." The site of Old Muscotah, situated two miles and a half northeast of the present town, was surveyed by Dr. W. P. Badger and Major C. B. Keith, proprietors, who had settled there in the spring of 1856. The survey was completed in the fall of that year, and in 1858, Mr. Keith opened the first store in Muscotah. Dr. Badger located on what afterward became Senator Pomeroy's farm, and succeeded Major Baldwin as Indian agent, holding the office from 1858 to 1862. In 1867, the Union Pacific road purchased the land which became the site of New Muscotah, from Pe-at-e-quork, an Indian chief, Dr. Badger acting as the agent for the railroad. The land was surveyed in the fall of 1867, a Mr. Armstrong establishing the first general store soon afterward. The very earliest settlers of Grasshopper Township, located in 1854 and 1855, along the banks of the Little Grasshopper and its tributaries. The first settlement was made September 28, 1854, by Jacob Reece. Soon afterward came his brother, William, Rufus Gooding, Wilson Allec, William D. Barnett, Alex. Wills, Major Baldwin, Andrew and Mack Pate, Barney Cohoon, A. D. Simmons and E. Noland. The first child born of township settlers, although he did not see the light of day in this county, was Samuel Reece, September 2, 1855. Samuel Wylie and Miss Tenitia Tenery, were married in 1857, being the first couple in the township so joined. Alex. Sharp, an Indian trader, kept the first postoffice in 1858, it being situated. nearly in the center of Grasshopper Township. For some time it was thought that the name Grasshopper, applied first to the stream and then to the township, originated from the fact that upon some occasion a great invasion of the winged pests might have occurred. The Kickapoo Indians, however, informed Dr. Badger, that they never heard of the grasshopper plague, or of a grasshopper raid, until 1865. The true origin of the name is this: During one of the early surveys, Maj. Gunnison's probably, a Frenchman named Sautelle (in English, "Grasshopper,") was drowned at the mouth of the stream, which now bears his name.

Kennekuk is a small town containing about fifty people. It is in the northern part of Grasshopper Township, being platted by William H. Wheeler, county surveyor, in June 1858. The first tavern in the township was opened by Thomas Perry in September, 1857.

WILLIAM ADAMS, farmer and stock raiser, Section 10, P. O. Muscotah, was born in Somersetshire, Eng., October 6, 1819, son of George and Rachel Adams nee Thayer. He worked at farming in his native country until 1842, when he emigrated to the United States and settled in Onondaga County, N. Y. Here he learned the trade of carriage maker, and in 1852 went to California, via the Isthmus, to seek his fortune with the rest of the gold miners. Two years later, however, he returned to New York, where he made his home until his emigration to Kansas, which was in the spring of 1857. In company with what was known as the Cayuga Colony he took up a claim of 160 acres, but has since added to it until he owns in all 800 acres, all under cultivation. He usually keeps on hand about 100 head of graded cattle, 20 horses, and hogs and other small stock in abundance, and has been a very successful stock raiser. Mr. A. was married in New York State, July 4, 1848, to Miss Mary A. Ellsbury, who was formerly from the same shire in England as himself. They have one daughter, Julia E., and a son, Samuel.

HON. WILLIAM P. BADGER, was born December 17, 1817, at Sanbornton Square, Belknap County, N. H. The genealogy of the Badger family is traced to the time of William the Conqueror, the original name being Bagehoot, a French title from Normandy. Gov. Badger, of New Hampshire, was a cousin of John E. Badger, father of William P. Badger, and was descended from Sergeant John Badger, who came to America in the Mayflower and settled at Newburyport, Mass., and from whom are descended about all the Badgers in the United States. The family coat of arms now in the possession of the subject of this sketch bears the following inscription: "The family of Badgers originally descended from Launcelot Baghoot, who is mentioned by Sir John Servin's visitations of the County of Leicester to have been settled at the Hoo, in that county, in the year 1347. His descendant, Richard Badger, served under the Emperor of Germany against the Turks, in the reign of Henry VIII, by whom he was knighted, and had the three golden eagles added to his arms in memory of his gallantry in the service of the Emperor." Several members of this family appear to have settled in America about the time of Cromwell's usurpation. John E. Badger, the father of William, was born in New Market, N. H., and followed mercantile pursuits. His mother, Irene Carter, was born in Portsmouth, N. H.; both parents died in Atchison, Kans. William attended school, and at the age of twelve years became an apprentice to a hatter at Montpelier, Vt. While working at his trade he studied the science of medicine, but on account of ill health did not follow the profession as a regular pursuit. In 1857 he moved to Kansas for the recovery of his health, and founded the town of Muscotah, following the business of a farmer for several years. In 1857-8 was a member in the Kansas Legislature, taking a part as a Free-state Democrat. At the close of the session he was appointed agent for the Kickapoo Indians, a position he held until June, 1861. In 1862 he entered the army as Adjutant of the Thirteenth Kansas Volunteer Infantry and served in that capacity until 1864, participating in the battles of Cane Hill, Prairie Grove and others. He is an Odd Fellow, belongs to the Masonic order, and in the latter has advanced to the Knight Templar degree. He has done considerable to promote the railroad and other improvements. He is also a scientist and deeply interested in scientific pursuits. He has been a Republican since his entry in the army, and has proved a useful member to the party. He was married on December 2, 1841, to Miss Chloe E. Kellogg, daughter of the Rev. Sherman Kellogg, of Montpelier, Vt., and sister to Gov. William Pitt Kellogg, of Louisiana. They have had four children, only one of whom is living, Miss Clara R.

In 1864 he was married to Edith J., daughter of Edward and Helen Peabody, who were originally of the first family of the county. During the year 1868 Mr. Belden came to Kansas and purchased 160 acres of the old Kickapoo reservation, and was one of the first to commence improving these lands. In the fall he brought his family, and also three others, out from Bureau County, Ill., and he has been the means of establishing the Illinois settlement which now numbers some thirty families or more. He now owns 220 acres of land, all under a high state of cultivation. The old Kickapoo Indian trail that had been traveled for years by them before the advent of any white settlers in these parts, used to run through what is now Mr. Belden's door yard, and for some time after his settlement there was used as such by them, and faint traces of it can yet be discovered. He died in Iowa, aged seventy-seven years, universally respected. His ancestors were from Holland, and settled in New York in 1642. His great grandfather, Michael Van Winkle, owned a one-third interest in 13,000 acres of land within twelve miles of New York city, but sold it in 1774, just before the Revolutionary war, at twenty-five cents per acre (it was poor, sandy land then—a wilderness of pine and sand), entered the American war, and was in the battles of King's Mountain and other engagements. His paternal great grandmother was a sister of Gen. Carter, of Revolutionary fame, who afterwards settled in east Tennessee, where a large number of his descendants still reside, and where a county has been named in his honor. His grandfather's wife was a French Huguenot. His mother was Mary Philips Van Winkle, of Welsh extraction, and was born in Culpepper County, Va. Ransom A. Van Winkle received the rudiments of an English education in a Kentucky log schoolhouse, but was for two years a cadet at West Point, and received a good education. On leaving school, he went to Illinois, and engaged for a short time in the mercantile pursuits. He was married May 4, 1843, to Miss Lula J. Cloud, daughter of Rev. Newton Cloud, a distinguished citizen of that State, a Democrat in politics, and Treasurer of the Canal Board. His wife lived but three months. He returned to his native State and followed general merchandising. He was again married November 10, 1847, to Miss Mary S. Cravens, daughter of Dr. Cravens, of a distinguished Kentucky family, a lady of education and accomplishments. He has had a varied experience in business. He at one time owned an interest in coal lands in Kentucky, which he has since sold for more than $2,000,000. He lost over $6,000 by a flood at Rowena, on the Cumberland River. He finally removed to St. Joseph, Mo., in 1849, and did a lucrative business in farming, for six years. In February, 1855, he removed to Kansas, and built the first claim cabin on the Grasshopper, now Delaware River, above Valley Falls, in Kapioma Township. He also built the first steam sawmill, and sawed the first lumber, and built the first frame house, and taught the first school, in Kapioma Township, and was the first Postmaster at Arrington. In 1857, he purchased the claim and removed to where he now resides, on Arrington Heights, and is one of the prosperous and substantial farmers of this township. Mr. Van Winkle has taken an active part in the politics of the county. He was originally a Kentucky Abolitionist, both he and his father voting for Cassius M. Clay, for Governor. He acted with the Whig party until the organization of the Republican party, when his name headed the list for the organization of that party in Atchison County. He was a prominent Free-state man, in the early struggle in Kansas, and contributed liberally to the cause, and worked hard in its behalf. He has held a number of local offices, having been a Justice of the Peace for fourteen years, Postmaster five years, Town Trustee of Kapioma Township for eight years, a member of the Legislature in 1861 and 1862, and for six years County Commissioner of Atchison County. He was made a Master Mason in Monticello Lodge, No. 103, in Wayne County, Ky., and is a member of the Muscotah Lodge, No. 163, of Muscotah, Kan. BOUNDARIES AND NATURAL FEATURES.

LEAVENWORTH County was one of those originally erected by the First Territorial Legislature of 1855. Its boundaries, as first defined in the Territorial act, Section 27, were as follows:

> Beginning at a point of the southern boundary of Atchison County (before defined in the same act) due north of a point four miles west of Dawson's crossing of the Fort Riley road, on Stranger Creek; thence due south to the main channel of Kansas River; thence down said channel to where said channel crosses the channel of the Missouri River; thence up said channel of the Missouri, to the southeast corner of Atchison County; thence along the southern boundary to the place of beginning.

The boundaries, as then defined, embraced essentially the present county and the county of Wyandotte, lying south of it. Wyandotte was detached and erected into a separate county, by act of the Territorial Legislature, January 29, 1859. The part of the new county detached from Leavenworth, is described in the act as follows:

> Commencing at a point in the middle of the channel of the Missouri River, where the north line of the Delaware Reserve intersects the same; thence on said line west to the line between Ranges 22 and 23; thence south on said Range line to the southern boundary line of Leavenworth County; thence east on said line to the middle of the Missouri River; thence up the main channel to the place of beginning.

The County of Leavenworth was thus diminished to essentially its present proportions, which are defined in the compiled statutes of 1881, thus:

> The County of Leavenworth is bounded as follows: Beginning at the southeast corner of Atchison County; thence west with the south boundary of Atchison County, to the corner of Sections 21, 22, 27, and 28, of Township 7 south, of Range 20 east; thence south with the section lines between the third and fourth tiers of sections, to the middle of the main channel of the Kansas River; thence down said Kansas River, in the middle of the main channel thereof, to the intersection of the Range line between Ranges 22 and 23 east; thence north on said line to the old Delaware Reserve line, the same being the dividing line between the original Delaware Reservation and Delaware Trust Lands; thence east, with said reserve line, to the western boundary of the State of Missouri; thence northerly, with said western boundary line of the State of Missouri, to the place of beginning.

It is bounded: North, by Atchison County; east, by the Missouri River; south, by Wyandotte County and Kansas River; and west, by Jefferson County.

The present subdivisions are as follows: Towns—Easton, Kickapoo, Alexandria, High Prairie, Delaware, Tonganoxie, Stranger, Fairmount, Reno, Sherman; City of Leavenworth; and the United States Military Reservation of Fort Leavenworth.

As originally formed, Leavenworth County was a purely river district. By the creation of Wyandotte County, its southeastern portion was cut off, leaving the Missouri River for its northeastern boundary merely. Leavenworth is one of the flourishing northeastern counties of Kansas, and has an area of 455 square miles. There is an abundance of timber and rolling prairie land, and the whole surface of the county is well watered by streams or living springs. Good well water is obtained at a depth of from fifteen to twenty-five feet. Stranger Creek enters the county by way of Easton Township, flows in a generally southerly direction through Alexandria, the southwest corner of High Prairie, through Stranger and Sherman townships, and empties into the Kansas River. Its tributaries, the Little Stranger, Tonganoxie, Nine Mile creeks, drain much of the territory further east and southwest. Kickapoo, High Prairie, Leavenworth and Delaware townships, in the northeastern part of the county, are also drained by multitudes of smaller streams flowing into the Missouri River.

The face of the country is thus divided: Bottom land, 20 per cent; upland, 80 per cent; forest, 10 per cent; prairie, 90 per cent. The general surface is undulating, with bluffs near the Missouri River. The bottom lands average from one to one and a half miles in width, the timber belts being about the same. White oak, walnut, burr oak, cottonwood and hickory are the natural varieties of wood, and in districts not well wooded the cultivation of timber is rapidly progressing.

The surface of the country, away from the river bottoms, which are level alluvial prairie, is undulating, being broken into mounds and detached elevations of considerable altitude along the Missouri River, and declining into a continuous rolling prairie a few miles inland. It is somewhat sparsely wooded.

The timber belts extend up and down the Stranger and along the river bottoms of the Kansas and Missouri, and average a mile in width. The principal varieties are white oak, burr oak, walnut, cottonwood, hickory, elm and hackberry.

The soil is, throughout the uplands where no croppings of rock appear, a rich loam of a somewhat reddish color, owing to its admixture with the "bluff" or "loess" deposit of the Missouri. The bottoms are of the thick black alluvium deposits so common in the Western States as to need no further description. The soil for several feet from the surface is so rich in vegetable matter as to render its fertility well nigh inexhaustible. The whole surface of the county is arable land, capable of producing large and reliable crops of all cereals and other agricultural products common to the latitude or climate. Wheat, corn and flax are the leading staple products.

Blue limestone, of a hard, durable texture, is found underlying nearly the whole of the county, it being extensively quarried at the penitentiary, near Leavenworth. Sandstone is also found in the southern part of the county, while traces of hydraulic cement and fire clay have been discovered in Reno Township, in the southwestern part. But the great geological blessing for which Leavenworth County is truly thankful is her coal, which underlies about seven per cent. of her area. It is found at a depth of from fifty to 700 feet, and the mines which have been in operation near Leavenworth City since 1870, are pronounced by experts to be among the most valuable and extensive west of Ohio. This coal contains 56 per cent carbon, while the best bituminous deposits of Pennsylvania contain but 64 per cent. It is pronounced by railways and manufacturers as far superior to all other Western coal for steam making, and is becoming a powerful natural agent in the development of the manufacturing industries of Leavenworth County.

The true Coal Measures which appear in the southeastern area of the State extend persistently north, being found along the towns bordering the Missouri River, in a vein averaging twenty-eight inches in thickness, at a depth of 500 to 700 feet. Less persistent and broken veins have been struck within a depth of 100 feet. Shafts to the lower beds are now being successfully worked at Leavenworth and the State penitentiary, further accounts of which appear elsewhere.

For picturesque beauty the county is unexcelled by any other section of the State. The rough and broken scenery along the banks of the Missouri—the rounded hills, further inland, so regular in form as to seem the work of man instead of the hand-work of nature, robed to the top with the verdure of the green pastures—further still, stretches the great sea of rolling prairie fringed with woodland along the creeks and streams, and along the banks of the Kansas the broad green meadows, shaded with the thick growth of elm and cottonwood—all combined present such varied and lovely types of rural scenery as are rarely found within the restricted area of a single county.

THE OLDEST COUNTY.

The county of Leavenworth is, as the abode of white men, the oldest region of the State. The first fort within the limits of Kansas was there established, and the first farm was there tilled by white men. The first postoffice on the upper Missouri was there. The first squatters who came into the Territory after the passage of the Territorial act, drove their stakes in Leavenworth County. The first town organization completed was that of Leavenworth, where the first Kansas paper was printed—The Kansas Herald, September 15, 1854. The first Territorial Governor, Andrew H. Reeder, first set foot in the Territory in Leavenworth County. The other first Territorial officers: Judges, Surveyors, Secretaries, etc., all made their first official bows to the Delaware Indians, who at that time owned the county, or to their white brethren, who, as citizens of the yet unborn commonwealth, had squatted on the domains of the dusky proprietors, in anxious waiting for whatever might turn up. It is more than likely, although it cannot be proven, that the first stationary steam engine was set to running in Leavenworth, and if so, the first lumber was sawed there. It is certain the first political caucus was held there, as well as the first criminal trial under the Territorial laws. What other first events transpired there will appear in the course of its history. Enough have been noted to mark Leavenworth County as one of leading historical importance in the chronicles of the Territory and State.

FORT LEAVENWORTH.

Fort Leavenworth, from which the county and city derive their name, was established September 19, 1827. As early as March 7, 1827, Col. Henry H. Leavenworth, Third United States Infantry, was directed, with four companies of his regiment, to ascend the Missouri River, and at some point on its left bank within twenty miles of the mouth of the Little Platte River, either above or below its confluence, to select such position as, in his judgment, would be best calculated for a permanent cantonment. He carefully explored the region as instructed, and failing to find a desirable site on the west bank of the Missouri, wrote to the Department that there was no good site for a military post on the left bank of the Missouri within the distance of the place mentioned in the general orders from the Adjutant General's office, and that he had accordingly proceeded up the river some twenty miles and found a very good site for a cantonment on the right bank of the Missouri, about twenty miles from the mouth of the Little Platte, and had concluded that there was no other place within the prescribed distance of that river that would answer the desired purpose.

Early in July, before the official approval of his selection reached him, he began the erection of barracks for his soldiers, and named the post Cantonment Leavenworth. September 19, 1827, the official approval was received by Major General Gaines, commanding the Western department, and the site selected by Col. Leavenworth thus became the permanent site of the most important military post ever established by the Government in the West.

The original site was located and the post established at the date above mentioned, since which time it has been in continuous use by the military department as soldiers' quarters, and a depot of army supplies. Once since its establishment, May 16, 1829, the garrison was withdrawn for three months, leaving only a small guard detachment at the fort. August 12, it was re-occupied, and has been garrisoned by troops uninterruptedly since that time. It was known, till February 8, 1832, as Cantonment Leavenworth, at which time, the Secretary of War, in general orders, No. 11, directed that all cantonments be called forts—thereafter, in all army orders, it was designated as Fort Leavenworth. The postoffice at the fort continued to be designated as Cantonment Leavenworth until October 19, 1841, at which time, it also was changed to Fort Leavenworth.

The first record in the office of the Adjutant General, defining the boundaries of the Fort Leavenworth Military Reserve, bears date June 21, 1838. At that time by declaration of the President its limits were defined as follows:

"The land held as reserved, extends from six to seven miles along the Missouri River, and varies from one to two miles wide, containing about 6,840 acres."

"The reservation is on the right bank of the Missouri River, and about 150 feet above its surface. Latitude, 39° 21' north; Longitude, 94° 44' west."

Subsequently to the treaty with the Delawares of May 6, 1854—October 10, 1854—the limits of the reservation were again declared by the President, to conform with that treaty.

Small sales of the reservation have been made by the Government since it has been surrounded by a civilized community as follows:

By act of Congress, approved July 27, 1868, right of way to certain railroads therein named was granted; also, a certain defined portion of land was donated for the exclusive use of a public road.

By act of July 20, 1868, the sale of twenty acres of the reservation was authorized—to the Leavenworth Coal Company.

By joint resolution of Congress, approved February 9, 1871, the sale of a portion of the lands was authorized—to the Kansas Agricultural and Mechanical Associations of Leavenworth County, State of Kansas, for fair grounds.

It at present comprises an area of about nine square miles, being bounded: North and east by the Missouri River; south by the city of Leavenworth, and west by the town of Kickapoo. The general proportions of the tract have not been materially changed since first defined. They extend north and south along the Missouri a little more than five miles, and westward inland from one and one-fourth to two miles; the western boundary conforming to the eastern line of the town of Kickapoo.

Whatever military advantages decided Col. Leavenworth in selecting the site, they were certainly in accord with the tastes of the most ardent and exacting demands of the lover of the beautiful. From the high bluffs that front the Missouri River the land slopes westward in gentle undulation, broken by occasional abrupt elevations, just sufficient to give variety to the landscape. Heavy wood covered the land adjacent to the river, thinning out somewhat and opening into a natural shaded park a short distance from the river bluff where the barracks were built. A letter written by a tourist who visited it in the spring of 1854, thus describes its appearance and surroundings at that time:

> About noon we began to approach the vicinity of Fort Leavenworth. This is, without exception, the most beautiful place on the river. When within two or three miles, whoever has been in the country once will know that he is approaching it by the scenery, which much resembles that of some old English Manor that has been given up for a few years to the keeping of nature, or rather like some gigantic park. It is difficult to believe that the hand of art has not been busy there; the banks of the river are quite high and steep, presenting a mural face of limestone, and the bluffs above are covered with a small growth of elms, their branches covered with a dense foliage, and bending gracefully toward the ground like those of the weeping willow. As soon as the boat touched the landing, all the passengers stepped on shore and ascended the hill to the barracks, about a quarter of a mile. Much had been said of the beauty of the location and the fine prospect we should enjoy at the top of the bluffs, and consequently the interest was considerable. Nor were we in the least disappointed. As far as the eye could reach on either hand, hill rose above hill in an almost endless series of undulations, beautiful streams were winding their sinuous course through fertile valleys, and the whole, diversified with fine groves, gave to the view an air of enchantment. Add to this an inexhaustible fertility of soil, and we have a truly fine country. At the foot of the landing is a large store-house, at which considerable business is done. On the summit of the bluff is a large plateau, on which the fort, or village, stands, for it has far more the appearance of a beautiful village than a fort. In the center are three or four large buildings, much like "city blocks," in which the soldiers have their mess and lodge. At a little distance from these, and at the several corners, are a number of fine houses, the residences of the officers. In the rear is a splendid grove of elms, with their branches bending to the ground, and through the dense foliage a fine prairie breeze is ever playing, rendering the atmosphere cool and healthy. This is the promenade ground.

A description in Hale's History of Kansas (1855) reads as follows:

> It is the great frontier depot for the other military posts on the Santa Fe and Oregon routes, and the general rendezvous for troops proceeding to Western forts. The Government reservation of nine square miles is on a handsome location, which rises gradually from the river to a height of 150 feet. There is a good landing for steamboats. All the buildings are well constructed of stone, and present quite an imposing appearance. They consist of the barracks for the troops, a large structure three stories high; a hospital, which cost from $12,000 to $15,000; the quartermaster's building, a capacious warehouse, etc.; connected with the fort is a large farm.

At this time (1854) the fort was garrisoned by one company of the Fourth Artillery and one of the First Dragoons, under Col. Fauntleroy.

The fort was first established for the protection of the Santa Fe traders from the incursions of the Indians, who had begun a system of raiding and plunder on the caravans of traders passing yearly, in increasing numbers, over the route. It was at first garrisoned by four companies of the Third Infantry, under command of Maj. Baker. This was a part of the regiment of Col. Leavenworth, the founder of the post. The troops for several years were seriously afflicted with climatic diseases, which resulted, in the summer of 1829, in the removal of almost the entire garrison to the plains, as has been before stated. In 1830, the Sixth Regiment of Infantry superseded the Third in occupation. In 1835, the Third Division of United States Dragoons, under Col. Dodge, was stationed there. Their stay was prolonged to ten years or more, as the American State Papers relate that in 1845, Col. Dodge, with his command, marched from Fort Leavenworth to Pike's Peak and back, cultivating the friendship of the Prairie Indians on the way.

Up to 1845, the history of the fort has no especial interest to the general reader, beyond that of any remote military post of the government. The war with Mexico, the subsequent acquisition of California, New Mexico, and a part of Colorado, the consequent tide of emigration to the far Western Territories and the Pacific coast, have combined to render it a point of historic as well as picturesque interest. Through all the changes of the intervening years, it has been the great source of supply and main point of departure for the Government expeditions, whether peaceful or hostile, as well as for the immense tide of Western emigration which set in, in 1848, and went on unceasing and increasing, till the trans-continental railway diverted it to a safer and more rapid path of transit.

It was the rendezvous of Gen. Kearney's troops in June, 1846, and their starting point in his Santa Fe expedition. The expeditions of Gen. Joseph Lane to Oregon, in 1848; and Capt. Stansbury to Utah, in 1849, were both fitted out at this point. Col. Fremont also started thence on his explorations of 1849. The new military road (new in 1850) from Fort Leavenworth to Forts Kearney and Laramie, on the Upper Platte, became the great thoroughfare of the western emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah. Upwards of 70,000 men, women and children, with wagons, horses, flocks and herds innumerable, passed over this road in 1849–50. During the border troubles and intestine wars of Territorial Kansas, the troops stationed at Fort Leavenworth played no unimportant part, as is related in the general history. They were alternately the hope and fear of the contending parties. The fort was also designated, in the Territorial act, as the temporary seat of government, and was, at that time (May, 1854), the only place in the Territory having any buildings or conveniences for the Government officials.

All through the war of the Rebellion, it was the base of supplies for the semi-barbarous and semi-savage warfare of the border.

The First Post-Office in Kansas Territory was established at Fort Leavenworth, under the name of "Cantonment Leavenworth," or the "La Platte," Clay County,* Mo., May 29, 1828. The first Postmaster was Philip G. Rand. His successors, with date of their appointments, were as follows: Thomas S. Bryant, appointed October 16, 1828; R. P. Beauchamp, ——; Alex. G.

---

*Clay County, Mo., was the adjoining county, across the river, in the State of Missouri.

Morgan, July 8, 1831; Joseph V. Hamilton, April 3, 1838; Albert G. Wilson, December 5, 1839; ——— served to October 19, 1841, at which time the name was changed to Fort Leavenworth, and Hiram Rich appointed Postmaster.

The subsequent appointees were: Andrew G. Ege, March 12, 1862; Edward Fenlon, May 19, 1862; Elizabeth Graham, March 20, 1865; Edward Fenlon, August 8, 1865; Myers B. Haas, May 14, 1866; Michael L. Dunn, August 10, 1866; David L. Payne, March 19 1867; Michael L. Dunn, July 20, 1867—served to July 31, 1868, when the office was discontinued. It was re-established April 16, 1869, and Mrs. Clara E. Nichols appointed Postmistress.

A Reminiscence.—As an interesting conclusion to the early history of Fort Leavenworth, there is presented below a reminiscence from the pen of A. F. Callahan:

> The original fort composed a square, on each of the four corners of which was erected a log block house, punctured with port holes for muskets. Within this square were log edifices for quarters, warehouses and stables. The post grew gradually by degrees and increased in importance, until enlarged barracks for the troops, officers' quarters, warehouses for the quartermaster, commissary and ordnance departments and offices, suitable for the transaction of business, together with stables, forage cribs, etc., etc., have spread it over a large tract of the reservation. The old fortifications have long since disappeared, and only a few of the veterans who were familiar with them now lag superfluous or otherwise. Like the hostlerie of Benny Havens at West Point—immortalized by Surgeon Lucius O'Brien—the landmarks of Fort Leavenworth, where old Hiram Rich held high carnival as sutler, and the structure known as "Bedlam," where bachelors and truant Benedicts "raised old Nick," and other places formerly notorious, now only exist in the legends of memory or the garrulous chronicles of toothless and retired seniors. Many of the flower of the army—indeed most of them—who gave their blood free as water to their country, spent portions of their service at Fort Leavenworth. Such now fill heroes' graves or are enjoying well earned "brevets."
>
> General Persifer F. Smith died here in 1858, while en route to take command of the Utah expedition. His remains were conveyed to a steamboat by General Harney with a troop of cavalry, a battalion of infantry and a section of artillery. Several generals and colonels, including Charley May, of Mexican fame, acted as pall bearers on the occasion. Then gruff old Harney started for Utah, but was met by the news that Albert Sidney Johnston had fixed up with Brigham, and so he returned to St. Louis. Gallant, chivalrous Reno was ordnance officer here when the war cloud came, but was soon called to Washington to accept a major general's commission—and a glorious grave. The æsthetical and precise Bankhead Magruder commanded the fort once, prior to the unpleasantness, and was a good showman or ringmaster. He instituted pageants for our edification, sham battles and such like. The artillery boomed o'er the prairies, and reverberated through the fastnesses, much to our amusement. Magruder was expensive—a sort of military dandy—but popular, doubtless, with the powder contractors. Sturgis sowed his wild oats hereabouts, and, twenty-five years ago, was probably the most powerful man in the army. He could readily pitch any ordinary man across a fence, but was withal, a most courtly officer and thorough gentleman. Poor Custer was here frequently after the war, with the glorious Seventh Cavalry, and his lovely wife reigned as one of the queens of society. General Hancock was once quartermaster at the fort, and afterward department commander. Colonel May, the Steeles, Bragg, Canby, Meiggs, Kearney, Marcy, Swift, Sully, Mills, Sacket, Sedgwick, and indeed all the old army officers have sojourned for a time at this garrison.
>
> General Philip H. Sheridan once since the war came here and established his headquarters at Fort Leavenworth. He probably would have remained here until to-day, as he liked the fort and enjoyed the society hereabouts, had it not been for a little faux pas. One of the justices of the peace fined the dashing cavalryman $100 for contempt of court. The fine was promptly paid by the citizens of Leavenworth, but Sheridan removed his headquarters to Chicago, and thus immense sums of money and unlimited increase of prosperity were diverted into other channels, for it is well known that the headquarters of the lieutenant-general of the army are of incalculable advantage to any place.

EARLY SETTLEMENTS.

The first white settlers of the county were the farmers who came in to cultivate the lands of the military reservation, and the missionaries who came in with immigrant Indians a few years later.

The actual settlers, who came in immediately after the passage of the Territorial bill of 1854, were the early settlers of Leavenworth County who planted civilization on the ground that had been sacred to the occupancy of Indians, by treaty, from the time of the purchase of the domain in 1803, till then. The Government had marked out a small reservation on which white soldiers and civilians in the employ of the Government might live under its protection, and the Indian missionaries and white farmers and mechanics had, under the protection of the Government, found a safe sojourn within the Territory; yet, up to the time of the passage of the act there was no white man in the county, nor Territory, who had a right, in fee simple, to a rod of ground. So, it seems fit to fix the time of the actual settlement of the county at the date from which titles to land and deeds of the same which are valid to-day can be traced.

The acquisition of a valid title to the lands by early settlers, was fraught with difficulties, and, to a full understanding, it is deemed necessary to diverge from historical narrative sufficiently to render the succeeding account of the early settlement clear.

The Delaware Trust Lands.—By treaty of September 24, 1829, the Delaware tribe of Indians relinquished their lands in Missouri and were assigned a large tract in Kansas, covering all of Leavenworth County, and much more.* December 14, 1843, the Delawares sold the Wyandots a tract comprising nearly the area of Wyandotte County. In the spring of 1854 treaties were made by the United States Indian Commissioner whereby, excepting small reserves, nearly the entire Indian title to the Indian lands of Eastern Kansas were put in the way of ultimate extinguishment, and thereby opened to the possession of white men at a more or less remote period, and under conditions and terms varying in accordance with the provisions of the treaties. Some tribes sold outright, reserving a part for occupation; others ceded to the Government, in trust, to be sold at some future time specified, for their benefit. The Delawares made a treaty May 6, 1854, whereby they ceded to the United States all their lands except a strip along the north bank of the Kansas River, commencing on the western line of the Wyandot lands, and extending up the north bank of the Kansas River forty miles, and being ten miles wide the entire length. This tract, under the name of the Delaware Reserve, remained in the possession of the tribe till May 30, 1860, at which time it was ceded to the Government and sold to the Leavenworth, Pawnee and Western Railway Company, except an assignment, in severalty, of eighty acres to each member of the tribe. This reserve included the southern part of Leavenworth County, ten miles north from the bank of the Kansas River.

The land ceded under the treaty of 1854, embraced the remaining part of Leavenworth County, as well as a part of Atchison County, and extended westward through the adjoining counties. The conditions were, that all the ceded lands, except the long, narrow strip known as "the outlet" (which was ceded unconditionally for the sum of $10,000), should be surveyed in the same manner as the public lands, and, so soon as the whole or any portion of said land was surveyed, that it should be offered at public sale to the highest bidder by the President, in such quantities as he might deem proper, the sales to be conducted in accordance with the laws of the United States in regard to the sale of public lands; such lands as were not sold at public sale, to be subject to private entry for three years at the minimum Government price, and if, at the expiration of that time any yet remained, they might, by act of Congress, be graduated and reduced in price until all were sold. All the money accruing from the sale, after the payment of expenses of survey and sale, were to be paid to, or held in trust by the Government for, the Delawares. These lands were known as the Delaware Trust Lands.

The inhabitants of Platte and the other Missouri border counties, all of whom, from education and interest, favored the establishment of slavery in the Territory, had long known the value of the land on the adjacent domain of the Delawares, and had only waited for the authority of the Government to occupy it. Indeed, the population of Missouri had accumulated to an unnatural degree along its whole western border, where it had been stopped by the Indian reservations, from further occupation. It is not strange that, when the Hon. D. R. Atchison notified his friends in Weston to "go over and take possession of the good land," that they went forthwith without delay, and in total ignorance of the provisions of the treaty.

The men who first settled Leavenworth were of an entirely different stripe from the founders of Atchison, Kickapoo City and Delaware City. They were either moderate Pro-slavery men or pronounced Free-soilers, who intended, to the best of their ability, to forget politics and possess the country for their homes and their firesides. Many of them had been slave-holders, but were disgusted with the persecution which their party were everywhere dealing out to the Free-state party. Some of them, as H. Miles Moore, for example, were so disgusted that they went over to the "ranks of the enemy" and incurred the bitter hostility of the Pro-slaveryites. Many of the men who came from Weston and Platte County, Mo., felt that the repeal of the Missouri compromise was a grievous wrong, but that the very repeal was a compromise which passed the Territory of Kansas over to the Slavery party. The Kansas-Nebraska bill was signed May 30, 1854, and the ultra members of the Pro-slavery party in Weston at once commenced to organize. Many of the moderate members also joined the Platte County Self Defensive Association, under really a misapprehension as to its real objects. But before proceeding further, several statements which should have previously been made, are necessary.

With the belief that the land had been opened for white settlers, and with a full knowledge of its value, the citizens of Platte County fairly swarmed onto the "Delaware Trust Lands." They could do little more than to stake their claims, but under the belief that the lands were, under the existing pre-emption laws of the United States, open for occupation, they took possession. At the close of June, 1854, there was scarcely an acre of what is now Leavenworth County that had not been claimed by some enterprising citizen just over the Missouri border.

A few who really desired to settle in the county, put up cabins and removed their families onto their claims. These, so far as can be ascertained, held their claims through all the changing vicissitudes of the succeeding years, and many of them with their descendants still hold the lands then claimed.

But, by far the largest part of the claims were speculative, made, as the claimants doubtless believed, in accordance with the letter, if not the spirit, of the law, by a class of men living conveniently near in Missouri, but having no intention of establishing a permanent home in Kansas. They, however, from the beginning, by virtue of their putative possessions in the county, assumed all the rights of citizenship, and entered into the Territory and possessed the ballot boxes at all the early elections with the same unanimity and disregard of law that had characterized the establishment of their premature and illegal claims upon the land.

By far the most important occupation, at that time, was on the present site of the city of Leavenworth. A history of the settlement, up to the time of the legal acquirement of proprietorship in the land on which the city now stands, by its founders, gives a clear and full history of the whole dispute pertaining to the settlers and squatters on the Delaware Trust Lands.

The first land occupied or claimed in Kansas by citizens of the United States, after the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska act was within the present limits of Leavenworth City. On June 12, 1854, Gen. George W. Gist, Samuel Farnandis and John C. Gist, staked off and marked the claims where the present city of Leavenworth stands. It had been the opinion of many would-be settlers that the city was destined to be located at Fort Leavenworth. But it soon became evident that the Government had no intention of abandoning it as a military post, and accordingly, the next day after Gen. Gist and his friends had staked their claims, a meeting was called at Weston for the formation of a town association. The various squatters in Leavenworth and vicinity, who had taken claims near the coming city of Fort Leavenworth, held a meeting at Riveley's store, in Salt Creek Valley, on Saturday, June 10, 1854. This was the first squatter meeting ever held in the Territory, and it was there resolved to relinquish all rights and titles to the future town association; hence, when it was formed on the 13th of June, everything appeared harmonious. The original proprietors were mostly citizens of Missouri, residing at this time, at or near Weston. They were thirty-two in number. Following are the articles of association as originally drawn up and signed by the members:

ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION.

> We, the undersigned, being desirous of procuring a claim to a certain tract of land in the Delaware lands, adjoining the military reservation in the Territory of Kansas, with the ultimate view of perfecting a title to the same from the General Government, have caused the same to be regularly and properly laid out and staked off and marked out, with the name of each member, and a registry of the same made with —— Grover, a person appointed by the squatters of the Territory for that purpose, to receive and make such entries or registry. For the speedy furtherance of this object, it is hereby mutually and sacredly agreed between the members of this association, each pledging himself to the other, that we will protect and defend each in all possible ways against all aggression whatsoever, until a title to the same is fully perfected; and it is further agreed by and between us that we will hold said tract jointly in common, until a final division of the same may be made by a majority of the members. We further pledge ourselves to furnish the sum of two dollars and fifty cents each for the survey and laying out of said tract, and all other sums that may be assessed by a majority of the members for the purposes of protecting and defending the same from all aggression whatsoever. And we also further pledge ourselves and solemnly promise that we will cordially obey all needful rules and regulations that may be hereafter passed by a majority of this society for the government and protection of its members, upon a no less penalty than that of expulsion from said society, together with the loss of all claims, interest or title in and to said tract above referred to, and all protection from said society, or either of its members, shall thereby be withdrawn. It is further agreed that it shall be optional with George B. Panton, one of our members, to retain and keep for his own use and benefit, the quarter section and the improvements now occupied by him, at the price at which the Government may sell the same, in which event he is to lose all interest in this joint stock company. It is further agreed by the members of this society that Major E. A. Ogden shall have full membership and interest in the society, although not signing these articles.

In testimony whereof we have hereunto set our hands, this 13th day of June, A.D. 1854: Geo. W. Gist, D. H. Stephens, W. H. Adams, L. A. Wisely, Samuel Norton, Samuel Farnandis, John C. Gist, Edward Mix, Malcolm Clark, Frans Impey, Frederick Starr, Merritt Johnson, G. H. Keller, Wm. G. Caples, H. Miles Moore, Lorenzo D. Bird, L. W. Caples, Oliver Diefendorf, Amos Rees, Wm. S. Murphy, Joseph Murphy, G. B. Panton, Jos. B. Evans, John Bull, James F. Benner, J. D. Todd, A. Thos. Kyle, Sackfield Maclin, A. E. Ogden, Samuel F. Few.*

Gen. George W. Gist was elected president; H. Miles Moore, secretary; Jos. B. Evans, treasurer; Amos Rees, L. D. Bird and Major E. A. Ogden, trustees. Committee on By-laws: L. D. Bird, O. Diefendorf and H. Miles Moore.

Subsequent to the first meeting, James W. Hardesty and W. S. Yohe were admitted as original members of the association. Including the two last named gentlemen there were thirty-two original proprietors. Mr. Moore classified them as follows: Ministers, three; lawyers, four; doctors, five; printers, two; merchants, four; surveyors, one; army officers, two; army clerks, one; farmers, eight.

The land embraced in the joint company claim comprised 320 acres. It commenced at the south line of the military reservation, and extended south along the west bank of the Missouri River to Three-Mile Creek, and back from the river sufficiently to comprise the area before mentioned. It was surveyed and platted without delay, by Gen. Gist, and divided into 175 shares, containing twelve lots to each share. Five shares each were apportioned to the original proprietors, the remaining fifteen being reserved in the hands of the trustees, "to be disposed of as they may deem fit for the best interests of the town;" or, perhaps, in the expressive phrase which has since become so familiar to Americans, "to be put where they would do the most good."

A drawing of two lots to each share was had, so as to give each share a first and second-class lot on either the Levee, Main or Delaware, or Shawnee streets, below Second street. A large number of shares were sold to other parties, who signed the constitution and became members of the association. Among those who purchased shares were several army officers, then stationed at Fort Leavenworth, some of whom still own property here—Gen. F. E. Hunt, then Captain of the Fourth Artillery, Gen. Magruder, Gen. B. C. Card, then Lieut. Card, Gen. R. C. Drum, then Lieut. Drum, Lieut. Robertson, Dr. Samuel Phillips, Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, and many others.

The name first selected by a majority of the committee—Bird and Diefendorf—was Douglas, in honor of Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, of Illinois. It was reported to the proprietors for adoption, together with a minority report by Mr. Moore recommending Leavenworth. Influenced by the reasons advanced by him in favor of the name he had chosen, the shareholders adopted it. Thus Mr. H. Miles Moore came to be the godfather of the infant town he has lived to see grow to be the foremost city of the State. At that time it was covered with a dense growth of trees and underbrush—all save a narrow strip between what is now Choctaw street and Three-Mile Creek. To-day the site is as thickly covered with warehouses, churches, school-houses, shops, factories, and the homes of a happy and prosperous people, as then with the woods and brambles of twenty-eight years ago.

The naming of the streets after the various resident Kansas tribes of Indians was done in accordance with the suggestion of Major E. A. Ogden, a member of the first Board of Trustees.

So far the new town met no serious obstacle, but Gen. Atchison and his Pro-slavery friends who were striving to build up Pro-slavery towns, were evidently uneasy at the unpolitical attitude which Leavenworth was assuming. In July some slaves escaped from Weston and vicinity, and it is supposed went to Kansas. This fact caused the formation on the 15th, of the Platte County Self-Defensive Association, which organization extended eventually into many Southern States, and became a bitter opponent of the Free-soil doctrine. It was often made the instrument of inexcusable oppression, as in the case of the arrest of Thomas A. Minard, of Easton, who on the 21st of July went to Weston on business. There was an attempt made to connect him with the running off of the slaves, but the bottom fact and true explanation of his arrest was that he was a pronounced Free-soiler, though no Abolitionist. Other arrests followed, and the Self-Defensive Association became so aggressive as to attempt to dictate to Leavenworth merchants where and of whom they should buy their goods.

But leaving the incidents and personalities of a full narrative of the early growth of the town, to be treated further on, it is deemed proper to follow the historical thread of the town company, through the trials and struggles of its early life, up to the point where a legal and valid title to the land was obtained, thus giving the reader a clearer understanding of the most vexatious, and, perhaps, least understood, land dispute that harassed the early settlers of Kansas, than would be possible if casually brought to notice in chronological order, in connection with contemporaneous events.

The Beginning of Another Trouble.—Scarcely had the town company completed their organization, before it was discovered that Atchison's advice to his friends to "go in and occupy the good land," was premature. It was discovered that the provisions of the treaty, unlike those with the Kickapoos, who ceded lands lying adjacent on the north, precluded the settlement of the Delaware lands, held in trust for the tribe, till they should be surveyed and sold, and when sold, they were to be sold to the highest bidder, regardless of any pre-emption rights of settlers or squatters. It was at first stoutly contended that the lands could be held under the pre-emption laws of the United States; but all hope in that direction was extinguished by a long and elaborate document issued by Attorney General Caleb Cushing, which ended in the expression of the following authoritative and positive opinion:

> In fine, my opinion is, that the act of Congress gives pre-emption only in such of those lands ceded as are not required first to be offered at public sale; that the Delawares, Iowas, and Weas, under condition of being first offered at public sale, are no more opened to pre-emption by the act of Congress, than was the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth; that those lands can not be taken up by settlers under claim of pre-emption; and that all claims of pre-emptions there will be merely void in law, and will confer no right now or hereafter, on which to demand the issue of a patent from the Commissioner of Public Lands.
>
> Moreover, it will be the duty of the President to maintain, by force, if needs be, the plighted faith of the United States in this behalf.

The Indian Commissioner, G. W. Manypenny, by whom the treaty was made with the Delawares, took substantially the same view of the case, and, from the beginning, exerted both his personal and official influence in opposition to the settling or encroachment of the white settlers on the "Delaware Lands." However exalted, or otherwise, might have been his motives, he certainly managed to win the thorough and lasting hatred of the settlers, and was the most unpopular and generally abused official whose name appears in the newspaper files of the day, in connection with the land troubles.

Technically, the squatters had no rights, and they knew it, but they were there, and, more especially in Leavenworth, where they had "founded a city," they were determined to remain. So they went doggedly to work, clearing up the brush, staking out the town, and selling shares, regardless of the Attorney General's decision, and the ravings of their opponents.

Early in September, about a month before the first sale of lots occurred, Rev. C. B. Boynton visited Leavenworth, and describes it as follows:

> About thirty miles above the mouth of the Kansas, we came in sight of an entirely new object, unknown to all former experience—a squatter city—Leavenworth City—three and a half miles below Fort Leavenworth, on the west bank of the Missouri.
>
> In spite of the President and Cabinet, and treaties, the city has squatted upon lands of the Delawares, over which General Cushing has declared squatter sovereignty has no jurisdiction. Twelve hundred and more "sovereigns" have already, it is said, set up their thrones on these Delaware lands; and how they are to be despoiled of their kingdoms, is a question which the Government will not easily solve.
>
> A squatter city has little resemblance to any other city; it belongs to a distinct genus of cities. This is a large and important one, the capital, as many hope, of Kansas, and is therefore worthy of description. There was one steam-engine, "naked as when it was born," but at work sawing out its clothes. There were four tents, all on one street, a barrel of water or whisky under a tree, and a pot, on a pole over a fire. Under a tree, a type-sticker had his case before him, and was at work on the first number of the new paper, and within a frame, without a board on side or roof, was the editor's desk and sanctum. When we returned from the Territory to Weston, we saw the "notice," stating that the editor had removed his office from under the elm tree, to the corner of Broadway and the Levee. This Broadway was, at that time, much broader than the streets of old Babylon; for, with the exception of the "fort," there was probably not a house on either side, for thirty miles.
>
> Capital, skill, the spirit of speculation, and government patronage, can accomplish many things, but to bring the trade of the Kansas valley up to Leavenworth City, would be a feat scarcely less remarkable than that of inducing the river itself to take that upward direction.

J. Butler Chapman, Esq., who had himself a paper city on hand, known at that time as Whitfield City, located some seventy-five miles up the Kansas River, published a pamphlet History of Kansas and Emigrants' Guide, in which he describes the natural beauty of the country round about Whitfield, and calls attention to the inevitable destiny that points to his town as the future metropolis of Kansas. He speaks quite disparagingly of Leavenworth. He says: "We make Fort Leavenworth a station and meridian, from whence to compute distance, as Leavenworth City, three miles below, never can be a commercial point, or a depot for the Territory, nor can we see how it can be a point conspicuous for any purpose whatever."

Whatever merit pertained to Mr. Chapman, as a historian or business manager, it is certain he had not the gift of prophecy. Leavenworth is, with possibly a single exception, the largest and most "conspicuous" city in the State; Whitfield City, like Troy, is known only in history. It is numbered with a hundred other paper cities of Kansas that had a name and bright hopes in 1855, a name in 1856, and since then neither.

The First Sale of Town Lots occurred Monday, October 9, 1854. The following account of it is copied from the Herald of Friday, October 13:

> On Monday last, at 11 o'clock A. M., the sale of lots in this town was commenced. There was a large assemblage of people on the ground, many of whom had come from a distance for the purpose of attending this sale. The survey had been completed, and charts of the town drawn. The streets had been cleared of rubbish, and marked with their names. Those parallel with the river are numbered as far out as Seventh street; the cross streets are named for Indian tribes, and, commencing on the south, are as follows: Choctaw, Cherokee, Delaware, Shawnee, Seneca, Miami, Osage, Pottawatomie, Ottawa, Kickapoo, Kiowa, Dacotah, Pawnee, and Cheyenne. The streets parallel with the river are 60 feet wide, and the cross streets are 61 feet wide, except Delaware, which is 70 feet. The lots are 24 feet front by 125 feet deep, and there are 32 lots in each block. Through the center of each block runs an alley 15 feet wide. Seven lots have been laid off next the river in warehouse lots, the fronts of which are about 150 feet from the water's edge. All the space between Main or First street and the river, except these several blocks, have been donated for a Levee and Esplanade.
>
> The terms of the sale were one-third cash and the balance payable when the title is secured. G. W. McLane, of Weston, and W. S. Palmer, of Platte City, were the auctioneers. On the first day 54 lots were sold, at an average of $140; on the second day 50 lots were sold, at an average of $120, making the average of both days' sale about $130. Only 4 lots were sold out of the 32 in each block. The sales were distributed equally over the entire site. The purchases were generally made for immediate improvement, but a small number having been sold to shareholders. Every lot that was offered was sold, and many others could have been disposed of, if time had permitted. The highest price paid for any one was $390, the lowest $50. It must be recollected that no lot exceeded 24 feet front.

From the Hon. H. Miles Moore's account of the sale, published in the Leavenworth Daily Commercial, June 14, 1873, the following additional facts concerning it are gleaned:

Mr. Moore now has the original list of purchasers, and the map used at the sale, in his possession. The highest price paid on the first day's sale was $350. It was purchased by Capt. James A. Grant, being lot 3, block 3, where afterward was the wholesale grocery store of Messrs. C. R. Morehead & Co. The lowest price realized on the first day was $50 each for lots 20 and 21, block 14, on the north side of Osage street, next to the alley, between Main and Second streets. The purchaser was Charles Mundee. On the second day, C. A. Williams paid the highest price of the day—$200 each—for lots 15 and 16, block 25. The lowest lots were bid off to C. Mundee, lots 13 and 14, block 31, at $50 each; to Clint. Cockrill, lots 19 and 20, block 31, $50; and to Peter Hanreons, lots 19 and 20, block 32, at $51 each. The aggregate of the two days' sales was $12 609.

*The document is in the handwriting and is now in the possession of H. Miles Moore, Esq., of Leavenworth, one of the original proprietors and the first secretary of the association. The compilers of this sketch are under obligations to him for valuable aid, counsel and information pertaining to the early history of Leavenworth. To Mr. Moore the publishers are also indebted for the revision of the entire history of this county.

Mr. Moore proceeds, in the article from which the above facts are drawn, to pay his respects to Gov. Reeder, who evidently did not stand high in his favor, in the following frank terms:

> Gov. Reeder was present at the sale, and bought, or caused to be bought for him. The morning of the second day, before the sale, I went up with the trustees of the town company to Fort Leavenworth, where Gov. Reeder was stopping, and they directed me to transfer, on the town books, to him, five shares of the town, of the number of shares which were held by the trustees for the benefit of the town company, calling for twelve lots each share (60 lots), for the sum of $1,000, worth at least $4,000 then, now worth from $75,000 to $100,000, to be paid for soon. I may add, he also agreed, sub rosa, to put the capital of the Territory at Leavenworth, which latter part of the contract he afterward, when he got the shares all safe and his lots drawn, forgot to fulfill, but started another little capital town speculation, as the history of Kansas will show, at Pawnee, near Fort Riley. Reeder was the first of the immaculate Governors with which Kansas was so bountifully supplied in her Territorial tutelage. He always had an eye to the main chance. I will pay him particular attention in the future, as he was a gem of the first water. I do not think our books show that he ever paid the $1,000. If he did, he forgot the little capital matter. The boys often laughed about the trick—that Reeder had Yankeed the trustees out of those town shares.

More than two weeks previous to this time, the first sale of lots had occurred at Atchison, which was, from the first, an acknowledged political and commercial rival of Leavenworth. That energetic and wide-awake man, "Uncle George" Keller, had just completed his contract of clearing the Leavenworth town site of its thick growth of timber and underbrush. In this work he employed eighty men, from the middle of June until the middle of September. The Kansas Herald was issuing from its own building, and the Leavenworth Hotel had just been opened two days previous to the sale of lots, by Messrs. Keller & Kyle. Leavenworth was growing rapidly, and Atchison, Kickapoo, and the like Pro-slavery towns, looked on with a jealous eye.

Before recording further the history of the town association, it is necessary to state a sad fact, viz.: that Gen. Gist, its President, and a man of marked ability and unassuming Christianity, died at Weston, on the 21st of November. He was in his sixtieth year, a Mason, high in the order, and a man placed high in public estimation. Gen. Gist, however, was never a resident of Kansas. As previously stated, it was he who surveyed and platted the town site—the original 320 acres. It is called to this day, "The Gist Survey." It was filed in the Surveyor General's office, at Fort Leavenworth, on December 20, 1854. The members of the association, through their trustees, Major E. A. Ogden, William S. Yohe, and O. Diefendorf, donated to the public all streets laid down on the plat, except Water street and Esplanade. That ground was donated down to the water's edge, 'but all privileges, easements and franchises attaching to said land, including ferry right, with the full and entire fee simple to Water street and Esplanade," were reserved to the proprietors.

While the town had thus been passing through the first stages of its development, the Delawares began to view with a jealous and, perhaps, somewhat speculative eye, the occupation of their lands in violation of the terms of the treaty. Their discontent was no doubt intensified by interested whites who, from personal designs, or jealousy of the Leavenworth company, desired to cripple and impede the growth of the new town, or destroy it altogether. It was generally believed by the squatters that Commissioner Manypenny, in his extreme desire to vindicate the merits of the treaty he had made, took extra-official pains to enlighten the Indians as to the encroachments, to render them opposed to any modification of the treaty whereby the lands could be pre-empted, and to otherwise get them into an irascible frame of mind that boded anything but peace and quietude to the squatters. Whatever the influences may have been, the result was a very earnest remonstrance and petition for relief, sent to the Government, signed by the most influential members of the tribe, including many of those whose names were appended to the treaty of 1854. In response, military orders were sent the commandant at Fort Leavenworth to drive off all trespassers on the Delaware Lands. The story of the trouble was told by H. Miles Moore, Esq., in one of a series of historical sketches which appeared in the Leavenworth Daily Commercial—1873, as follows:

> A very strong prejudice existed at Weston against our town among the more violent Pro-slavery men, and also a jealousy of Atchison and Kickapoo, who were our rivals; they being situated on the Kickapoo lands, which were subject to private entry, while Leavenworth was located on the Delaware Trust Lands, which were not subject to the same provisions, but by the terms of the treaty were to be sold to the highest bidder for the sole benefit of the Indians. Some of these Atchison and Weston friends had taken the trouble to inform the Indians that we were all thieves and rascals, and that we had squatted on their lands without any authority, and would soon have their lands all gobbled up, etc., etc. This so excited the Indians that they commenced making complaints to the Indian Department at Washington through their agent. In the mean time Major Ogden, quartermaster; Major Maclin, paymaster; Col. Hunt, now (1873), paymaster, then captain of artillery; Dr. Samuel Phillips, surgeon, and a number of other officers of Fort Leavenworth, had become interested in the town by the purchase of shares of the town company. An order came from Washington to the military at the fort to drive us off; thus we were placed in an unfortunate predicament between two fires. We got the order delayed until we could make a showing. A committee from the town company was sent down to talk with the Delaware chiefs and get them to understand our position. After they became fully satisfied that the town company as well as the settlers on their lands, which comprised, at that time, by far the largest portion of the then county of Leavenworth open to settlement, were disposed to respect their rights and would pay the price fixed by the Government, or for which it might sell at public auction, they became reconciled. An attempt was afterwards made, however, as I may have occasion to show, by Indian Commissioner Manypenny, by maligning the character of certain officers at Fort Leavenworth, and, as was charged, attempting to blackmail the town company to bring the settlers on the Delaware Trust Lands and town company into trouble with the Indians, and also the Government at Washington. At the time first above referred to, a petition and statement of our situation and grievances was gotten up with great care, and Judge L. D. Bird was dispatched to Washington to lay the same before the President and Departments. Suffice it to say that at this time we were successful, and were not removed.

It is unnecessary, in this connection, to follow, step by step, the company through all its stages of hope and fear, till its title to the town site was assured by actual purchase. The period of uncertainty, to them, in common with all the squatters on the trust lands, lasted nearly two years, during which time the only laws which protected settlers in the occupation of their claims, were those of their own making, subject to the decision of judges of their own choosing, and enforced by officers appointed by themselves. They were co-operative mutual protective associations, outside any legal authority, whereby rude justice was administered, and protection assured. The people lived under organized Lynch law, which, under the circumstances, was the only law applicable to their surroundings. During this period occurred innumerable quarrels as to claims and titles to claims. Many of them were settled by judges in the squatters' courts, while other contestants fought it out single-handed, sometimes to the bloody issue of death. Much of the violence, many of the outrages, and not a few of the murders, with which the so-called histories of early Kansas abound, had no political significance whatever. The individual contests of those times were oftener for the possession of a squatter's claim than for the love of liberty, or in defence of the peculiar institution.

Relief came slowly, but it came at last, through the Government sale of the lands, whereby the cloud of uncertainty was dispelled, and, for the first time in the history of Leavenworth, a citizen was enabled to attain a valid and certain tenure to the land he had occupied and improved.

The above proclaimed sale was postponed to Monday, November 17, 1856, at which time it commenced.

No event of such interest or importance to the actual settler had ever before transpired. The political feuds and personal differences among them were forgotten in the overshadowing issue of how to secure titles to their occupied lands at the forthcoming sale.

There were common dangers outside, threatening the home of every Delaware squatter, whether Pro-slavery, Free-state or Abolition in faith, and among the squatters themselves, the securing of their homes, at the valuation put upon them by the Government, without interference from outside speculative bidders, became the paramount and all-absorbing question. The danger was, that speculators would overbid them, which was increased by the fact that there were two antagonistic classes of non-residents desirous of securing the lands, outside of the speculative profit that was sure to accrue from the known intrinsic value of the lands themselves. There were Pro-slavery speculators and Anti-slavery speculators, as well as speculators pure and simple.

Governor Robinson, a staunch Free-soiler, and an agent of the New England Emigrant Aid Society, wrote to his friends in Boston, as follows:

> LAWRENCE, Kan., September 25, 1856.
>
> The Delaware lands come into market on the 20th of next month (now postponed to November 17), and there will be an effort to prevent Free-state men from purchasing. There should be Northern capital here on that day to invest. These lands are along the Missouri River, including Leavenworth City, and are among the most valuable in Kansas. It will operate very much against us if they all fall into the hands of Pro-slavery men. Cannot some of the capitalists of Boston and New York have some agent on the ground to buy them? No better land investment can be made in the country. The time is now approaching when capital can serve free Kansas essentially and with the certainty of giving the capitalist a good per cent. for his investment. As good titles can be had for it as to the best land in the country; and land whose value will be increased ten-fold in a short time.

Commenting on the above, the Herald, November 1, voiced the local sentiment thus:

> An effort is being made by certain Northern men to introduce politics into the sales of the Delaware lands. Robinson, and others, have already written letters to the East, stating that it is the purpose of the Pro-slavery men to buy out all the claims of the Free-state settlers. They make this false issue as an excuse to urge Northern capitalists to be here at the sale and invest their money in these lands; that by so doing they can make a profitable investment, and advance the cause of freedom, by getting possession of this whole tract, consisting of over 200,000 acres of land.

> In the sales of the Delaware lands, the settlers know no other party than the Squatters' Party. Every man who has a bona fide claim will be respected alike by all the settlers. This is the feeling pervading the masses. * * * * * * * * We caution Delaware settlers now against listening to any of the shallow devices set afloat to introduce politics into the sale of these lands. The Squatter Party is the only party we know in this matter. It is the strong party, and if they only keep united, as they now are, they will have no difficulty. There is no danger of speculators bidding over the actual settlers.

On the opening of the sale, Monday, November 17, the city was crowded with strangers who had come from a distance to buy, but, under the united and firm front displayed by the settlers, no efforts were made to bid off any lands already occupied, and the sale went on from day to day without disturbance, the speculators taking their share of unoccupied lands when offered. Dr. Eddy superintended the sale; Major G. W. Purkins and Captain S. Scruggs serving as auctioneers.

The sales commenced with Township seven, in the western portion of the lands. The sales of the first day were confined to the fractional quarters. About five sections were sold. There were not many settlers on these lands, and the consequence was that lively competition took place between the speculators. The sales averaged this day from the valuation price, $1.50 per acre, to $2.15 per acre. The second day's sales opened with cheering prospects for the squatters, specific instructions having been received from the Government to the effect that "all settlers should have their claims at the valuation price; that those who had not the money should have time, and their land be passed over to a future sale. That all men who had been driven from their claims, and could establish the fact by themselves or their friends, such lands should be passed over to a future sale." These instructions gave great relief and satisfaction to the many poor squatters, who hitherto had depended only on their united muscle to overawe speculative bidders. About fifteen sections were sold the second day. The reports of the first two days' sales note Jeff. Buford, of Alabama, and W. H. Russell, as large purchasers of unoccupied farm lands. The sales went on uninterruptedly till December 9, the township and farm lands being sold first, in the order of the proclamation. On that date, notice was read that new instructions had been received from Washington, in regard to conducting the sale, when the City of Leavenworth (the last in order) should be reached, whereby, in addition to the extravagant valuation put upon the lots instead of blocks, as in the other towns, the agent was instructed to open to competitive bidders all the vacant lots, leaving the town company and the throng of speculators who had bought largely of city lots during the progress of the sale, to shift for themselves as best they could. These new instructions were sprung upon them while the sale was in progress, and if carried out, would work not only injustice to the town company and the many residents dependent on it for a final title, but make absolute chaos of all the speculative purchases, as every vacant lot was to be again put up in open market and sold to the highest bidder. It is doubtful if a madder set of American citizens were ever convened than those of Leavenworth at that time. As Leavenworth was last on the list, the sale continued until Saturday, December 14, at which time all the lands had been sold, except three or four disputed quarter sections, and all the towns, except Leavenworth, and a suburban town plat described as Lattaville.

The Leavenworthites, and others interested in city property, by combined entreaty, protest, threats, etc., succeeded at this time in effecting an adjournment of the sale for three weeks, and dispatched Dr. Eddy, the Commissioner of the sale, and Mr. W. H. Russell, a large property owner of the city, to Washington, to lay the grievances of the people before the Government, and obtain redress. They were assisted in their negotiations by the co-operative efforts of Gov. Geary, who, under date of December 15, 1856, wrote to President Pierce as follows:

> In response to a letter from the Mayor, and accompanying a petition of leading citizens of Leavenworth City, I came here for the purpose of aiding with my counsel and presence, in averting a threatened disturbance. I find the public mind greatly excited in consequence of some recent instructions from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, entirely changing the policy which has thus far governed the land sales, with results so entirely satisfactory to all interests.
>
> Solicitude for the peace of the Territory brought me to this city on the 17th of November, at the beginning of the sales. Many purchasers were here from every part of the country, invited by your proclamation, and great apprehensions of difficulty between them and the squatters were entertained. The lands had been previously appraised at from one dollar and twenty-five cents to twelve dollars per acre. In accordance with his instructions, the commissioner announced that the actual bona fide settler would be permitted to take his land at its appraised value, and that only vacant quarter sections would be open for competition. This announcement met with universal favor. The speculators themselves, the only parties really aggrieved, having come here hundreds of miles at heavy expense, on the invitation of the Government, not only acquiesced in the decision, but actually lauded its justice; while the Indians, on the other hand, were satisfied with the price they were getting for lands only made valuable by the industry, skill and capital of the pioneers who had braved everything to improve them.
>
> Such of the speculators as desired farms, made satisfactory arrangements with the settlers; while others, on the faith of the policy established, and acquiesced in by the Indian agent, made large investments in the lots of the city.
>
> In pursuance of the policy and understanding adopted at the opening of the sales, all the Delaware lands advertised for sale, including the environs of the city, and South Leavenworth, with the exception of the city itself, have been sold. The large sum of nearly four hundred and forty thousand dollars has been realized, which, together with the proceeds of the sale of this city, will make over four hundred and fifty thousand dollars, to be distributed among about nine hundred Indians, who have yet a magnificent reserve, more than quadrupled in value by the sale and settlement of the trust lands.
>
> The city of Leavenworth has been appraised by lots, making it average thirty dollars per acre. The people here are desirous that it may be sold to the original town company by the lot, at the appraised value, which would be a much more stringent rule than that which has been applied to the rural claims. This city, containing a population of over two thousand, consists of three hundred and twenty acres, or two claims, which, by the original settlers, were thrown into a town company and divided into shares.
>
> It seems clear to me that every principle of justice requires that the same rule should be applied to the claims upon which this city has been founded, as that which has been applied to other portions of the trust lands, with the additional reason in favor of the city, that, on the faith of the policy previously announced by the Government, large investments have been made here, and it would be a violation of the public faith not to secure them.
>
> What has induced the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to send the new and special instructions for this city alone, I am at a loss to conceive; but I am clear on the point, that, if carried into effect, they will destroy the peace of the community, and, for years impair the prosperity of this young metropolis of Kansas.
>
> A meeting of the gentlemen officially connected with the subject has been held. I strongly advised that this city should be sold to the town company, by lots or blocks, at their appraised value, in accordance with the rule that has governed the previous sales, thus giving entire satisfaction to the Indians, the original settlers and recent purchasers, in order that the exciting question might at once be settled, and the minds of the people relieved from a heavy load of anxiety. But in this matter I have been overruled, and it was deemed advisable to send Mr. Commissioner Eddy and Colonel Russell to Washington to lay the whole matter before the Government, in order to procure more satisfactory instructions.
>
> This subject is difficult to comprehend by any person not on the spot, and not conversant with it in all its bearings. I have given much thought and examination to the question, and have come to the deliberate conclusion that the peace of the Territory (which I regard as of greater importance to the country than the entire value of the lands) cannot easily be maintained unless some policy be adopted which will be satisfactory to the people, the original settlers, and the recent purchasers.

After much delay, and most persistent work on the part of the committee sent to Washington, and other friends of the city, the malignant and hidden influences were so far assuaged as to result in the final sale of the site to the town company, at what seemed an exorbitant valuation. The terms, though deemed unjust and extortionate, were, however, gladly accepted by the town proprietors, and the final settlement of the vexed question was hailed with satisfaction by the hundreds who had already invested largely in the lands in question. The final purchase was consummated February 11, 1857. The Herald, of February 21, 1857, says:

> All the town site, except some few blocks on the margin, were sold on the 11th inst., and the remainder on the 12th. The sale went of without any excitement, and the Leavenworth Association bought in the different lots, causing the deeds to be given in the names of the present proprietors. This obviated the necessity of the association again transferring the lots to purchasers, and now all have titles to their lots and improvements.

The general feeling of those interested is reflected in the following extracts from an article pertaining to the subject, by H. Miles Moore, Esq., in 1873. It quite fittingly closes the history of the land title trouble, since it gives one of the early proprietors, and a much aggrieved party, the cold but well intended comfort of having the closing argument. Mr. Moore discoursed thus:

> Our memorial (before alluded to) prayed that the treaty be so modified as to extend the pre-emption law of 1841 over the Delaware trust lands. Although we did not accomplish our wish at that time, we did, by a combined effort afterwards, and by interesting the Territorial officers, and perhaps some parties at Washington, succeed in having the lands and town site sold at Fort Leavenworth, in after years, in opposition to Indian Commissioner Manypenny and some friends, who wished and came very near having the sale made at St. Louis and Washington, as they very plausibly said, to avoid combinations of squatters on the lands, who wanted to rob the Indians. At the time of the sale of the lands, many of the squatters had permanent, lasting and valuable improvements upon the lands, having occupied and farmed them for over two years. The town site was not sold for over a year after the outside lands were sold, as I shall hereafter show, and then at an outrageous valuation, considering the fact that the town company, by their money and energy, had given the lands their increased value over ordinary wild lands. Of course, had the lands and town site, or either of them, been sold at St. Louis, Washington, or any other point other than where they were sold, or in this vicinity, the settlers and the town company would have lost their all. Does any body believe that Manypenny and his satellites would have robbed the Indians? Of course not. Men of that stamp have not been engaged in that laudable, praiseworthy and Christian enterprise for the past twenty-five years, even in holy Kansas and elsewhere, vide Brothers Harlan, Pomeroy, etc., etc. No, but they would not hesitate to rob the poor settler, who had penetrated these then Indian wilds with his family, and, by his industry, energy, and enterprise, had built him a little cabin, and was industriously making him and his family a home in the wilderness, and by whose untiring efforts has sprung into existence, as if by magic, a full panoplied and mighty commonwealth. We were glad, willing and anxious to pay Mr. Indian all his land was worth when we took it, and although it was, as I said before, appraised outrageously high afterward, the settlers and town company paid the price without a murmur, only demanding as a right, that they get it at the appraised value, which they did, I am happy to chronicle, in most if not in all cases. For the 320 acres which comprise (1873) the now city proper, the town company paid over $24,000 to Mr. Lo.

POLITICAL ORGANIZATION.

Hon. S. D. Lecompte, Chief Justice of the Territory of Kansas, arrived in Leavenworth January 1, 1855. On the 19th of March he held a preliminary session of the U. S. District Court, Leavenworth County being included in the district embracing Northern Kansas. Beyond a partial organization of the Court, little business was transacted, and adjournment was taken to the third Monday in April, fixed as the time for the regular term. This session was held in a little frame house on the south side of Delaware street, near Third. When the Court regularly assembled, pursuant to adjournment, W. G. Mathias appeared as clerk and I. B. Donaldson as U. S. Marshal. Previous to the formation of the court by Chief Justice Lecompte, the citizens of Leavenworth County were obliged to settle their disputes by an appeal to "squatter sovereign" organizations and a few justices of the peace, possessing limited civil and criminal jurisdiction, who had been appointed by Gov. Reeder during the previous winter.

Leavenworth County had thus obtained a partial political and judicial organization by April, 1855. The act organizing the county was passed at the first session of the Territorial Legislature which convened July 22, 1855, at the Shawnee Manual Labor School. Its boundaries were defined as follows: "Beginning at a point on the southern boundary of Atchison County, due north of a point four miles west of Dawson's crossing of the Fort Riley road in Stranger Creek; thence due south to the main channel of the Kansas River; thence down said channel to where it crosses the channel of the Missouri River; thence up said channel of the Missouri River to the southeast corner of Atchison County; thence along the southern boundary of Atchison County to the place of beginning." Says Hon. H. Miles Moore in his fine history of Leavenworth County—a man, by the way, as thoroughly posted not only in the history of his own county but of the State, as any one in Kansas: "As will be observed by reference to the map of the State of Kansas, the boundaries of the county have been considerably changed by acts of the Legislature, since its first incorporation. By act of the Territorial Legislature, approved February 28, 1859, Wyandotte County was cut out of the southeast corner of the county and included what was originally embraced in the Wyandot Indian Reserve. The original county of Leavenworth embraced all of the Delaware trust lands that were ceded to the United States by the treaty of 1854; also the Delaware Indian Reserve and the diminished Reserve, the Muncie lands, a small part of the Kickapoo lands, the United States Military Reservation of Fort Leavenworth and the Wyandot lands. A portion of the Delaware Reserve was ceded to the United States for the benefit of the L., P. & W. R. R., afterwards changed to the U. P. R. R. and then to the K. P. The townships of Tonganoxie (April 1, 1867) and of Stranger (February 28, 1859) were added to the townships of the county out of that tract of land. The Delaware Diminished Reserve was ceded to the M. R. R. R. by treaty in 1865, and the townships of Reno, Sherman and Fairmount were created as hereinafter stated. The Muncie lands consisted of seven sections of land on the Missouri River, now in Delaware Township. They belonged to the Muncie or Christian Indians—proteges of the Delaware Indians—and were ceded to the United States by them about the time of the Delaware treaty."

When the first Board of Commissioners met, September 7, 1855, it will be remembered that Governor Reeder had been removed by the Territorial Legislature. Consequently the appointments of John A. Haiderman as Probate Judge and President, ex-officio of the Board; Joseph M. Hall, member thereof, Leavenworth, and Matthew R. Walker, of Wyandotte, third member of the Board. These appointments are all signed by Daniel Woodson, Acting Governor, and issue from the Shawnee Manual Labor School, which the Pro-slavery Legislature had decided upon as the temporary seat of the Territorial Government. As was the invariable rule, these first county officials all swore, when they took the oath of office, that they would support the Nebraska-Kansas Act and the Fugitive Slave Law. The commissions of Judge Haiderman and Mr. Hall bear date of August 27, 1855. Mr. Walker, of Wyandotte, was not honored by the Governor until two days later. As stated, the first meeting of the Board was held September 7, 1855; place of gathering, the warehouse of Lewis N. Rees, corner of Delaware and Front streets. James M. Lyle was appointed clerk of the Board and ex-officio recorder and clerk of the Probate Court. At the same meeting the county was divided into Kickapoo, Leavenworth, Delaware, Wyandotte and Alexandria townships, and the temporary seat of justice was fixed the next month at Leavenworth. Subsequently the following county officers were appointed: M. P. Rively, County Treasurer; Bennett Burnham, County Surveyor; James B. Blake, Coroner; Green D. Todd, Sheriff; L. T. Moore, Assessor.

The constables and justices of the peace for the several townships were appointed, so that the county was permanently organized as a body politic. In one particular, however, she was lacking—no decision had been reached upon the permanent location of the county seat. In September the Board of Commissioners appointed A. Dawson, Martin Hefferlin and Samuel H. Burgess as judges of the election to be held on the second Monday of October for the purpose of deciding the matter. Eight miles above Fort Leavenworth was Kickapoo City, a pet of Gen. Atchison and the Pro-slavery party, a thriving village containing saw-mills, groceries, saloons, a newspaper—the Kansas Pioneer—and all the other paraphernalia of civilization and ambition. Both in a political and a business sense she was a hardy rival—one hard to beat. Six miles below, also on the river, was Delaware City, a flourishing and plucky little town, and possessing, like Kickapoo City, indefinite powers of expansion. Election day, October 8, 1855, witnessed a hot triangular fight. Two steam ferries, crowded with voters from Weston and other localities in Missouri under the Pro-slavery thumb, plied between the eastern shore and Kickapoo City and Delaware City. Platte County, Mo., Gen. Atchison's home, turned out some thousand noble voters on that day. Kickapoo triumphed. She cast 892 votes, to Delaware's 860, Leavenworth's 753, and Center's (an insignificant interior town) 60. The band from Weston pealed forth joy from brassy throats. Cannons roared. Grand ball and an immense turnout in the evening. But Delaware City had another card to play. She made a charge before which the glory of Kickapoo City went down in darkness. When Delaware City heard the result of the election she suddenly remembered that some of her "citizens" had been debarred from the privilege of voting. Rather than to have injustice done, her polls were thrown open a second day, and the result was, Delaware, 928; Kickapoo, 878; Leavenworth City, 726; Centerville, 66; Uniontown, 2; The Center, 18; Pork Landing, 1. Then ensued a "legal contest," in which the material features of the Louisiana imbroglio were foreshadowed. On October 16 the corporation of Leavenworth appeared before the Board, through her attorneys, Amos Rees, D. J. Johnson, A. Macauley, et al., and protested against the reception of the Kickapoo and Delaware poll books. When the returns had been canvassed and the result declared, as given above, Judges Hall and Walker proclaimed Delaware City the county seat—Judge Halderman refusing to give any certificate of election or to take any action in the matter. This occurred at a meeting held November 6. Four days later the formal petition of M. L. Truesdell, H. Miles Moore, et al., against the reception of the Kickapoo and Delaware returns, was ruled out by the Board—Judge Halderman dissenting. The other two members decided that "the Board had no authority to go behind the returns." Amos Rees, in behalf of the city, filed a written notice to the Board of her intention to apply to Judge Lecompte for a writ of injunction against the location of the county seat at either Delaware or Kickapoo. Gen. B. F. Stringfellow, attorney for Kickapoo, moved that the Delaware returns be thrown out on the ground that voting was continued on Tuesday, October 9. Messrs. Wilson, Almond and Hollingsworth objected, on the part of Delaware. Judge Hall sustained Gen. Stringfellow. Mr. Walker decided that Delaware could vote two days if she wanted to. Judge Halderman was quite non-committal. The motion was consequently lost, and it is useless to inform anyone of moderate penetration, the judges did not grant the writ of injunction applied for by Leavenworth. Judges Hall and Walker had declared Delaware City the county seat. In January, 1856, Judge Lecompte decided for Delaware.

It does not seem "out of order" (although it breaks somewhat into the straight line of narrative regarding the location of the county seat) to notice, in brief, the condition of the county's finances. By the latter part of 1856, in July, the rate of the county and territorial tax was established. After this came the August term of the United States Court, and the civil commotions—the John Brown war, etc. As Sheriff Todd, who had been vainly endeavoring to collect the county taxes, remarks in a published report to the Commissioners: "Then came the civil commotions, originating out of the rebellion of the Abolition fanatics of the Territory against the laws. The history and circumstances of this period which lasted for nearly two months, are fully known and understood by your honorable body. You are fully aware of the almost entire suspension of business during said time. Nearly every public officer of the county was absent, and engaged in upholding the laws of the Territory. Among them was the undersigned," etc., etc.

He knew the Board could not, and would not, censure him for having collected so small an amount of taxes. Furthermore, the sale of the Delaware Trust Lands was soon to take place, and the people were treasuring up their money in order to purchase their homes. The Sheriff reported an almost entire failure to collect the revenue of Leavenworth County, viz: Delinquent taxes, $3,765.07; collections, $690.93. This was in November, 1856. It was a bad state of fiscal affairs, and Sheriff Todd's resignation was accepted.

A county building 30x20 feet (two rooms) having been completed by G. B. Redman, in Delaware City, the county seat was removed there February 20, 1857. In March, L. F. Hollingsworth, one of the most prominent citizens of the new county seat was ordered to build a new jail eighteen feet square, two stories, at a cost not to exceed $600. Delaware's triumph, however, was of short duration, for the Legislature of this year passed an act providing for another election to decide upon the location of the county seat, upon the first Monday of October, 1857.

Kickapoo city accomplished another remarkable feat in the voting line, the Board of Commissioners, upon October 23, announcing the returns to be—Kickapoo city, 1,004; Leavenworth city, 968; Center, 21; Wyandotte, 1.

Whereupon the following proclamation issued forth, it being a verbatim copy:

"At a regular meeting of the tribunal transacting county business began and held at Leavenworth city on Monday, the nineteenth day of October A. D. 1857, the said tribunal proceeded according to the requirements of the statute passed by the legislative assembly of Kansas Territory and approved February 20, 1857, to cast up the votes and proclaim the result of the returns of the poll books on which the voters' names are recorded and declare the result to be as above.

"The said tribunal, therefore, does proclaim the said city of Kickapoo to be the permanent seat of 'justis' for Leavenworth County.

"And the said tribunal doth also order that the Sheriff of Leavenworth County do cause this procklamation to be printed and posted up at at least twenty different public places throughout the county, and alsothat he have the said procklamation printed in all the papers in the said county of Leavenworth. (Signed) George W. Purkins, Pres.; William Franklin, Com. (Attest) Henry B. C. Harris, Clerk.

"Ordered by the Board that the county records be removed to the seat of 'justis' as soon as 'practable.'"

Leavenworth City petitioned that the Kickapoo returns be thrown out, on the ground that the voting was not confined to the county; that the pretended returns were not filed in the office of the County Clerk within two days after the election; and that neither the judges nor the clerks of election were sworn according to the law—the latter not at all.

Joseph W. Hall, Commissioner from Kickapoo, had died during the preceding June, or it may have been that Leavenworth City would again have been slighted. But her claims were no longer overlooked, and it was finally decided that she had received a majority of the legal votes cast, and was entitled to the county seat. That decision has never been reversed.

COUNTY BUILDINGS.

In May, the county accepted the land donated by Jeremiah Clark for a court-house square, consisting of the east half of Block 13, being 300 feet on Third street and 180 feet on Central avenue and Walnut street. The other half was purchased for $13,000. John P. Haskell was appointed architect of the county buildings, $35,000 bonds were voted in June, and it certainly looked as if the county was going to obtain a creditable "seat of justis" right away. But, notwithstanding this apparent alacrity, the courts and county offices were located for many years in the City Hall, over the Market House, corner of Fifth and Shawnee streets, in the same building now occupied by the Fire Department. It was not until February, 1873, that the present imposing and convenient Court House was completed. It is built of red brick, with stone trimmings, is two stories in height, with basement, and elegant mansard roof. Its lofty tower and fine clock add to the attractions of as elegant a court-house building as can be found in the West. The building proper cost $120 415.75 Add to this the cost of clock, steam apparatus, fixtures and furniture, value of site, etc., and $175,000 would not be an overestimate of the total value of the property. Its situation commands one of the grandest views of the beautiful city of Leavenworth.

In May, 1860, it was first proposed by the county to establish a poor-house. The poor-farm, consisting of 200 acres of land, and a pest-house and poor-house, is situated about four miles southwest of Leavenworth, in High Prairie Township. The average number of inmates is about thirty, and the entire property is valued at $12,000. The county jail, a two-story brick structure costing $10,000, was built in 1872.

COUNTY SCHOOLS.

In 1855, the Territory of Kansas adopted the school law of the State of Missouri, by which each district was to be controlled by an inspector and three trustees. Previous to 1858, however, no districts in this county were formed. A few school districts were then organized. The first County Superintendent was George E. Budington, elected December 14, 1858. His successor was James Taylor, appointed March 4, 1859. In 1861 the State system of public instruction was adopted. Following is a list of superintendents who succeeded Mr. Taylor: Isaac T. Goodnow, elected November 7, 1862; H. H. Bloss, November 8, 1864; B. L. Baldridge, November 6, 1866; H. D. McCarty November 3, 1868; J. P. Bauserman, November 8, 1870, and November 5, 1872; W. H. Bradshaw, November 3, 1874, A. R. Van Eman, November 7, 1876, and November 5, 1878; R. B. Soper, November 2, 1880; Lyman Morgan, November 6, 1882.

The schools of the county are in charge of Lyman Morgan, superintendent of public instruction, and have been brought to a commendable state of perfection. There are seventy-eight districts in Leavenworth County, eighty-four schools and as many teachers. The estimated value of the school buildings is $228,000. They are mostly constructed of wood, but there are some good brick and stone buildings. The furniture and apparatus of the different schools are valued at $41,330. This makes the total valuation in the neighborhood of $270,000. The average monthly wages paid male teachers is $46 and female $40. The average daily attendance at the district schools, outside the city it will be understood, is 3,000. The receipts for the year 1881-82, were $58,000, and the expenditures $56,700, which leaves a balance of $1,300 in the treasury.

Present county officers: Robert Crozier, judge of the district court; John Rohe, clerk of the district court; L. Hanson, judge of the probate court; O. S. Hiatt, county auditor; J. W. Priest, sheriff; Enos Hook, county treasurer; J. W. Niehaus, county clerk; C. W. Curtan, register of deeds; J. C. Lynch, coroner; Thos. P. Fenlon, attorney; D. E. Barnes, engineer; Lyman Morgan, superintendent of public instruction; S. F. Rhea, surveyor.

WEALTH AND POPULATION.

The principal crops raised in Leavenworth County are corn, winter wheat and oats. In 1872, the acreage of corn was 48,000. This had increased to over 50,000 acres in 1882. Stranger, Tonganoxie, Fairmount, Sherman, Easton and Alexandria townships making an especial good showing. The increase during ten years in the acreage of winter wheat has been proportionately much greater, from 4,245 in 1872 to over 29,000 acres in 1882. Kickapoo, Fairmount, Reno and Easton are now (July 1882) the banner townships. The acreage of oats has increased within the decade from 5,714 to over 11,000. The whole number of acres in farms is 228,524, and the value of property $12,299,355. That the county has no fears of famine is inferred from the fact that 146,022 bushels of old corn were on hand March 1, 1882. During that spring the busy farmers also planted 50,424 of their acres to corn and 11,385 to oats. Leavenworth County is also favored as a dairy and live stock country. During the past year over 280,000 pounds of butter were produced. There are 8,500 horses in the county, 7,700 cows, over 12,000 other cattle, 4,000 sheep and 20,000 swine. As to orchards, she has, in round figures, 170,000 apple trees in bearing, 70,000 peach and 21,000 cherry.

From the figures of the assessors it is learned that the total value of all taxable property in Leavenworth County is $7,227,796.69 against $6,519,279.12 for 1881. The number of acres of taxable property is 283,093; of town lots, 13,069. The average price paid for improved land throughout the county is $25 per acre; unimproved from $5 to $10. The aggregate value of railroad property is $707,038.69.

From 1860 to 1870, the population of Leavenworth County increased from 12,606 to 32,444. In 1875 the population had decreased to 27,696. Since then the increase has been gradual but healthy. According to the last returns (made in the summer of 1882) the figures by townships and cities are: Alexandria, 1,017; Delaware, 1,597; Easton, 1,145; Fairmount, 938; High Prairie, 1,129; Kickapoo, 1,523; Leavenworth City, 18,766; Reno, 874; Sherman, 1,173; Stranger, 1,151; Tonganoxie, 1,308; Tonganoxie City, 321; Lansing, 231. Total for 1882, 31,068.

WEATHER RECORD.

The following meteorological record for the past thirty years, furnished by William T. Marvin, Esq., is valuable alike to all citizens of Eastern Kansas:

October, 1854. A beautiful month; slept on the open prairie near Riveley's store, in Salt Creek Valley, on the night of October 30. November, Indian summer continued. December, the same. January, 1855, the same until January 30, when we had a furious snow storm, and the weather was cold, with occasional intermissions until the middle of March. The spring was dry and windy until May 20, when it began raining, and the summer of 1855 was quite wet. The fall of 1855 was quite pleasant, and mild weather continued until about Christmas, when it turned very cold, the Missouri River closed in twenty-four hours, and snow fell to great depth. On the first day of February, 1856, it was said that the mercury stood as low as forty degrees below zero. The river opened early in March, and the first boat came up March 6. The spring was early, and the summer very pleasant, with abundance of rain. River closed early in December, and remained fast till the last of February. The spring of 1857 was the coldest and most disagreeable I ever experienced; the summer was very dry and hot, the fall pleasant; we had a cold snap in November, then it turned mild, and the winter of 1857-58, was constant Indian summer. The sumer of 1858 it did little else but rain, and the streams were all past fording. The winter of 1858-59 was quite wet, with but little cold weather. The spring of 1859 was cold, the summer very fine. The winter of 1859-60 was very dry, and the year 1860 was the great drouth. Summer of 1861 was fine; winter of 1861-62, cold, with deep snow. Summer of 1862 very pleasant, and winter of 1862-63 very mild. Summer of 1863 very pleasant, and winter of 1863-64 cold. The first day of January, 1864, guards froze to death at Fort Leavenworth. Summer of 1864 very hot and dry, winter mild. Summer of 1865 wet, and winter mild. Summer of 1866 wet, winter mild till March, when we had two weeks of intense cold weather. The grasshoppers deposited their eggs here for the first time in September, 1866, but owing to the cold wet spring of 1867, the most of them were destroyed, and they did but litle damage. Summer of 1867 was cool and pleasant; winter of 1867-68, very mild. Summer of 1868, very hot, and the grasshoppers came back the first of August. Winter of 1868-69 was mild; summer of 1869 was wet, but the hoppers ate nearly everything up. Winter of 1869-70 was mild; the summer of 1870 wet. Winter of 1870-71 mild, summer of 1871 very pleasant. LEAVENWORTH CITY.

Leavenworth, a beautiful city of 19,000 inhabitants, is situated on the left bank of the Missouri River, being located upon a rolling site enclosed by a crescent of hills. The surrounding country is charming in the extreme, and merits the name bestowed upon it in early days—"the garden of Kansas." A great attraction, and one which draws hundreds of visitors to Leavenworth annually, is Fort Leavenworth. Within the city are elegant residences, costly churches, and large business blocks, press and pulpit, flourishing State and city institutions, large and prosperous manufactories, and good society, all giving evidence of metropolitan solidity and growth.

EARLY HISTORY.

The very early facts connected with the town of Leavenworth have been presented in the sketch of the town association. Although by the latter part of September, 1854, the Herald and its proprietors were safely housed in the first building ever erected in Leavenworth; although Lewis N. Rees had built his little warehouse on the lot corner of Main and Delaware streets; although Uncle Keller was about to open his Leavenworth House; although Jerre Clark had erected a dwelling house—the first one in town—on Walnut street, the first families had not located in Leavenworth until those of Adam and George Fisher made their appearance. Having brought some lumber with them from St. Louis they erected a shed in which they lived until they could get a house built. Both of them did much for the early development of Leavenworth. Adam, especially, was one of the most energetic, capable and public spirited men that ever lived in the city. He at present resides in Washington, his brother George living on a farm near the city, on the Lawrence road. When they first settled in Leavenworth, in October, 1854, Mrs. Geo. Fisher carried with her the first baby which had ever blessed the community—her three months' old boy. But one of the earliest and most valuable institutions of Leavenworth, in the way of buildings, which commenced to flourish at this time, was the saw mill of Murphy & Scruggs, at the mouth of Three-Mile Creek, north side. Capt. W. S. Murphy and Capt. Simeon Scruggs were partners and completed the mill in the fall of 1854, so that they were able to issue the following advertisement in October: "Murphy & Scruggs have erected and have in successful operation at Leavenworth, K. T., a large steam saw mill of the most approved model and with all the recent improvements. They are ready to fill bills for lumber of every description and in quantity at the shortest notice and on favorable terms." This was the first saw mill not only in the county, but in the Territory. Although they made considerable money, the death of Capt. Murphy, and subsequent legal complications, so disarranged and consumed the partnership property that Capt. Scruggs lost nearly all his share in Leavenworth and retired to his farm near Kickapoo. But to return. The day before this advertisement appeared a very important occurrence took place for the town. This was the opening of the Leavenworth House. The steamer "Polar Star," from St. Louis, also brought up Gov. Reeder, of Easton, Pa., the first Governor of the Territory of Kansas. He did not come to Leavenworth, at first, but stopped at the Fort, and undoubtedly he thus escaped being made a prisoner of war by the hospitable people of Weston. Gen. A. J. Isacks, of Alexandria, La., the newly appointed Attorney General of the Territory, also accompanied him, and went up to Weston. Although a Slave-state man, Gen. Isacks always counseled moderation, and was therefore almost as objectionable to the Pro-slavery party as though he had been openly a Free-state advocate. In the afternoon of October 7, a delegation of citizens waited upon the Governor at the Fort. A very respectable crowd had assembled at Capt. Hunt's quarters. Dr. Leib, late of Illinois, but then a citizen of Kansas, addressed the Governor, on behalf of the citizens of the Territory. The Governor replied in a neat and happy, but brief speech, after which the champagne flowed generously.

Two of the United States Territorial Judges, Hon. Saunders W. Johnson, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Hon. Rush Elmore, of Montgomery, Ala., reached here on Tuesday, the 10th of October, 1854. Hon. S. D. Lecompte, the Chief Justice, arrived at Leavenworth a short time after this date.

Locally, the most important of these events was the opening of the Leavenworth Hotel, and reference is made to such matters as the landing of these first Territorial dignitaries, merely to impress the fact that Leavenworth received the first of everything important into the Territory, all the way from printing-presses to governors. The next day after Governor Reeder and Attorney General Isacks had established themselves in Kansas, it seemed fitting to Elder W. C. Capels, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, that religious services should be held in Leavenworth. This was done under the shade of a large tree, near what afterwards became the site of Plummer & North's flour-mill. Thus early did the Church attempt to join hands with the State, in Kansas. Certainly Kansas needed all the prayers of the good elder and of all his co-laborers for the next two years, for the appointment of Governor Reeder did not please the State of Missouri at all, and the State of Missouri felt that she had a lien upon the Territory of Kansas, and should be consulted before the Territory took any step, however small. When Governor Reeder proposed to make a tour of inspection and ascertain for himself the popular feeling, so as to be able to conduct an administration understandingly, the Platte County Self-defensive Association were scandalized at his presumption. The tour occupied fourteen days, and the Governor's welcome was cordial and general, showing a desire to counteract any wrong impressions which he might have gained from the enemies of free Kansas, in Missouri. Escort parties were formed throughout the region which he visited, and Governor Reeder returned to Fort Leavenworth, believing that the citizens of Kansas were able to govern themselves, and that he should make it a point to see that they did. He accordingly divided the Territory into Electoral Districts, and on November 10, 1854, issued his proclamation for the election of a Congressional Delegate, on the 29th, to fill out the unexpired term. Missouri was aroused and her Pro-slavery leaders, headed by Gen. Atchison, resolved to possess that delegate, notwithstanding the position Governor Reeder had assumed. Said the General, in addressing a crowd at Platte City: "When you reside in one day's journey of the Territory, and when your peace, your quiet and your property depend upon your action, you can, without an exertion, send 500 of your young men, who will vote in favor of your institutions." The Blue Lodges and "Self-defensive" Association took up the idea, so that a convention was held at Leavenworth, on the 15th. Fully 300 Missourians were there, determined to nominate a straight Pro-slavery candidate and to elect him afterwards. The actual residents of Leavenworth were only desirous of sending some one to Congress who would protect their claims to the Delaware Trust lands. The people of Missouri had "Pro-slavery" as their watchword; the citizens of Leavenworth, "Home-protection." Gen. J. W. Whitfield met every Pro-slavery requirement, and in a speech, promised to be true to the "Delaware Trust lands." But being a comparative stranger to the Kansas element, he saw that his chances for an election would be increased by not forcing his nomination upon the convention. Strong endorsing resolutions were therefore passed, and a committee was appointed to wait upon Governor Reeder, at Fort Leavenworth. But the aims of that delegation and their manly treatment by Governor Reeder are so well known, and so well set forth in the general history, that it is unnecessary to go further into details. Suffice it to say that Governor Reeder most effectually backed the Missouri dictators for the time, and showed that he thoroughly understood them. If he had maintained his bold front during election day, there is no doubt but that his name would have stood higher in the roll of brave-principled men than it does; but a Congressional inquiry into the frauds perpetrated on the 29th instant shows that, had none but residents of Kansas voted, General Whitfield would have been elected. His only competitor in Leavenworth was Hon. Robert P. Flenneken, who came with Governor Reeder from Pennsylvania, with the express purpose of running as a Congressional delegate. He was a Free-state man, but there were doubts as to his being a safe man on the "Delaware Trust Lands" question. The following account of the election in Leavenworth is from the prolific pen of H. Miles Moore:

"On the evening of the 28th of November numbers crossed the Missouri River at the Rialto Ferry, above Fort Leavenworth. Some went out to Pensenav's, on the Kickapoo lands, and many of them came down to Leavenworth and camped near Three Mile Creek. They had their wagons, provisions and tents. The next morning the polls were opened at the window of a room on the east side of the Leavenworth House, northwest corner of Main and Delaware streets, where the Chicago and Rock Island railroad office now stands. There were but four or five houses in town at that time. The hotel was kept by Uncle George Keller and son-in-law, A. T. Kyle, and they continued to keep it for some time afterwards. B. H. Twombly, C. M. Burgess and Smith were the Judges of the election. The voting went on very quietly all the forenoon. There was but little excitement. Our Missouri friends seemed to be doing most of the voting, as, in truth, the Free-state men took but little interest in the matter, they believing that the election of the delegate to Congress would have but little to do with settling the question of slavery. Judge Flenneken they knew but little about. They looked upon him as a mere political adventurer. Gen. Whitfield had promised to do all he could to secure the Delaware settlers in their rights. We knew that from his position as Indian Agent he would, at least, have influence with the Indian Department at Washington, and, through his friends, with the President. The Free-state men in this district either declined to vote or voted for Flenneken; or, as I believe, a majority of them voted for Whitfield, because of some of the reasons previously stated. After dinner and till the polls closed, there was considerable of a crowd around the hotel—some quarreling, a little fighting (the result of bad whisky), but no particular disturbance. Gen. Whitfield, Pro-slavery candidate, received 222 votes in Leavenworth precinct; Judge Flenneken, Free-soil, 80. Total, 302. Whitfield's majority, 142. Judge Flenneken at once returned to Pennsylvania, after the result of the election was known, and Kansas knew him no more forever."

In March of this year (1855), another noted character arrived at Fort Leavenworth—Gen. John Calhoun, Surveyor General of Nebraska and Kansas, and afterwards the honorable President of the Lecompton Constitution Convention. It was understood by the Leavenworth town company that he would locate his office here, and they therefore turned over some shares of their stock to him. Probably to create the same belief, and certainly causing the same result as to town lots, Gen. Calhoun pitched his tent at different places in both Territories, but finally brought up at Lecompton.

After the adjournment of the United States Court, March 19, 1855, the Pro-slavery party held a nominating convention and put into the field as candidates for the Territorial Council R. R. Reese and Capt. L. J. Eastin, of the Kansas Herald; for the Assembly, Judge A. D. Payne and William G. Mathias, of Leavenworth, and H. D. McMeekin, of Salt Creek Valley. The candidates were generally members of the "Delaware Squatter Association," and pledged to protect the settlers upon the Trust Lands. The Free-state candidates were—For the Council, B. H. Twombly, of Leavenworth County, and A. J. Whitney, of Jefferson; Assembly, F. G. Braden, Samuel France, and F. Browning. The election occurred on the 30th of March, and success to the Pro-slavery candidates was doubly assured by the wholesale importation or transportation of voters from Weston, Mo., via the "New Lucy" which came down the river, bright and early, and never returned until the setting of the sun, at 5 o'clock P. M. Lewis N. Reese, Matthew France, and George B. Panton were inspectors of the election, and, of course, found everything "lovely" and legitimate. Just before the election a canvass of voters was made and it was found that by stretching a point, the district could poll 305 votes. These inspectors of election received, as legitimate voters, 964 names, and the Pro-slavery people were allowed a majority of 800. To the credit of Gov. Reeder, however, be it recorded that he refused to grant certificates of election to the chosen champions of property-rights and political principles. He ordered a new election for May 22, but the same candidates were returned.

A narrative of how the "law and order" party across the Missouri carried the day is here given, being written by an eye-witness: "The polls were to have been held at the Leavenworth Hotel, but Mr. Keller made some objection to it and they were removed by the judges down to Benjamin Wood's saddler's, shop, on Cherokee street, near Third. Ropes were stretched from the window, where the votes were taken, out into the street, and all who desired to vote did so by passing between the ropes. The badge of recognition for those who belonged to the "law and order" party, as they called themselves, was a badge of hemp in the button-hole of the coat, or on the hat, or around the waist. Everybody voted who applied to vote that day, except some Delaware Indians. The Wyandot Indians voted, about thirty of them. After the votes were counted, Matthew France, one of the judges of election, refused to sign the returns unless the words "lawful resident voters" were stricken out. This was done, after considerable discussion, and the judges all signed. Rees and Panton, two of the judges, refused to take the oath prescribed by the Governor before they entered upon their duties. They took another and different oath. France took the oath prescribed by the Governor and therefore declined to sign the returns unless the erasures were made as above."

William Phillips, a quiet young lawyer of Leavenworth, but a determined and enthusiastic Free-state man, prepared a protest, signed by himself and fourteen other indignant citizens in the Sixteenth election precinct, against the reception of the fraudulent returns. Similar protests were sent in from the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, and Eleventh precincts. But in his warmth for "fair play" Mr. Phillips made himself so conspicuous to the Pro-slavery party that he was plainly marked as an object upon which their vengeance must fall. That opportunity arrived before the time for holding the new election, which Mr. Phillips was so instrumental in bringing about.

In July, 1854, the Squatters' Association of Leavenworth County changed their place of meeting to the fort. The time of filing claims to the Trust Lands had been extended, and the nest of land speculators was increasing. By November the actual residents of Leavenworth became seriously alarmed lest, after all, they should be crowded out of house and home. On the 4th of that month a Squatters' meeting was accordingly held for the purpose of preventing non-residents from taking up land. The Kansas-Delaware Squatter Association was then and there organized, with a court for the trial of contested cases—officers as follows: R. R. Reese, chief justice; A. Payne, associate justice, Stranger District; Alexander Russell, associate justice, Salt Creek District; Miles Shannon, marshal; G. D. Todd, deputy marshal; S. D. Pitcher, clerk and recorder of claims. Malcolm Clark was the first marshal of the meeting. The complaints grew louder that the association was protecting non-residents, and a meeting was called for the 30th of April, to take definite action. That there was some good cause for this complaint no one can deny. In some instances, however, it undoubtedly originated with those who had no claims and desired to speculate in them, or by the rivals of Leavenworth, who would have enjoyed nothing better than to see a hot fight between the members of the Squatters'

Association. Well, the meeting was held under the "old elm tree," corner Cherokee street and the Levee, and the feeling was high. Cole McCrea attempted to take part in the discussion and voting, when Mr. Clark requested him not to interfere, as his (McCrea's) claim was back of Fort Leavenworth, and not upon the Trust Lands; and informed him that no one but settlers upon the Delaware lands were to take a part in these proceedings. Mr. McCrea promised to keep quiet, but upon the announcement that some resolution was carried to which he objected, he pronounced the decision of the chair a fraud. This was too much for the hot Scotch blood of Mr. Clark, and he gave Mr. McCrea the lie. This led to a fight, in which McCrea shot Clark so that he died in a few minutes. The murderer jumped down the bank to the river's edge. Several shots were fired at him without effect; a rope was procured and McCrea would have been lynched had not S. D. Pitcher and a friend appeared upon the scene, both heavily armed, and carried him off in a Government hack to Fort Leavenworth. He soon escaped and left the Territory, but subsequently returned, and now quietly lives in Leavenworth. He was indicted but never prosecuted, as the shooting had been done under an aggravated case of assault. The feeling against McCrea, however, was very bitter, as Mr. Clark was one of the original members of the town association, high tempered but warm hearted, whole-souled and popular. He was buried in Weston.

The historian has nearly approached the time when vengeance was taken upon the innocent Free-state lawyer, William Phillips. He attended the meeting where Mr. Clark was killed, and seconded the efforts of Free-state men who had lately arrived to obtain claims upon the Trust Lands. The part that he took was modest enough, but his political record—the part he had taken in inducing Gov. Reeder to call a new election in Leavenworth precinct—and his general Free-state propensities, caused the charge to be brought against him in the coroner's inquest over Mr. Clark's body, that Phillips had handed McCrea the pistol with which he shot the deceased—that Phillips was accessory to the murder of Malcolm Clark. Resolutions to that effect were passed at a public meeting held on April 30—upon the evening when the murder occurred. He was ordered to leave the Territory by two o'clock P. M., May 3, and a committee of ten was appointed to tell him so. Upon that date the meeting again assembled, and a vigilance committee was appointed. They found that Phillips had not left, threatened him with tar and feathers, and gave him another chance to get out of the Territory. But although a quiet man, Mr. Phillips was a plucky one, and evidently thought that he had as much right to the Territory of Kansas as the members of the vigilance committee. Although correct in his idea of the innate right of things, Mr. Phillips reckoned without his host, for on May 17 a dozen men, armed to the teeth, dragged him to the river, bundled him into a boat, carried him over the river to a point just below Weston, took him into a ware-house, stripped him to the waist, shaved one side of his head, tarred and feathered him, brought him "up town," rode him on a rail to the music of old pans and bells, put him on an auctioneer's block, and a dilapidated and ancient darkey bid him in himself for a cent. The same disgraceful performance was gone through with again—all but the auctioneering—before Mr. Phillips was allowed to return to Leavenworth. The next day the better class of Weston's citizens denounced the outrage in the strongest terms. In Leavenworth the Pro-slavery party held a public meeting and thanked the vigilance committee for what they had done to the abolitionist. They called Mr. Phillips "the moral perjurer," declared war against abolitionists, and resolved that "we severely condemn those Pro-slavery men who, from mercenary motives, are now calling upon the Pro-slavery party to 'submit' without further action."

But, though the political pot was boiling most furiously, and the bitter feeling toward Free-state men kept out many who, under a quieter state of affairs, would have settled in Leavenworth, yet the town was growing, and growing rapidly. From a population of 200 inhabitants in January, 1855, the town had increased to nearly 400 people by May of that year. Mechanics were settling in the community, a brickyard was established, and another sawmill was in operation opposite the town—with a shingle and lath machine and a grist-mill attachment. Houses were going up every week, and the demand was greater than the supply. Within six months, fully 100 buildings of various kinds had been erected, and were, by the spring of 1855, occupied by bona fide residents of Leavenworth. A postoffice had been established and opened by the Postmaster, Lewis N. Reese, in his store, corner of Delaware street and the Levee. This event occurred March 6, 1855. And business continued to increase, and new settlers to arrive, throughout the summer and fall. During the latter season, a fresh impetus was given to the town's growth by the selection of Leavenworth as the starting-point of the great Government Overland Transportation Company of Majors, Russell & Co. They constructed stores, blacksmith shops, wagon and repair shops, and put a business life into the place which it would not have obtained in years of common private exertion. They employed annually more than 500 wagons, 7,500 head of cattle, and nearly 1,800 men. Freight was transported across the plains, in 1855, to the amount of 8,000,000 pounds. At Leavenworth, the headquarters of this immense transportation business, the firm expended $15,000 for necessary buildings. As early as 1854, several Salt Lake and California traders had commenced starting their trains from Leavenworth, the outfitting points being Independence, Westport, Weston, and St. Joseph. All of this business was now centered at Leavenworth. When there was added to this commercial advantage the fact that the Government was disbursing to soldiers and employes at the Fort, and for provisions and other necessities of a military establishment, $600,000 per annum, the secret of Leavenworth's early and wonderful growth is exposed. In October, 1855, one year from the first sale of lots, there was in Leavenworth a population of about 1,200 souls, with 500 voters. The concentration of Majors, Russell & Co.'s immense transportation business at this point, the settlement of many of his employes here, the erection of many buildings and consequent encouragement of workmen, carried Leavenworth along a great stride. More hotel accommodations were imperatively demanded, and the "Planters' Hotel Company" was formed. About the 10th of November following, ground was broken for the new hotel, on the northeast corner of Main and Shawnee streets. It was completed during the season of 1856, and opened to guests in December. Leavenworth was also made the starting-point for the Kansas Stage Company.

The fall of 1855 was a period of great business activity for the young town, but the unfortunate civil disturbances which marked the year 1856, caused a general depression—rather, a complete embargo upon commercial transactions. It is the purpose here to give but a running sketch of these troubles, in order that the general reader may understand how Leavenworth was connected with the bitter conflict which raged between the Pro-slavery and the Free-soil parties throughout the Territory.

When the Legislature of the Territory assembled at Pawnee in July, 1855, its first act was to oust the Free-state members, chosen at the second election ordered by Gov. Reeder. In defiance of the Governor's undoubted right to fix the temporary seat of government where he pleased, the Legislature adjourned to the Shawnee Manual Labor School, Johnston County, where the members would be nearer their Missouri friends. The next blow to the Free-state party was the removal of Gov. Reeder. The members thereof saw at once that organized resistance to the outrages being perpetrated upon them had become a necessity of existence. Then came the Free-state conventions held at Lawrence, in June, and the calling of the Big Springs convention, in September. At this time the Free-state party of Kansas was organized, a State organization suggested, and war declared anew against the dictatorship of Missouri. From Leavenworth there were in attendance Marc J. Parrott and H. W. and D. A. Hook. Ex-Gov. Reeder was nominated as Delegate to Congress. Wilson Shannon had been appointed his successor in office. Gen. James H. Lane had taken the field for freedom of soil, freedom of speech and the State Constitution. His first appearance in Leavenworth was upon the evening of September 18, and the vigor of his address upon the exciting topics of the day was eloquently seconded by the "silver tongued" Marc Parrott. Upon the 19th and 20th occurred the State Convention at Topeka, Mr. Parrott, Col. M. W. Delahay, S. N. Latta, H. Miles Moore, Richard Phelan being in attendance as delegates from Leavenworth. The results of that convention are of too broad a nature to be discussed in this local narrative. Suffice it to say that the delegates from Leavenworth took a leading part in the deliberations. A few days after the return of the delegates to Leavenworth Ex-Gov. Reeder arrived in that city, dined at the Leavenworth Hotel with his friends, and in the evening addressed a large crowd of his congressional supporters. He advised them to take no part in the election fixed by the Pro-slavery Legislature for October 1—to only recognize the proceedings of the Topeka Convention as valid, wherein the 9th of October was appointed as election day. His advice was generally heeded, so that Gen. Whitfield, his opponent, had it all his own way on October 1, while on October 9, Mr. Reeder was "unanimously elected." He received over 500 votes in Leavenworth. This day is also noted in political annals of Leavenworth County, as being the day upon which Delaware City opened her polls again upon the county seat question, and obtained a short-lived "glory" as the recognized seat of justice.

About a week after the Constitutional Convention at Topeka had adjourned, in pursuance of a call a large Pro-slavery meeting was held at Leavenworth. This was upon November 14, 1855, and was made the occasion for Gov. Shannon's first visit to the city. He was received by a committee of citizens, and entered the convention as a county delegate. The delegates assembled in Alexander's stone building, southwest corner of Main and Shawnee streets, and elected Gov. Shannon chairman of the convention. An adjournment was taken until afternoon, when Gov. Shannon opened the meeting by denouncing the Topeka Constitution and the Free-state movement generally. Gen. John Calhoun, Surveyor General of Kansas and Nebraska Territories, was also present and made a bitter Pro-slavery harangue. But the "law and order" meeting hooted down the only Free-state speaker who asked to be heard—Marc Parrott. A Free-state meeting was held a week afterwards. Politics were boiling, and the intense state of feeling was not cooled materially by the breaking out of the Wakarusa war. It seemed when Brig.-Gen. Eastin, of the Second Brigade of Kansas Militia and editor of the Kansas Herald, ordered that his troops concentrate at Leavenworth, on December 1, 1855, "to march at once to the scene of the rebellion" and to put down the 1,000 outlaws of Douglas County (armed to the teeth!)—that this point might be turned into a portentous seat of war. In the diary of H. Miles Moore for December 1, however, is the following record: "Agreeable to the call of Brig.-Gen. Eastin about one hundred assembled here. H. C. Dunn was elected Captain, and a few, about thirty or forty, enlisted. They are to start from Salt Creek Valley, to-morrow, at 9 o'clock A. M. No news from Lawrence." But the bulk of the invading army was, as usual, from Missouri. Until December, when Gov. Shannon ordered Gen. Richardson to disband his troops, the excitement did not materially decrease in Leavenworth. Political excitement, civil commotion, and a very severe winter, all combined to check business.

The winter of 1855–56 was the severest which had been experienced in this locality for a long term of years. The first snow of the season fell on the 22d of December, and continued accumulating until the 3d of February, when it lay on the ground to the depth of two feet. On that day, too, the mercury indicated thirty degrees below zero, and for a long time previously had ranged from zero to twenty-two degrees below. The river had been frozen for seven weeks, and the ice was more than two feet thick.

The city of Leavenworth was honored in the State Convention, which assembled at Lawrence on December 22, by the choice of two of her citizens as candidates for high positions. Mark W. Delahay was chosen as the Congressional nominee, and H. Miles Moore as the candidate for Attorney General. The Pro-slavery element, however, was so strong in that community, that the more timid of the Free-state citizens hesitated about holding the election for State and county officers, on January 15. In fact, several days before the election was to take place, a few weak hearts met and resolved that one should not be held. Mayor Slocum (Free-state) had resigned his office, and his course was followed by several members of the Council. The day before the Free-state election, which was fixed for January 15, Dr. J. H. Day, President of the Council, issued a municipal order forbidding it to take place. The document is still preserved as an evidence of the timidity of many members of the Free-state party. No polls were opened, but a capacious old stocking was presented to Free-state voters, and very generally patronized, so that the election took place, although, perhaps, not in "due form."

At Easton, an attack was made upon the polls, which were so vigorously defended by Free-state voters, commanded by Stephen Sparks, of Alexandria Township, that a Pro-slavery man (Mr. Cook) was mortally wounded. Several fights occurred, in which the Pro-slavery men were worsted. Among the Leavenworth people who attended the election at Easton, to see that the voting was fairly conducted, and who assisted in defending the polls, were Capt. R. P. Brown, member-elect of the Legislature, Henry J. Adams, senator-elect, J. C. Green, Joseph H. Byrd, and two or three others. The next morning they were returning in a wagon to Leavenworth, and when about half way to their destination were met by a company of Kickapoo Rangers, under Capt. Martin, and Capt. Dunn's company from Leavenworth, who were on their way to Easton to avenge the treatment of their Pro-slavery friends. There were some fifty troops altogether. The Leavenworth party were made prisoners, turned back to Easton, and confined in a store, where they were guarded for a time by the noisy, drunken crowd of soldiers. Their spite seemed to be particularly concentrated upon Capt. Brown, many of them having known him and learned to fear him in Leavenworth. Finally they managed to get him into an adjoining building, and organized a court for his trial. Capt. Martin, finding it was impossible to control the men any longer, allowed all except Capt. Brown and Mr. Byrd, to escape. The latter was being examined as a witness in the "trial." While this mock trial was going on inside, the more drunken wretches without became impatient, broke in the door, and, led by Robert Gibson, broke up the "court." Gibson then rushed upon Brown, and struck him in the head with a hatchet, before any one could prevent the brutal assault. Shortly afterward his almost lifeless body was carried in a wagon to Cole McCrea's home, and thrown into his house. Capt. Brown's poor wife and several neighbors did all they could to relieve his sufferings, but he died in a few hours afterward, and was buried on Pilot Knob the next day. Capt. Brown was a brave, noble man, and his murder was one of the most heartless of any perpetrated during these cold-blooded, hot-blooded times.

The story of his brutal treatment is told by Cole McCrea, a neighbor of Capt. Brown's, and whose wife was one of several kind friends who attempted to revive the injured man: "They then (after the assault) tossed Brown into a lumber wagon and drove on to Merrill Smith's saloon on Salt Creek. The rough wagon, driven over hard, frozen ground, made the wounded man groan, when the ruffian kicked him in the face, neck and breast to make him keep still. Eli Moore, putting his foot to his cheek, twisted his neck so as to put a tobacco spit into his wound, saying that would ease any d——d abolitionist. Thus abused and kept in the bed of the wagon some seven hours, they drove over to my cabin. Coming up so that the tail end of the wagon would come opposite the door, they flung it open, saying 'Here is Brown!' There being no one at the house but our wives and infant children, Charley Dunn and Pap Taylor undertook to bring him into the house. They first dragged him out of the wagon by the feet, letting his body fall at full length upon the hard, frozen ground. The thud which the husband's body gave against the hard earth echoed in the faithful, loving heart of the wife, and she fell to the floor. Returning consciousness only found her a helpless maniac, and she so continued till my wife delivered her over to her brother at Chicago, who had come from Cass County, Mich., to receive her. The two ruffians then dragged Brown into the cabin as far as his knees. They then staggered and stumbled through the cabin, upsetting the water bucket. My wife could not drag the dying man further in, or close the door, that 18th of January night, one of the coldest ever known in Kansas. The helpless women and children and dying man were left exposed till David Brown, a Tennesseean, came over from the adjoining claim, Capt. Brown died about three hours after being brought home."

As the words "Pilot Knob" will frequently occur in this history in other connections than as being the last resting place of brave Capt. Brown, it may be well to digress here and give the truth of its origin. "Pilot Knob" is situated about one mile and a half southwest of the business part of Leavenworth. It was so named by the Indians who occupied this country. There used to be a huge pile of stone on the extreme south point of the Knob. There were similar mounds of stone on all the high points between the city and the ford of the Kaw River at Lawrence—the Indian trail over which the Sac and Fox, Miami, and other tribes of Indians in the south and southwestern part of the Territory passed in their visit to Fort Leavenworth and Weston. These stone mounds were put up by them as guides. Most of them have since been taken down by land owners. Pilot Knob was one of the most prominent of these stone guides.

Thomas A. Minard, of Easton, at whose house the election was held which was the prime cause of Capt. Brown's murder, narrowly escaped injury at the hands of a mob a few days afterwards. He barricaded his doors, however, and lived to be elected Speaker of the Free-state Assembly which convened on the 4th of March.

Mayor Murphy was inaugurated on the 21st, and as he was one of the strong "law and order" kind, in view of the subsequent events, his address to the Council is a curiosity:

> "Gentlemen," (he said) "we are called together here merely as guardians of the interests of our fellow citizens, and it behooves us to cause wise and judicious counsels to prevail among us, in order that we may well protect those interests; and while it is my duty, it will at the same time be my pleasure to co-operate with you in the adoption of every measure that shall tend to advance the interests and promote the happiness and prosperity of our young and growing city. The obligations of the solemn oath you have just heard administered to me shall be kept steadily in view, and no effort on my part shall be wanting, faithfully to comply therewith. By virtue of the office I now hold I am a conservator of the peace, and in my daily intercourse with my fellow citizens I shall endeavor to impress upon them the necessity of cultivating feelings of amity and good will one towards another, believing that thereby this part of my duty will be made light. It is by a faithful execution of the laws, tempered with that justice and mercy which the real spirit of the law requires, that we must expect as a community to get along harmoniously and prosperously; and in the discharge of my duties I feel assured that their love for order and good government will cause them to curb passion, respect the laws, and obey the legally constituted authorities." (Territorial.)

The 4th of March seemed to have been marked out by Gen. Atchison and other Pro-slavery leaders as the one day destined to be "big with events," when the hordes from Missouri should march through the Territory of Kansas to Topeka, sweeping away from their path every vestige of "Free-soilism." But the Convention met, the new State officers were sworn in, and resolutions were passed upon the cruel murder of Capt. Brown. Two days after the assembling of the Convention word reached Topeka of the plan by which President Pierce proposed to punish the members of the new State government—a government erected in opposition to his territorial pet.

From this date commenced a general and unrelenting persecution of Free-state men. In Lawrence, in April, the unprincipled tool of the Pro-slavery party being the ubiquitous Sheriff Jones, after some smaller fish had been successfully "hooked," an attempt was made upon the person of Ex-Gov. Reeder, who was before the Congressional Committee investigating his claims to a seat in Congress, and also examining into the state of the country. The Governor had made his fortunate escape down the Missouri River before Judge Lecompte, of the United States District Court, sitting at Delaware City, commenced to grind out his batch of indictments against the Free-state officers. In May, Gov. Robinson, the head of the Free-state organization, was arrested at Lexington, Mo., on the pretext that he was "fleeing from an indictment." The indictment for treason had not yet been found against him, but within a week this was accomplished. He was brought to Leavenworth on the 24th, and during the week that he remained in Leavenworth at McCarty's Hotel, the most astute would not have risked an opinion from day to day, as to whether he would be rescued by his Free-state friends or be hanged by a Pro-slavery mob. Rumors were abroad of attempts to be made by both parties, while some believed, as proved to be the case, that nothing rash would be attempted by either. To some extent the Pro-slavery officials who had him in charge considered that their honor was staked upon his safety. Much of the time, therefore, Gen. Richardson stayed in the same room with him, while Judge Lecompte guarded his door like a faithful, common sentinel. Upon orders having been received from Gov. Shannon he was removed to Lecompton, the Territorial capital, on June 1. The Investigating Committee, or at least Messrs. William A. Howard, of Michigan, and John Sherman, of Ohio, were conducting themselves in a manner which did not meet with the approval of Gen. Whitfield's friends. On May 26 they found upon the committee room door the following card, addressed to them:

> SIRS: With feelings of surprise and disgust we have been noticing the unjust manner in which you have been conducting this investigation. We wish to inform you that you can no longer sit in this place. We therefore request you to alter your obnoxious course, in order to avoid consequences which may otherwise follow.
>
> CAPT. HEMP.
> (In behalf of the citizens.)

H. Miles Moore, the attorney of ex-Gov. Reeder, was a target for much of this bitter and dangerous feeling. The next day, after the above notice was posted, a squad of Kickapoo Rangers filed into the room with muskets. Messrs. Sherman, Howard, and Moore, however, were not men to be easily frightened, and the Rangers soon retired, leaving their Lieutenant behind to warn Mr. Moore that he was making himself too prominent in the investigation for his own safety. The next day, at noon, as Mr. Moore and Marc Parrott were sitting together in their law office, the former being engaged in conversation with John Sherman, the two were arrested and marched down Delaware and Second streets to the warehouse of Russell, Major & Waddell, on Cherokee street. The squad of soldiers, under command of Col. W. D. Wilkes, of South Carolina, then marched to the Leavenworth Hotel, leaving a strong guard behind, and arrested Robert Riddel. Other arrests followed. In the afternoon Mr. Parrott was taken before the investigating committee as a witness, and Gen. Whitfield and Judge Halderman ran him off to Fort Leavenworth under the promise that he should be banished the Territory. Mr. Moore, Mr. Conway, clerk of the Investigating Committee, and George Weibling, the Lawrence mail contractor, were kept in confinement, with the crowd howling outside, demanding that the prisoners should be hung. The Pro-slavery fanatics considered Mr. Moore as about their worst enemy, as he had formerly been an owner of slaves himself. But the lengths to which his party had gone within the past few years had driven him into the ranks of the Free-state party. His former friends could not appreciate his true position, and the more bitter partisans looked upon him as a traitor to their cause. It seemed, surely, as if his last day had come, notwithstanding his guards were faithfully performing their part. The mob howled around the warehouse all night. The next day (May 29) Mr. Moore's two companions were discharged, upon promising that they would leave the Territory. Quite early in the morning a rush was made upon the only remaining prisoner, a rope found in the warehouse placed over a joist, and an attempt was made, under the leadership of Capt. T. A. Scott, brother-in-law of Col. A. J. Isacks (the Attorney General) to lynch Mr. Moore. The attempt would have been successful had not he been rescued by Col. Clarkson, the commander of the city militia. Although no further personal demonstrations were made against Mr. Moore or the committee, Mayor Murphy deemed it advisable to call a meeting at Reese & Keith's warehouse, on May 31. All citizens were called who were in favor of "sustaining and enforcing the laws of the Territory of Kansas and the Constitution and Union of the United States, and of restoring peace and quiet in the community." At the meeting a vigilance committee was appointed, and a very bitter spirit evinced towards the investigating committee. The gathering was dissolved in confusion, however, by the temerity of Rev. H. P. Johnson, who dared to offer a resolution that "we believe there are a good many Free-state men in the Territory who are good, true and law-abiding men, and would aid in enforcing the laws of the Territory." The Free-state men of Leavenworth were "not out of the woods" yet, by any means, as is evident when it is told that Mr. Moore was arrested, June 4, upon a bench warrant from Judge Lecompte's court, charged with assuming the office of Attorney

General of Kansas. He was taken before J. A. Halderman, Judge of the Probate Court, and admitted to bail in the sum of $1,000, to appear before the Hon. Samuel D. Lecompte, on the third Monday of August, at Delaware. In the meantime the vigilance committee, appointed by the Mayor, which was to "restore peace and quiet to the community" had been increased to fifty, and on June 5 (the day after Mr. Moore's arrest, by "due process of law,") they gave Rev. J. B. McAbee and Senator H. J. Adams notice to quit the Territory by the first boat. A few days after, William T. Marvin and George W. Witherell were arrested for being judges of election during the previous spring. The proclamation of Gov. Shannon, ordering the disbanding of all committees organized for the purpose of driving settlers from the Territory had the effect of breaking up the vigilance committee, so that the Free-state men were protected from that danger.

The sacking of Lawrence in May, followed by the John Brown war, the published reports of the investigating committee and Gen. Whitfield's rage, the marching of Whitfield's troops into Kansas, the report of Gen. Lane's advance from the North with his Abolition army, etc., etc., all served to keep alive the hot fires of political feeling, and drew on the ruffian element to the commission of bloody crimes. Leavenworth was not exempt. In fact one of the most heathenish (because so coolly premeditated, with no provocation whatever) occurred near the south line of the city on August 19. A Missouri ruffian named Fuget had made a bet of six dollars against a pair of boots, that in less than two hours he would bring into Leavenworth an Abolitionist's scalp. Starting out on his inhuman errand he met a young man named Hoppe, who had just arrived from Illinois a few days ago, and was returning from Lawrence, where he had taken his wife to visit a sister. He was shot dead from his carriage by Fuget, who scalped his victim and left him in the road. He then carried the reeking scalp with him to the house of his cousin, Mrs. Todd, situated on the Lawrence road, about a mile from where the crime was committed, wrapped up its shocking evidence in a newspaper and fled to Missouri. In May, 1857, he was arrested in Leavenworth, tried for murder and acquitted! Fuget's act was applauded by Capt. Fred. Emory and his gang of Regulators, but an innocent German, who expressed horror at the spectacle was shot himself. The chief parties to this terrible affair were comparatively unknown, and the case is merely adduced to show what must have been the feeling in the breasts of the lower class of Pro-slavery men towards all Abolitionists. The ruffians of the Pro-slavery party had sworn it, that no Free-state man could travel on the road between Leavenworth and Lawrence. Capt. A. B. Miller and his gang therefore kept a close watch over the Devil's Highway, as they might have called it. On the 27th of August, Rev. Mr. Nute, the Unitarian minister of Lawrence, Mrs. Hoppe, his sister-in-law, wife of the murdered man, and John Wilder, a merchant of Lawrence, started with teams to obtain provisions at Leavenworth. When near the city they were all taken prisoners by Emory's gang. Mrs. Hoppe was released and got passage down the river, and thus disappeared from the scene of her husband's heartless death. The others were held prisoners of war, until released by order of Gov. Geary. A reign of terror had again commenced in Leavenworth. Armed bodies of men were stationed at all points along the river and turned every boat back which brought suspected Free-state emigrants. Bands of ruffians were also organized, principally in Missouri, to drive away actual settlers guilty of Free-state opinions. Among the most noted of these bands was that which ravaged Leavenworth under command of Captain Frederick Emory, a United States mail contractor. In the name of "law and order" they entered the houses and stores of Free-state people and drove them into the street, without regard to age, sex or previous condition. On the Sunday night preceding the election for Mayor, (September 1,) about forty men went through the streets of the city crying out for all who would not take up arms to enforce the territorial laws to leave Leavenworth immediately or suffer the consequences. The next day, after committing many outrages, the Regulators, under Emory, approached the house of William Phillips, the lawyer, who in May, 1855, had been tarred and feathered, ridden on a rail and subjected to other indignities in the streets of Weston. Says one account of the outrage: "Phillips, supposing he was to be driven out of house and home, resolved not to submit to the indignity, and bravely took the initiative himself. Standing boldly out upon the veranda of his house, when the ruffians drew up in front of it, he fired upon them, killing two of their number. They instantly directed a volley of bullets at him and the house, and Phillips fell pierced in a dozen places, the door casing being literally riddled with the leaden storm. He expired almost instantly in the presence of his wife and another lady. His brother, who was with him, had his arm so baldly broken with bullets, that he was compelled to submit to an amputation. Fifty of the Free-state prisoners were then driven aboard the "Polar Star," bound for St. Louis. On the next day a hundred more were embarked on board the steamer "Emma." For two days, September and 2, Emory and his 800 Regulators paraded the streets of Leavenworth, and having collected a sufficient batch of Free-state criminals, shipped them out of the Territory to St. Louis, without any provisions whatever, and having previously confiscated all their goods. Many citizens fled from the city, some escaping to the fort and placing themselves under the protection of the United States.

The arrival of the new appointee, Gov. Geary, was most opportune, as Capt. Emory and his gang were holding high carnival in and around Leavenworth. They had just captured three Free-State settlers and confiscated their property when the Governor arrived at Fort Leavenworth, on September 9, and this, notwithstanding the emigrants were under the protection of a United States officer. Capt. Emory was captured, his prisoners set at liberty, and was in turn released himself. The Governor left Leavenworth on the 10th for Lecompton.

The arrival of Gov. Geary in the Territory, may be said to mark the commencement of the end of the terrible conflict which had raged in Kansas for two years. Upon the day of his arrival, he addressed a letter to Hon. Wm. L. Marcy, in which he says:

> "The town of Leavenworth is now in the hands of armed bodies of men, who, having been enrolled as militia, perpetrate outrages of the most atrocious character, under shadow of authority from the Territorial Government. Within a few days these men have robbed and driven from their homes unoffending citizens; have fired upon and killed others in their own dwellings, and stolen horses and property, under the pretense of employing them in the public service. They have seized persons who have committed no offense; and, after stripping them of all their valuables, placed them on steamers and sent them out of the Territory. Some of these bands, who have thus shamefully violated their rights and privileges, and shockingly misused and abused the oldest inhabitants of the Territory, who had settled here with their wives and children, are strangers from distant States, who have no interest in, nor care for, the welfare of Kansas, and contemplate remaining here only so long as opportunities for mischief and plunder exist.

By October of 1856, peace virtually reigned in Leavenworth, the "Regulators" of this city being the last to abandon their organization, and only then after they had received an unmistakable order from the Governor, addressed, on the 1st of that month, to Mayor Murphy. It reads as follows:

> "I regret to inform you that since the receipt of your letter, I have received numerous complaints from persons claiming to be your citizens. It is said there exists in your city an irresponsible body of persons, unknown to the law, calling themselves 'Regulators;' that these persons prowl about your streets at night, and warn peaceable citizens 'to leave the Territory, never to return, or they may be removed when least expected.'
>
> "This thing, Mr. Mayor, will never do, and can not be tolerated for a single moment. These 'Regulators' must disband, and leave the government of the city to yourself and the authorities known to the law."

The Mayor then issued his proclamation, declaring that he would rigidly enforce the law against the outlaws, and the excesses were checked.

Another murder because of political opinions, and one which caused great excitement, was the killing of James T. Lyle, City Recorder, by William Haller. Mr. Lyle, a Kentuckian by birth and a bitter Pro-slavery man, had been in the front rank of those who persecuted those of Free-state proclivities. Haller himself had been obliged at one time to flee the Territory with his family, and there was, undoubtedly, a bitterness of long growth between them. The latter was from Ohio, a watchmaker by trade, industrious and respected, but deep rooted in his opinions, having been the means of saving the lives of several men who thought as he did and were not afraid to express their sentiments. At the election, which occurred June 29, 1857, a number of voters were gathered at the First Ward polls, and Eli Moore offered a Pro-slavery ballot to a German, who indignantly tore it up. This raised a commotion and Haller took the part of his political friend, the German. This angered Lyle. Words between him and Haller led to a fight, in which Lyle was stabbed in the back He died from the effects of the wound. Haller was arrested, and a Pro-slavery mob threatened to lynch him. He was protected by his friends, however, and held for trial upon a charge of murder, being confined at Fort Leavenworth. In August he escaped.

But organized oppression and cruelty because of political opinions were really dispelled in Leavenworth. The city, however, was still infested by many Missouri roughs and disreputable characters, and the citizens saw that some powerful remedy was necessary to keep them in check. An occasion offered in July, 1857, when James Stephens was foully murdered and robbed of $108 near the river. His murderers, John C. Quarles and W. M. Bayes, were taken from the jail and lynched on an old elm tree near the sawmill, despite the protestations of Judge Lecompte and other law-abiding citizens. He was threatened with personal violence himself, as also was the United States Marshal, who got on a box before the mob of over a thousand people and attempted to pacify them. The City Marshal and police were hustled out of the way. The crowd battered down the door of the jail with a stick of timber, dragged Quarles forth and hung him to a tree. The noose was not properly tightened and for a moment the man managed to grasp the rope with his hands, but a heavy-set, brutal ruffian caught him by the feet, threw his whole weight upon him and strangled his victim to death. When the mob returned for Bayes there was more protesting by the authorities, and Mrs. Bayes fought them off like an infuriated beast, as she was. Bayes, however, followed in the steps of Quarles, except that he allowed his hands to be tied behind him, and was swung off into eternity in a less horrible manner. William Knighten, a weak-minded young man, and Bill Woods, a counterfeiter, and alleged accomplices in the murder, were taken to Delaware City, tried, and finally discharged. This lynching affair seemed to check the reckless spirit of crime, which heretofore pervaded the city, and thereafter Leavenworth was more free from lawlessness than most of the border towns.

The fire of July 15, 1858, was a blow to Leavenworth. It originated in the theatre, corner of Third and Delaware streets, over the Market House. After enveloping several buildings on that side of the street, it leaped to Dr. Park's drug store, on Delaware street, sweeping down both sides of that thoroughfare, and also down Third street to Shawnee. It also spread down both sides of that street for some distance. Had it not been for the heroic efforts of the citizens, seconded by a tremendous rainstorm, almost the whole city might have been destroyed. As it was, a strong south wind was blowing, and in about an hour over $200,000 worth of property was destroyed, upon which there was an insurance of not more than fifteen per cent. Thirty-two stores were burned, and much property not destroyed was stolen. It was a gloomy time for Leavenworth, and many persons departed, never to return. Many of those who remained were in the most destitute circumstances.

In January, 1859, considerable commotion was occasioned by the kidnapping of Charley Fisher, an alleged fugitive slave from Louisiana. He had resided in Leavenworth for some time, conducting himself as a quiet, intelligent citizen. On the 13th of that month, Frank Campbell, Deputy United States Marshal, came to the Planters House and attempted to force Mr. Smith, the landlord, to allow him admittance, that he might take off Fisher, employed at the hotel, claiming that he was a fugitive slave. Being refused, he obtained a ladder, and putting his head through the window, threatened to blow Mr. Smith's brains out. The door was then opened, and he, in company with Frank Harrison, handcuffed the negro. The assistance of another man was also obtained, and Fisher was finally taken across the Missouri River in a boat. While his captors were sleeping, he escaped to the Kansas side, about four miles below Leavenworth, and filed off his handcuffs. Warrants were issued for the arrest of his kidnappers, who, after eluding the officers for some days, were examined before Recorder Adams, in February, and all three bound over in $2,000 bonds for trial before G. W. Gardiner, Probate Judge. During the preliminary examination there appeared one Hutchinson, who claimed to have bought Fisher as a Louisiana slave, in 1854, giving him a written permit to hire his own time on any boat running on the Mississippi River between New Orleans and St. Louis, and on any boat on the Missouri River. Fisher was to make a traveling barber-shop of himself, and pay Hutchinson $10 a week for the privilege, Fisher himself to receive the balance. It was in this capacity that he traveled through portions of Illinois, and finally came to Kansas. While Fisher was attending the trial before Judge Gardiner, Hutchinson sought to have him arrested as a fugitive slave, under a writ issued by Judge Lecompte, but the court refused. In protecting him from arrest, the City Marshal kept him in such close confinement that at one time he was guarded by a force of 400 men, and seemed to be in fact a prisoner. In March, the three defendants were taken before Judge Lecompte on a writ of habeas corpus, and found guilty of the crime of kidnapping a slave but as the law did not provide for punishing such an offense, they were discharged. Fisher was brought back to the city, and was rescued from his strong guard by a party of citizens who believed him to be a free man. He escaped, and is subsequently heard of as a State Senator from Mississippi. Both the city and Judge Gardiner were sued in the Federal Court for $1,000 damages each, for hindering an alleged master in the capture of his slave. The cases never came to trial.

FIRST THINGS.

Among the "first things" which have not been naturally developed in the course of this narrative, are those given below:

The first birth which occurred at Leavenworth was that of Cora Leavenworth Kyle, daughter of A. T. Kyle, and granddaughter of "Uncle" George Keller, at the Leavenworth Hotel, December 6, 1854.

The first death of a resident occurred on the same day—Tuesday, December 6, 1854. Stephen T. Noble was drowned near the Platte City landing, above the fort, while on his way in a boat from Weston to this city. The boat was loaded with lath, struck a snag, and Mr. Noble and a young man with him, Joseph O'Neil, were drowned before assistance could reach them from the fort.

John Grund was married to Miss Eliza A. Tennell January 13, 1856, and their son, born January 14, 1857, was the first child born of Leavenworth parents.

The first grist mill in the vicinity of Leavenworth was put in operation at East Leavenworth, or "Slab Town," in January, 1855, by Messrs. Panton & Yohe. It was a combined saw and grist mill—a small concern, valued at $4,000. The proprietors offered to grind corn on the most reasonable terms.

George Russell was the first tinsmith and hardware dealer. His shop was on Main street.

F. & W. Engelman were among the very first grocers, if not the first, who opened a store devoted strictly to this branch of business.

In February, 1855, Julius Trumel opened the first regular barber shop in Leavenworth, being located near the corner of Cherokee and Water streets.

Lewis N. Rees (also Postmaster), established the first warehouse and general store in the fall of 1854.

Wm. Phillips, Col. Dave Johnson, John I. Moore, B. H. Twombly and Cole McCrea were among the very earliest of the attorneys who put out their shingles in Leavenworth. Judge John A. Halderman came soon after from Lexington, Ky. He was a man of note, and is at present consul to Siam.

Dr. Charles Leib, physician, had an office on the levee, "in the big tent north of the big elm tree," as early as September, 1854, and was probably the first doctor who permanently located here. About the same time came Dr. J. H. Day.

Samuel M. Lyon was the first house-joiner and carpenter, settling also during that month.

In October, 1854, John J. Bentz established the first wholesale grocery—loca[illegible] Water street. M. France & Co. also opened up a line of drugs, disp[illegible]ith a stock of family groceries, in a room in the Herald office until the[illegible]ing, one door south, could be completed.

Chris. Dengler, the first shoemaker, opened a shop on Delaware street about the same time.

MUNICIPAL ORGANIZATION.

The history of the town company, although it extends beyond the municipal organization of Leavenworth, is fully treated as a portion of the early history. In the summer of 1855, the city of Leavenworth was incorporated by special act of the Territorial Legislature, sitting at Shawnee Mission, Johnston County. The supplementary act, passed shortly afterwards, named J. H. Day, W. H. Adams and Lewis N. Rees as Judges of Election, which took place September 3, 1855. The officers elected were Thomas T. Slocum, Mayor; Messrs. J. H. Day, Thomas H. Doyle, Frederick Emory, A. Fisher, William T. Marvin, Dr. G. J. Park and George W. Russell. At the nominating convention, held at Rees' warehouse, Mr. Panton stated that the candidates were to be chosen irrespective of political opinions; that the meeting knew no Free-soil, no Slavery, but only such men as would best serve the interests of the city. That the choice was made on political grounds and that it savored too much of "Free-soilism," will be made sufficiently clear by subsequent events. The first meeting of the newly elected council was held September 11, 1855, in a room over J. L. Roundy's furniture store, on Main street, near Delaware. Dr. J. H. Day was chosen President, and Scott J. Anthony, Register or City Clerk. At this first meeting, Messrs. Fisher and Park were absent. The by-laws of the city of Muscatine, Iowa, for 1853, were adopted as the form of city government. Then William A. McDowell was chosen Marshal; William H. Bailey, Treasurer; H. G. Weibling, Assessor; John I. Moore, Attorney; E. L. Berthoud, Surveyor, and M. L. Truesdell, Comptroller.

The Leavenworth Fire Association was organized by consent of the City Council, on the 17th of the month, and a charter granted for the formation of a company, in October. The first city ordinance was also passed September 17, and entitled "Relating to games of chance and skill." The resignation of Mayor Slocum, on January 8, 1856, caused considerable excitement and some indignation. George Russell also resigned as Councilman, and the seat of J. H. McClelland became vacant because he persistently absented himself. They were all Free-state men, and found their duties too "onerous" in these Pro-slavery times. An election was held on January 21, 1856, and William E. Murphy, a strong Pro-slavery man was elected as Mayor. The two vacancies in the council were filled by the election of H. D. McMeekin and S. A. Craig.

In September, 1856, William E. Murphy was re-elected Mayor.

September 13, 1856, the following city officers were elected by the Council: William Perry, Register or Clerk; James P. Bird, Treasurer; William P. Shockley, City Marshal; Hugh M. Moore, City Attorney.

On March 25, 1857, Mr. Murphy resigned as Mayor (having been appointed Agent of the Pottawatomie Indians), and in April, Henry J. Adams was elected to fill the vacancy. Mr. Adams was re-elected in September. Among those who have served two or more terms as Mayor of Leavenworth may be mentioned H. B. Denman, 1858, 1859, 1862; James L. McDowell, 1860, 1864; D. R. Anthony, 1863, 1872; Thomas Carney, 1865, 1866; John A. Halderman, 1867, 1870; W. M. Fortescue, 1879, 1881, 1882.

In November, 1855, the city purchased a building for a jail—the price paid, $600—and E. K. Lowell, John Roundy and J. B. Davis were employed as special policemen. They are undoubtedly the germ of the present police force of Leavenworth. The father of the Fire Department has already been introduced.

It was about this time that the city had some trouble with City Comptroller Truesdell. In October, 1855, an ordinance was passed, defining his duties, and all that sort of thing. When the gentleman came to make a claim upon the city treasury, for services performed, he and the Council found that no "salary attached to the office." In February, Mr. Truesdell resigned, and G. J. Park was elected in his place. In March ex-Comptroller Truesdell presented a claim of $75 for services performed, and his bill was rejected. In April, Mr. Truesdell was further punished by being dropped from the list of attorneys which the city had employed to defend the county-seat claims of Leavenworth.

The Council continued to meet in temporary quarters until the elegant Market House, corner of Fifth and Delaware streets, was erected in 1858. It then held its sessions in the upper portion of that building. The city offices were also there located. A portion of the lower part of the building is now occupied by the Fire Department.

In the spring of 1855 the population of Leavenworth was only about 500. By the fall of 1857 this figure had increased to 5,000, and in a year from that date to 10,000. In 1859 Leavenworth was placed in telegraphic communication with the East, its streets were graded, sidewalks laid, gas works constructed, etc., etc. The war, disastrous to so many cities, was a God-send of prosperity to Leavenworth. The constant activity at the military reservation was equal to the addition of a thriving village to the city's trade. By the latter part of the war the population of Leavenworth itself had increased to 20,000. But the time came when the fostering effects of the war failed to be felt in Leavenworth, and then after 1870, both as a municipal organization and a commercial city, she "progressed backwards." Having turned her attention of late years to manufacturing, however, she is again taking strong steps forward, and has become one of the most important centers on the Missouri River. The coal mines which have been opened in her immediate vicinity—rich in yield and good in quality—are assisting to make Leavenworth what she aims to become, and upon which she relies for her future—a great manufacturing city. She is now a city of 19,000 people, beautifully located on the west bank of the Missouri, surrounded by a delightful country, favored by that charming national park, Fort Leavenworth, adorned with tastefully constructed and comfortable homes, thick and solidly constructed business houses and upheld by an intelligent class of citizens. Although her population is not as large as at the close of the war, she has established herself on a foundation of prosperity which is built of rock.

As indicating her financial condition as a municipal organization, it is learned that in June, 1882, her total liabilities were $376,722.09. The receipts for the year ending March 31, 1882, as shown by City Treasurer McKee's last annual report, were $138,908.47; disbursements, $103,721.72; balance April 1, 1882, $63,979.46.

The city offices, located for a time in the court house building, were removed again to Market Hall in July, 1882. The present officers are as follows: Mayor, W. M. Fortescue; City Attorney, E. Stillings; Treasurer, John McKee; Clerk, O. C. Beeler; Marshal, S. E. Ellis; Police Judge, L. M. Hacker; Engineer, E. Diefendorf; Street Commissioner, G. Geiger; Chief Engineer of Fire Department, P. Burns; President of the Council, A. A. Fenn.

LEAVENWORTH CITY AND COUNTY IN THE WAR.

As Leavenworth was the largest town in the State at the beginning of the Rebellion it is but natural that she should have raised more troops and furnished a longer array of names of persons who became prominent actors in the great drama. Probably its contiguity to Fort Leavenworth caused many Unionists of Missouri and other exposed localities to flee to Leavenworth for safety. Many of these people enlisted in the ranks of the Union army and helped to swell Leavenworth's enrollment of Union soldiers.

On the morning of April 18, 1861, the steamer "Sam Gaty," one of the regular St. Louis packets, landed at the Leavenworth wharf with a Confederate flag flying from her jack-staff. As soon as the obnoxious banner was noticed, a crowd collected with the determination to have it hauled down. The leaders in the movement were members of the Turner's society of the city. While they were bringing out a famous cannon named "Old Kickapoo," to enforce their demand, the flag was removed. But this did not satisfy the crowd, who regarded the display of a disunion emblem in Leavenworth as an insult to the city. So they went on board the "Gaty," and insisted that the flag should be given up. This was at once done, and the disunion emblem carried off in triumph. Subsequently, an American flag was procured, and the captain of the "Gaty" hoisted it with his own hands, thus atoning for the insult he had offered the community. While the affair was in progress, the steamer "Russell" came to the wharf, but before she was permitted to land, the people on shore compelled her to show her colors. She displayed the stars and stripes, and as it went to the head of the flag-staff, the crowd gave vent to their delight in shouts and cheers. These incidents show the popular sentiment in Leavenworth at the inception of the Rebellion.

As another evidence that Leavenworth's people were loyal from the very beginning of the Rebellion, the following is related: On the 20th day of April, a rumor prevailed in the city that the rebels contemplated a raid from Parkville and Independence, Mo., for the capture of Fort Leavenworth. Mayor McDonald visited headquarters and tendered the services of 100 men (more if necessary) from the city militia company. Capt. Steele, then in command of the fort, replied that he was able to defend the fort against 5,000 assailants, but he accepted the Mayor's offer, and accordingly 100 volunteers from the city were stationed in the fort. The details were made from the Leavenworth Light Infantry, the Union Guards, and the Shields Guards. (The last named company was commanded by Capt. Daniel McCook, of the famous "fighting McCook family," who was killed during the war, after he attained the rank of Brevet Major General.) At the same time Capt. Steele gave Mayor McDowell an ample supply of arms, to be used in the defense of the city.

April 30, 1861, the services of the detachments of city volunteers were dispensed with by the arrival of regular troops, and the following letter of thanks was tendered to Captains McCook, Cozzens, and Clayton, by order of the Colonel commanding:

"GENTLEMEN: I am instructed by the Colonel commanding this post, to express to you, and through you to your patriotic soldiers, his thanks for the alacrity displayed by your respective commands in turning out in defense of the arsenal and public property at this place. The Colonel desires me to say that such acts are the best evidence of the readiness with which you will be found rallying in defense of your country's flag, whenever and wherever she may require your services. The arrival of the detachment of the Second Infantry renders your further services at this post unnecessary. You are, therefore, from this date most honorably discharged from duty at Leavenworth arsenal. In thus parting with you and your commands, the Colonel directs me again to thank you for the services you have performed, and to express to one and all of you his kindest wishes for your future happiness and welfare. I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant.

"GEORGE B. RUGGLES,
"Second Lieut., Adjt. Second Inf., Post Adjt."

The three military companies of the city made rapid accessions to their memberships, and immediate steps were taken for the enlistment of several additional companies; in fact, Leavenworth seemed to be one vast camp, and nothing engaged the attention of the people but the suppression of the Rebellion. A detailed account of the part enacted by Leavenworth, in supplying men for the suppression of the Rebellion, may be found elsewhere. It may be stated here, however, that by the 20th day of May, 1861, eighteen companies were organized, and a majority of them were ready to march any where to fight for the old flag. Annexed may be found the names of these companies, and also of their commanding officers: Home Guard—Thomas Carney; Leavenworth Fencibles—J. B. Stockton; German Rifles—J. B. Huesgen; Leavenworth Guards—I. G. Losee; Emmett Guards—William Phillips; Steuben Guards—Gustavus Zesch; Delaware Guards—G. W. Gardiner; Delaware Rifles—B. T. Twombly; Lincoln Rangers—William Freeland; Mounted Rifles—H. P. Johnson; Leavenworth Grays—A. H. Kent; Leavenworth Rifles—W. B. Smith; Phœnix Guards—Peter McFarland; Shields Guards—Daniel McCook; Leavenworth Light Infantry—Powell Clayton; Union Guards—Edward Cozzens; Lafayette Guards—David Block; Lane Rifles—T. J. Weed. A few months later many additional companies were enlisted.

The first Leavenworth company regularly mustered into the United States service was the Steuben Guards, Capt. Gustavus Zesch. The date of muster was May 27, 1861. The company was mustered in as Company I, of the First Kansas Infantry. This company and another Leavenworth company attached to the same regiment, participated in the battles of Wilson's Creek, Tuscumbia, Tallahatchie, Bayou Macon, Lake Providence, and other engagements. In the first battle above indicated, Leavenworth sustained a heavy loss.

Among the many military organizations effected after May 20, 1861, the following are mentioned: Kickapoo Guards—Capt. Fred. Wellhouse; Capt. Black's Guards re-enlisted to serve three years in the first regiment of home guards; Lyon Guards—D. H. Bailey, Captain; Fourth Ward Guards—L. B. Wheat, Captain; The "Old Guard"—James M. Dickson, Captain; Third Ward Guards—Wm. Haller, Captain; Leavenworth Mercantile Guards—M. S. Adams, Captain; Leavenworth Light Cavalry—I. G. Losee, Captain. A cavalry company of Union Home Guards was organized in Stranger Township, with J. P. Salisbury as Captain.

Suicide of Gen. Lane.—The tragic death of Gen. James H. Lane, at Fort Leavenworth, on July 11, 1866, created one of the greatest of excitements which stirred the State at any time during the war. Whatever may have been Gen. Lane's faults, it is a fact now quite generally recognized that without his vigorous arm and bold heart Kansas would have stood little chance of ever becoming a free State. The circumstances attending his sad end are thus given by a personal friend and admirer: "In the latter part of June, 1866, he procured leave of absence from his arduous duties in the United States Senate and returned to his home in Kansas. He seemed in poor health and greatly depressed in spirits, but returned towards Washington, accompanied by his wife. Reaching St. Louis his symptoms were so alarming that his physicians expressed fear for his recovery, and the opinion that he was threatened with softening of the brain. Under this advice he returned to Kansas, Friday, June 29, and stopped with his brother-in-law, Capt. McCall, at the Government Farm, adjacent to Leavenworth. Here the symptoms of insanity increased. On Sunday, July 1, he expressed a desire to ride out, and Capt. McCall and Capt. Adams accompanied him in a carriage. As they stopped to open one of the farm gates he jumped out of the carriage and, exclaiming 'Good-by, gentlemen!' discharged a revolver in his mouth, the ball passing upward through the head and out almost at the center of the cranium. He was carried to the farm house and remained in a comatose condition, with spasmodic motions of the arm and right leg, until July 11, when he died. At one time he seemed to be recovering and recognized friends, even naming them in a whisper. His wonderful physical constitution sustained him for an unprecedented period, and attracted great attention from the medical fraternity.

"The aberration of mind has been attributed to various causes, but so little is known that we are hardly justified in expressing an opinion. The writer, who knew him well, saw him but a few days before he left the Senate for the last time and visited him two days preceding his suicide, is of the opinion that the direct cause of his insanity was the supposed desertion of his friends on account of his support of President Johnson's veto of the civil-rights bill, and threats of damaging exposure of his conduct in regard to Government contracts, in which he was alleged to have a personal interest."

FORT LEAVENWORTH AS IT IS.

The history of Fort Leavenworth has been traced up to the time that it has acquired its present status as a magnificent natural park. If the visitor expects to find many of the grim and unpleasant features of war at the fort, he will be happily disappointed. No grim battlements frown upon him, but rather he is ushered into a beautiful village by way of a broad macadamized roadway, which connects the city with the fort. To the right are the buildings of the Commissary department and the offices of the heads of departments. The two main structures were erected in 1859, for arsenal purposes. These and other buildings once occupied as officers' headquarters, compose the old portion of the fort. Gen. Pope's residence, a spacious home-like house, surrounded by beautiful flower gardens and breathing an air of comfort and luxuriance, can be seen just west of these buildings. Continuing the drive into the fort grounds, one comes upon as charming a view as can well be imagined. Passing a number of cannon, mortars and other ordnance—the ordnance depot—the two main drives meet in one broad way, which circles around as fine a parade ground and as magnificent a grass-plat as the sun ever shone upon. Here and there cool patches of dark shade are cast upon the sward by graceful trees, while upon the other side of the broad, smooth roadway, elegant residences front upon two sides of this smooth sea of green velvet. These are the officers' residences. Many of the buildings are over twenty years old, but the clinging vines and bright flowers which adorn them, give an appearance of rest and social beauty to the structures which would not attach to them if they were new and modern in architectural structure. The wide verandas which stretch across most of them, when graced by bright men, women and children, seem, for all the world, to be a portion of some generous English home in some lovely English village. Before passing further, reference should be made to the gem of a chapel building, situated on the east side of the garrison, on Arsenal avenue. The building is in a charming spot, overlooking the river; is built of limestone, constructed in the English style of architecture, and would be an ornament to a large city. Rev. David White is chaplain. The National Cemetery—Noble Warwick, Superintendent—is beautifully located half a mile west of the garrison. To the west of the parade ground are the soldiers' barracks and the School of Application for Cavalry and Infantry. But one wing of the building, which is the headquarters of the school, has been completed. When finished, the structure will be one of the most attractive and imposing at the fort. Across the way from the school building is the guard-house, and near by is the Fort Leavenworth Hotel, a large, spacious building which sets back a distance from the avenue, and is the home of fifty or sixty officers. (This was formerly used as a hospital.) The Catholic Chapel, a plain, substantial brick building, is still further to the west. Father Downey is pastor. A number of comfortable officers' residences are situated upon the north side of this thoroughfare, called the "West End." The view of the reservation from this point is imposing and picturesque. To the south is the extensive Government farm, teeming with grain—its pasture lands covered with plump and hardy live-stock. Farther to the west are billows of thick foliage, while beyond all is the beautiful city of Leavenworth, connected with the charms of the fort by that broad highway, over which military wagons are slowly moving, or gay equipages dashing back and forth. Passing the old barracks again, and verging towards the northeast, the fine structure, known as the military prison, is reached. Guards are pacing its wide, high walls, and sentinels are on duty at its gates. Here, almost for the first time, the visitor is impressed with the idea that the hand of military discipline is iron-bound, but he is relieved in spirit if he is fortunate enough to meet the genial governor of the prison, Capt. Blunt. His residence adjoins the prison, overlooking a grand expanse of the Missouri River, charming ravines, and in fact as romantic and beautiful a scene as can be witnessed in the State. From this point the great iron bridge can be seen spanning the river. Over it the Rock Island & Pacific enters the Reservation from the east. The Leavenworth, Atchison & Northwestern (controlled by the Missouri Pacific) also passes through the Reservation from north to south, and the Kansas Central (narrow gauge) enters its northeast corner, and runs in a northwesterly direction through the lower farm.

The principal features which go to make up Fort Leavenworth have been given, but when it is stated that a news-stand, telegraph office, reading-room, post-office, and all the other accompaniments of a city are found, it is unnecessary to say that the fort is a busy locality as well as "a thing of beauty and a joy forever," for weary denizens from the city. It is, as stated, a complete and fascinating little village, where can be found the best of society. A peculiar source of enjoyment are the concerts rendered by the fine military band, in the summer season. Upon these occasions the beauty and the fashion of the city and the fort crowd the beautiful avenues which wind through the grounds in all directions. In the winter, parties, social hops and literary and musical entertainments serve to break the monotony of village life. Fort Leavenworth is certainly the paradise of military life.

In concluding this brief description of Fort Leavenworth, lovers of its natural beauty and of the charm of the surrounding country would consider it an "unpardonable sin" if no reference were made to "Sheridan's Drive." The old Rialto road, north of the Fort, Salt Creek valley and the broad Missouri—the grand sweep of country which one almost feels more than sees as he passes along this beautiful drive, cannot but impress the fact upon his mind that it would be unpardonable to slight such beauty which has been so long attached to Fort Leavenworth as one of its famous charms.

Fort Leavenworth is the headquarters of the Department of the Missouri, which includes the States of Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and Colorado; the Territory of New Mexico and the Indian Territory; Forts Elliott and Bliss, Texas, including the town of San Elizario, on the Rio Grande, and that portion of El Paso County lying north of an east and west line passing immediately south of San Elizario, Camp on Snake River, and Supply Depot at Rawlin's Station, Wyoming Territory. The Department is commanded by Major-General John Pope. The Department staff is as follows: Major E. R. Platt, adjutant general; Major J. J. Coppinger, Tenth Infantry, acting assistant inspector general; Lieut.-Colonel Judson D. Bingham, chief quartermaster; Major George Bell, chief commissary of subsistence; Major D. L. Magruder, surgeon U. S. A., attending surgeon; Major W. R. Gibson, paymaster U. S. A., chief paymaster, First Lieut. Thos. N. Bailey, corps of engineers, chief engineer officer; Capt. D. M. Taylor, ordnance department, aide-de-camp; First Lieut. S. W. Groesbeck, Sixth Infantry, on duty in office of the judge-advocate of the department; Capt. George Shorkley, Fifteenth Infantry, general instructor of musketry; First Lieut. W. C. Manning, Twenty-third Infantry, acting general instructor of musketry, chief ordnance officer and commanding ordnance depot; Second Lieut. Wm. A. Glassford, signal corps, signal officer, and in charge of military telegraph lines of the department.

Fort Leavenworth Post and Military School.—The post of Fort Leavenworth is in command of Col. Elwell S. Otis, of the Twentieth Infantry, who also has charge of the School of Application for Cavalry and Infantry. There are stationed at the post 326 enlisted men—five companies of infantry, four troops of cavalry and one light battery of artillery. In addition to the permanently attached officers, one officer from each of the ten cavalry and twenty-five infantry regiments of the United States army are at the school of application. All lieutenants form a part of the school, and are sent to Fort Leavenworth every two years. The first class take a course in military and international law, Mahan's outposts, field fortifications, signaling and telegraphy, operations of war, etc., etc.; everything as taught by the great military masters. The second class are drilled in the common branches, and receive practical instruction in field fortifications, surveying, field and garrison duty.

The school is not established by law, but by order of the War Department and under the general Congressional act authorizing such establishments. In 1881 Capt. Hall, of the Nineteenth Infantry, erected the wing of the building now occupied. The new brick barracks were also built. When the central building of the school structure is completed, it will be occupied as the administration headquarters of the school and post.

In March, 1881, Congress appropriated $80,000 for the erection of the new barracks, but as the lowest bid exceeded the appropriation, the erection of only one wing has thus far been authorized.

To return again to the school. Although it is as yet something of an experiment, success has so far attended the well directed labors of Col. Otis that it will probably become a permanent, as it is already a valuable institution of the military service.

The Military Prison.—This is considered a post independent of Fort Leavenworth, it being under the management of a governor who is responsible to the U. S. Prison Commissioners. Capt. Asa P. Blunt, A. Q. M., U. S. A., is governor, his accounts and work generally being inspected every three months by Gen. Nelson H. Davis, on Gen. Phil. Sheridan's staff. Capt. Blunt has held his present position about six years, and by his energy and foresight has made Fort Leavenworth military prison a model institution of its kind.

The first buildings were erected in the winter of 1874-75. Major J. M. Robertson being what was then known as commandant. After serving a year and a half he was succeeded by the present incumbent. Capt. Blunt at once set about reforming the affairs of the institution, and inaugurated by congressional enactment, several regulations which evinced the humane views which he took of what prison discipline should accomplish—not humiliation, but reformation. Any prisoner now, by good behavior while in prison, can re-enlist in the service of the United States, and is either transported free of charge to the post at which he was last stationed, or to an equal distance in any direction from Fort Leavenworth. In addition, he is given a good suit of clothes and five dollars in money. If he has any valuables when he enters the prison they are held for safe keeping and returned to him at the expiration of his term; or if he has money, and so desires, one dollar per month is allowed him for tobacco. In a word, it is the aim to make prisoners feel that though they are under strict discipline, they are men still, and entitled to manly and considerate treatment. The result is that, as a rule, they do their work cheerfully and well. The amount of money expended at Fort Leavenworth for labor is virtually nothing. With the exception of the employment of a foreman to oversee work, the labor spent in the erection of the prison buildings, up to the present time, has been accomplished by the prisoners. The wall of the prison, which encloses seven acres of ground, is from fifteen to twenty-five feet high, five and a half feet thick at the base, and two and a half at the top. At present (July, 1881), 465 men are in confinement, some employed in the improvement of the fort grounds, others in the manufacture of boots and shoes, harness, brooms and barrack chairs. The needs of the entire United States army are met, in these lines, by the labors of the Fort Leavenworth military prison. For the year ending July 1, the prison turned out 30,000 pairs of boots, 35,000 pairs of shoes, and 30,000 brooms. For the coming year it is estimated that $250,000 worth of material will be manufactured into these several products. The Government appropriation for the maintenance of the prison is $80,000.

Although the buildings of the prison have been improved and enlarged almost continuously since 1875, the inmates are so crowded for working and dwelling room that a three-story brick building, 40x114 feet, is being constructed. It will be divided into dormitories and shop rooms.

If the trite expression, "beehive of industry,' could apply anywhere it is at the military prison. Although industry and good behavior mean a chance for future advancement in the army, the most strict precautions are taken to guard the prisoners. Sentinels with loaded muskets, are pacing the walls and guarding the gates day and night. Of the 465 inmates of the prison fully four-fifths are there for desertion and theft.

The present officers of the Military Prison are as follows: Brev. Col. A. P. Blunt, U. S. A., governor; J. P. Wright, U. S. A., surgeon; Capt. W. Badger, Sixth Infantry, executive officer; Rev. J. B. McCleery, U. S. A., chaplain; Lieut. D. M. Scott, First Infantry, provost marshal; Lieut. J. W. Pope, Fifth Infantry, adjutant; Lieut. W. P. Evans, Nineteenth Infantry, Q. M. and A. A. C. S.; Acting Assistant Surgeon, O. C. McNary.

Quartermaster's Department.—Lieut.-Col. Judson D. Bingham is deputy quartermaster general, and chief quartermaster of the Department of the Missouri. Maj. E. B. Grimes is depot quartermaster Fort Leavenworth. An idea of the magnitude of the transactions of the department, whose headquarters are here, may be obtained from the last report made to Q. M. Gen. M. C. Meigs. There then remained on hand nearly 2,500 army wagons, 13,000 wagon harnesses and 4,000 ambulance harnesses. Of the 1,438 cavalry and artillery horses purchased in the several military departments and depots at a total cost of $179,926.71, 494 were purchased in the department of the Missouri. During the year 100 mules were purchased at a total cost of $13,500, and 273 horses and 157 mules sold for $13,068.66.

There were manufactured at the prison during the year on account of clothing and equipage, 34,163 pairs boots, 25,944 pairs shoes, 1,656 barrack chairs, and 4,356 corn brooms. The materials purchased by the Quartermaster's Department cost $137,676.04; the civilian labor, paid by the Quartermaster's Department, cost $3,800; royalty on machines, paid by the Quartermaster's Department, $302.49; value of prison labor, $7,975.20. The average cost of prison labor in making a pair of shoes is 8 cents per pair, of boots 16 cents per pair, of chairs 19 cents each, and of brooms 4 cents each.

The average cost of boots to the department is $2.90 per pair; of shoes, $1.85 per pair; of chairs, $1.22 each, and of brooms, 16 cents each. The last prices of boots and shoes purchased by contract after advertisement were, boots $2.37½ cents per pair, and shoes $1.86 per pair. The materials from which the boots and shoes were made were purchased at the Philadelphia depot of the Quartermaster's Department, under contract, after advertisement, inspected at that depot by experienced officers and inspectors, and shipped, as fast as received, to the Leavenworth prison. The leather purchased under these contracts has been of unexceptional quality.

The Subsistence Department, one of the most important branches of the service, occupies the large stone building on the east side, and is in charge of Gen. George Bell, Chief Commissary. This office makes all purchases for the department, except the stores sent from the East by officers under the direction of the Commissary General. These have to be weighed and carefully examined by the department here. Requisitions from all the different posts in the Department of the Missouri for necessary stores also pass through the hands of the officers here, and orders for making shipments are then issued. The supply is generally limited to two or three months. The annual shipments of rations to the "boys in blue" in the Department of the Missouri amount to about 8,000,000 pounds per year. It is no wonder that the Subsistence Department is a busy one.

THE PRESS.

The Kansas Herald was the first paper printed in Leavenworth or in the Territory. It was owned and published by William H. Adams. When, during the early part of September, 1854, he found himself ready to inaugurate the enterprise, not a single building could be obtained upon the present site of Leavenworth to accommodate him. The ground was thickly covered with timber and underbrush, and not a single structure appeared to give shelter to the Herald. The proprietor, however, who was about to erect a building on the Levee, just east of Delaware street, was not discouraged, but placing his "cases" in the shade of the "old elm tree," near the corner of Cherokee and the Levee, he commenced putting his "airy and commodious" office in order, and here the first number of the Kansas Herald was issued September 15, 1854. In form the paper was a six column folio, "$2 in advance." In it Lewis N. Rees advertised his dry goods and groceries, corner of Broadway and the Levee; William J. Osborn, Bird & Miller, C. C. Andrews, A. W. Hazelrigg, A. J. Whitney, C. W. Babcock, B. H. Twombly, C. McCrea, as lawyers; John Harvey Day, M. D., as a physician, and Samuel M. Lyon, as a house joiner and carpenter. Mr. Osborn had his office in the "editorial room" of the Herald, that was to be, and was interested in the paper, but was financially a cipher. The next number of the Herald was issued on the 22nd, from the new building which Mr. Adams had erected, the first in Leavenworth. Charles Leib, M. D., the first physician, had located for practice in "the big tent" north of the big elm tree. But although the Herald building proudly raised its roof as the pioneer structure of Leavenworth, its office even when fairly occupied was not a paradise of neatness and order, as will appear from the following, which was written a few weeks after the issuing of its first number, by a gentleman from Baton Rouge, La., who visited the establishment:

"A visit to the printing office afforded a rich treat. On entering the first room on the right hand, three law 'shingles' were on the door; on one side was a rich bed, French blankets, sheets, table cloths, shirts, cloaks and rugs, all together; on the wall hung hams, maps, venison and rich engravings, onions, portraits and boots; on the floor were a side of bacon carved to the bone, corn and potatoes, stationery and books; on a nice dressing case stood a wooden tray half full of dough, while crockery occupied the professional desk. In a room on the left, the sanctum, the housewife, cook and editor lived in glorious unity, one person. He was seated on a stool, with paper before him on a piece of plank, writing a vigorous knockdown to an article in the Kickapoo Pioneer, a paper of a rival city. The cook-stove was at his left, and tin kettles all around; the corn cake was 'a-doing,' and instead of scratching his head for an idea, as editors often do, he turned the cake and went ahead."

About six weeks after the first publication of the Herald, Mr. Osborn retired from any connection with the paper, and Gen. Lucien J. Eastin became editor and part proprietor with Mr. Adams. He afterward obtained entire control. The Herald was Pro-slavery to the core, and Gen. Eastin associated with himself, in 1855, a fiery young Virginian named H. Rives Pollard, who afterward figured as the historian of the "Southern Confederacy." Early in 1859, William H. Gill, military store-keeper at Fort Leavenworth, purchased an interest in the paper, and became its editor, a daily edition being established May 17, of that year. Ward Burlingame was also a writer on the paper. The political policy of the Herald was greatly modified under Mr. Gill's management, and it supported the nomination of Mr. Douglas vigorously. During the following year the paper fell into the hands of William P. Fain who had been United States Marshal at a former period. Its financial status had become much impaired by this time, and the Herald was not prosperous under its new management. In the fall of 1860, Messrs. R. C. Satterlee, B. R. Wilson (now of the Oskaloosa Sickle), and C. W. Helm, assumed the management of the paper, Mr. Helm being the editor. June 13th of the next year, Mr. Satterlee was shot and killed by Col. Anthony. The paper lingered a few days longer and expired, the last number being dated June 27, 1861.

The Territorial Register was started in March, 1855, by Sevier & Delahay; the latter was afterward appointed United States District Judge by President Lincoln. Delahay was the editor, and the Register was strongly Free-state, but with conservative tendencies. On the night of December 22, 1855, it was destroyed by a quasi military organization—in fact, a mob—called the "Kickapoo Rangers." The material of the office was thrown into the Missouri River.

The Leavenworth Journal, a Pro-slavery paper, but rather conservative in its views, was started in the spring of 1856. Col. S. S. Goode was the editor and proprietor, and was succeeded by "Jack" Henderson. In the spring of 1858, Hutchison & Campbell leased the establishment of John A. Halderman, to whom it had descended in satisfaction of indebtedness incurred. They published a daily edition for nearly a year, with indifferent success, when the building in which it was published fell, "pieing" the type, and destroying most of the other materials. A few numbers were subsequently issued at the Times office, when the Journal finally suspended.

Gen. W. George McLane, an enthusiastic admirer of Marc Parrott, "the silver-tongued orator of Kansas," during the latter part of 1854, prepared an article for Gen. Eastin's Herald, eulogistic of Mr. Parrott and urging his selection as a delegate to Congress. The editor of the Herald refused to publish it, which so nettled Gen. McLane that he determined to have a paper of his own, and shortly after sent forth Young America.

On September 1, 1857, it was succeeded by the Daily Ledger, the first regular daily published west of St. Louis. It suspended in July, 1859. Gen. McLane died in Leadville, in 1880.

The Evening Register, a Republican daily, was started by Delahay & Dugger, in August, 1859. It was afterward issued by Dugger alone. Its existence was precarious, and after several temporary suspensions, it died in 1860.

Leavenworth Times. The Times of to-day is the result of the consolidation of three newspapers with the original journal, the first number of which was issued March 7, 1857, from the third story of a stone building on Delaware street. It was originally controlled by a joint stock company, and was edited by Robert Crosier, afterward Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court, and now Judge of the First District. After six months, the establishment passed into the hands of Col. J. C. Vaughan and his son, Champion. The daily first made its appearance February 15, 1858. Subsequently, J. Kemp Bartlett became a partner with Col. Vaughan. Mr. Bartlett finally became sole proprietor, and conducted the paper three years. In October, 1863, Thomas Carney became the proprietor. In the meantime—January 28, 1861—D. R. Anthony had established the Leavenworth Conservative, with D. W. Wilder as editor. Besides these gentlemen, Messrs. Matthew Weightman, George F. Prescott, George C. Hume and Henry Buckingham were interested in the paper. The material for the paper was bought by Mr. Anthony, who, during the following autumn, entered the United States service, sold out his interest to Mr. Wilder, and became known henceforth as Col. Anthony. Previous to September, 1868, the Conservative, an uncompromising, radical sheet, was managed by Wilder & Weightman, Insley (M. H.) & Wright (John W.) and Wilder & Wright. The Times, a staunch Free-state and Republican paper from its foundation, was absorbed by the Conservative during that month, the firm having become Wilder & Sleeper (H. S.) in August. The new paper took the name Times and Conservative, but soon dropped the latter appellation, its proprietors doubtless considering it a misnomer. The Evening Bulletin (Republican) had been established since September 18, 1862, but succumbed to the absorbing genius of the Times in November, 1871. Col. Anthony had purchased and published the Bulletin from September, 1864, until August 1865. As stated, six years later he obtained possession of it again, and consolidated it with the Times. The Leavenworth Commercial, a Democratic paper, was established October 3, 1866, and purchased by Col. Anthony, January 1, 1876. He ran it as an evening edition, for a few months, then merged it regularly with the Times.

The Times is a finely printed eight-column folio sheet, staunchly Republican in politics. It is a political power in the State, and yet is a newspaper in the true sense of the word. Its news, whether local, county, State, or national, is always fresh, and presented in a pithy, readable shape; its advertising list is a conclusive proof of its financial prosperity. Attached to the newspaper is a large and well-managed job-office. For enterprise and a solid financial basis, the Times has no superior in the State.

The Times building, a fine brick structure, 48x110 feet, three stories and basement, is one of the best equipped printing houses west of St. Louis. On the first floor is the counting room, private office and library of Col. Anthony, stock room and a nicely arranged reading room. On the second floor are the editorial and composing rooms. The building is two stories on Main street, three stories and basement on the Levee. The basement proper is occupied as an engine room. On the next floor are the book and job office, printing presses, folding machine, etc., etc.

The Leavenworth Standard, daily and weekly, was established in January, 1870, at the city of Lawrence, by a stock company, of which Wilson Shannon was president. In 1873, the establishment passed into the hands of D. T. Mitchell. F. J. Skiff became proprietor in 1875, and Major E. G. Ross, editor. The next year Mr. Ross became sole proprietor, and in October, 1880, associated with himself his two sons—Arthur and Pitt. The Standard was then removed to Leavenworth, and in February a stock company was formed consisting of the following Board of Directors: T. A. Hurd, president; J. W. Crancer, treasurer; E. G. Ross, editor; J. F. Richards, B. C. Clark, S. F. Neely; R. A. Ketner, secretary and business manager. The Standard is an eight-column folio sheet, and an uncompromising Democratic journal. Its editor, Major E. G. Ross, is one of the veteran journalists of the West. He was born December 7, 1826, at Ashland, Ohio. As a bare-headed, bare-footed boy, he commenced to learn the printer's trade in Huron, Ohio. In 1856, Mr. Ross came to Topeka, and in connection with W. W. Ross published the Kansas Tribune for two years. In 1856, they established the State Record, which was sold in 1862, when E. G. Ross enlisted in the army. Being discharged in 1865, Major Ross was appointed United States Senator, and at the end of his term in 1871, started Ross' Paper, at Coffeyville. In 1873, he became editor of the Spirit of Kansas, and in 1875 of the Standard. The Standard is now edited by H. C. Burnett, Chas. Tillotson, manager. Major E. G. Ross is editing a paper in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

The Press, a daily evening Republican paper, was established April 2, 1877. H. B. Horn, editor; Fred. J. Wendell, business manager. In July, 1878, Mr. Wendell withdrew, and Mr. Horn became the proprietor. Charles H. Miller purchased the paper in October, 1878, but sold the same year to Jos. Clark and H. M. Aller. The latter became sole owner in the spring of 1882; Charles Tillotson business manager. The daily is 24x36 inches in size, the weekly 28x44. Politics, stalwart Republican.

The Kansas Freie Presse was established in 1868, by Major John Haeberlein, this journal being a continuation, virtually of the Leavenworth Zeitung and the Kansas Zeitung, the former being founded by Fritz Beaunhold, in 1858. The Presse was conducted by Major Haeberlein and his sons (Haeberlein Brothers) until 1881, when an association was formed. Chris. Schubert became, and is now, the business manager of the paper, and Lorenz Rohr, one of the ablest German journalists of the West, its editor. The Presse is recognized as one of the most influential and outspoken papers in the West, and stands in the front rank of the German newspapers of the country. The daily issue is a seven-column folio, and the weekly edition an eight-column. Connected with the paper is a complete German and English job office.

The Workingman's Friend. This is the largest Greenback-labor newspaper in Kansas, and was established by James W. Remington in 1877. It was endorsed, at the time, by an organization of workingmen, embracing some 500, in the city of Leavenworth. The paper has been enlarged and improved until it is now one of the most successful weeklies in the State. During the time that the Workingman's Friend has been in existence it has absorbed six other weeklies, opponents of the cause which it champions, and is therefore a first-class advertising medium. Although Mr. Remington is yet a young man, only thirty-three years of age, he is an old citizen of Kansas, having first visited Leavenworth when there were but eight or ten upright houses on its site. This was in 1854.

CHARITABLE AND REFORMATORY INSTITUTIONS.

State Penitentiary.—On a beautiful fifty-acre tract of land, about five miles south of the city, is the State penitentiary. It is upon a high and commanding site, impressing the visitor as he approaches its massive walls, as both an imposing and graceful structure. Entering the beautifully improved prison yard through a high doorway he enters the central building, which occupies a position between the cell houses, and contains offices, living rooms and dormitories. It is four stories high, 60x83 feet, and like the two cell houses adjoining it, is built of a very fine quality of sandstone. The cell houses are each 250x50 feet, containing each 344 cells, 7x4x7 feet. All other buildings are of brick.

The first work done in erecting the prison was in 1864, and consisted only of the foundation walls of the north wing. Work was again resumed permanently in the late fall of 1866 and continued until the present. At the close of the fiscal year building and furnishings will be all completed, at a cost of $568,635.81. All other expenditures, $1,276,696.53, making a total expenditure from its commencement to the close of this fiscal year (June 30, 1882), of $1,845,332.34. The prison was first occupied July 11, 1868. The prison yard, containing the shops and other buildings, contains ten acres, and is surrounded by a wall twenty feet high and seven and a half feet thick at base.

Prisoners have heretofore been employed upon the work of erecting prison buildings, putting in cells, etc. Their labor in this direction is at an end. But they are employed besides in the manufacture of farm and spring wagons and implements, in the making of buggies and carriages, men's boots and shoes, and women's shoes, in the manufacture of marble mantels and monuments, work required in the care and maintenance of the prison inmates, and (most important of all), in the mining of coal. The work of sinking the coal shaft commenced November 26, 1879, and the mineral was reached January 18, 1881. The total cost up to July 1, 1882, including the sinking of shaft and operating expenses was $43,671, and the value of the product $41,951. Up to June 30, 1882, there have been mined 584,304 bushels of coal. The State penitentiary is now self sustaining, which is the first time that this statement could have been truthfully made in its history, and this state of affairs has been brought about by the very successful working of the coal mines under Major Hopkins' management. The cash earnings for the fiscal year, 1882, were $89,543.94; value of coal furnished State institutions at seven cents per bushel, $12,691.31; value of improvements, $18,467.25. Total, $120,702.50. The aggregate expenditures for all purposes were, $120,045.99, leaving a balance for 1882 of $656.51. The item given above—"value of improvements, $18,467.25"—does not include any work done for the State, except on improvement and repairs, and therefore excludes from the sum total of receipts, the daily earnings of 100 men. The total number of persons who have been convicted and served sentences in the prison from January 1, 1867, to June 1, 1882, is 3,008. The number discharged, etc., during that period, 2,323, leaving in confinement June 1, 1882, 685. The total number of deaths in the prison from all causes during the period of fifteen and one-half years has been fifty-seven, or a little less than one and nine-tenths per cent. The system observed in the penitentiary requires that each prisoner must don the regulation striped clothing and then be shaved by the State barber. He then is instructed as to the rules and regulations of the place, and his cell is furnished with necessary articles of furniture, to which the prisoner may add others when he has earned the money by actual labor. Cleanliness is enforced, and there is no communication allowed between prisoners. The penitentiary has a fine library, and prisoners may purchase books which are approved by the authorities. Those capable of learning a trade are assisted in that direction. During the year the working hours average nine and a half daily, and during the six winter months from sunrise to sunset. For violations of the prison discipline prisoners are punished by deprivation of the privileges of the library, writing and receiving letters to and from friends, work on bread and water, close confinement in their cells on bread and water once a day, and, in extreme cases only, the blind cell on bread and water is resorted to. The State penitentiary is under the immediate supervision of a warden, whose accounts are examined every month. Monthly settlements are made with the State. The three State prison directors (July, 1882), are: H. E. Richter, Council Grove, Morris County; W. W. Guthrie, Atchison; J. S. Waters, Oswego, Labette County. Major Henry Hopkins, one of the most skilled reformatory officers in the country, has been warden of the State penitentiary since 1870. A. McGahey is chief clerk; Rev. A. B. Campbell, chaplain; W. B. Carpenter, physician. Since the institution of the State penitentiary the wardens and deputy wardens in office have been as follows: Wardens, Geo. H. Keller, March 12, 1867, to March, 1868; J. L. Philbrick, 1868-70; Henry Hopkins, 1870-1882. Deputy wardens, Henry Hopkins, March 12, 1867, to March, 1870; Gideon Armstrong, 1870-71; John Johnson, 1871-73; C. J. Hanks, 1873-77; S. K. Cross, 1877-81; John Johnston, May, 1881-82.

The Kansas Orphan Asylum.—In the year 1866 the Protestant Orphan Asylum and Home for Friendless Children was organized as a private charitable institution for the city and county of Leavenworth. It was located on a beautiful plat of ground containing five acres, on South Broadway, a little over a mile from the heart of the city. The original cost of the land, including the buildings thereon, amounted to $4,000. This outlay, as well as its support since, has been met and fully provided for by contributions from the business men of the city, and the proceeds of charitable entertainments and donations given for its benefit by the citizens of Leavenworth. For one year, the asylum had only the right to receive and dispose of children under the law relating to apprentices; during this time many applications were received from parties desirous of taking children by adoption. To give the Trustees this power, further legislation was necessary. On February 2, 1867, in answer to an application, this privilege was granted. The frequent and pressing applications for the admission of children from different parts of the State (there being no other Protestant Institution of the kind in the State) impressed upon the Board of Trustees the necessity of extending their work and thereby further promoting the usefulness of the institution; with that end in view an application was made to the Legislature in 1871 for an appropriation for the purpose of erecting buildings adequate to the growing wants of the State. Upon this application $2,500 was received; not deeming this sum sufficient, it was prudently placed on interest until it could be increased to an amount adequate to carry out the desired purpose. The necessity of a new and larger building becoming imperative, the Board of Trustees were induced to again make application to the Legislature in 1874, and $7,000 was received from this application. This, with the $2,500 previously contributed by the State, was invested in a commodious and substantial building, with a present capacity of accommodating forty children.

In pursuance of the agreement under which the asylum accepted the grant of 1874, the name of the instution was changed to the Kansas Orphan Asylum, and the management bound themselves to receive children from all counties in the State upon the same terms as governed them as a local organization. Accordingly in January, 1877, an amendment to the constitution was adopted giving the Board of Trustees power to organize auxiliary societies throughout the State. Since that time some sixty societies have been formed throughout the State.

In 1879 the asylum received $5,000 from the State, which was also applied to the improvement of the building and grounds, making a total of about $16,000 which has been so expended. The property is located on Pennsylvania avenue, corner of Broadway, the land being donated by the citizens of Leavenworth. The building is a fine three-story brick edifice, with mansard roof and tower, and presents a substantial and imposing appearance. Until the winter of 1881 and '82 the running expenses of the asylum were cheerfully met by generous patrons of the institution. At that time, however, the Legislature passed a bill granting for that purpose $200 per month for two years. The asylum is now (July, 1882,) free of debt and sheltering thirty-eight orphans, half orphans, destitute and dependent children—an increase of ten over the previous year.

Say the Board of Trustees in their annual report for the year 1882: "At our last anniversary there were 28 children remaining in the asylum; 64 have been received, making a total of 92 cared for during the year, 48 boys and 44 girls; placed in homes, 20; by adoption, 8; agreement, 12; returned to friends, 31; died, 1; left without permission, 1; sent to Reform School, 1; remaining in the asylum, 38." It may be remarked here that the Board of Trustees and other officers of the asylum have never received compensation for their services. The institution is one for which the best people of Leavenworth have labored long and faithfully, and the encouraging result of their labors is now returning to them.

Present officers: Rev. J. B. McCleery, president; Mrs. Thomas Carney, vice-president; John Wilson, treasurer; Mrs. Chas. Currier, recording secretary; Mrs. G. W. Nelles, corresponding secretary. Mrs. J. Hodgkinson is the matron in charge.

The Orphans' Friend, a paper published in connection with the asylum, has entered its fourth volume, and is doing much to advance the good work. It already has a circulation of 3,000 copies.

Home for the Friendless.—This institution was organized in 1868. In 1870 a charter was secured, also an appropriation of $10,000 from the Legislature for a building, and $2,000 from the city of Leavenworth for a site. Later, after the care of children became a specialty, the citizens contributed the funds for the erection of the building known as the "Cottage," and have always given largely for the support of the work. The object of the institution is three-fold. First—To afford temporary shelter for sick and destitute women and children. Second—To aid women in securing situations where they can become self-supporting and respectable members of society, and to place the children in Christian homes. Third—To bring to bear upon all inmates the best influences at command, that they may go forth better instructed and fortified for the work of life. While this is not regularly a home for the aged, quite a number of old ladies have been cared for with tender solicitude. In 1879 such success attended the labors of the home management that a $6,000 appropriation was obtained from the Legislature and applied towards the erection of an additional building. Up to 1880 no money had been received from the State to support a constantly increasing family, which had numbered in the aggregate about 2,000 individuals. During the winter of 1880-81 an appropriation was obtained of $200 per month, to run two years and be applied to current expenses. As it at present stands, the building is a tastefully constructed edifice, standing upon nicely improved grounds on Marshall street. It is of brick, stone trimmings, three stories, basement and tower, with a front of sixty-three feet. The cottage, noticed above, is used for the care of small children. Although but $16,000 has been expended on the building, it was at a time when labor and material were low, and $25,000 is nearer the value of the property to-day. The management of the home is in the hands and hearts of energetic, benevolent ladies, selected from all the Protestant churches of the city, its officers for 1882 being as follows: Mrs. C. H. Cushing, president; Mrs. E. Mayo and Mrs. C. B. Brace, vice-presidents; Mrs. J. L. Hunting, treasurer; Mrs. Rosa Atwood, recording secretary; Mrs. A. Lake, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary E. Dunkle, matron; Eliza K. Morgan, M.D., physician. At present (July, 1882) the inmates number about seventy. During the year 1881-82 there were received into the home 244 persons, of whom four were aged women. The figures speak for themselves. Like actions, of which they are the indices, they speak louder than mere words of praise. To aid in this charitable work the Home Record, a neat little four column folio sheet, was established in 1872. It has been conducted from the first by Mrs. C. H. Cushing, and to her energy and business tact is largely due the fact that the paper has already reached a circulation of 5,800 copies. The press has also been brought into play in another particular to carry on the good work. The "Kansas Home Cook Book" published by the Board of Managers in 1874, has not only brought a handsome income to the institution, but has obtained a well deserved reputation for "truth and veracity" among the actual and the would-be housekeepers of the State.

CHURCHES.

Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception.—The building, a magnificent brick structure, corner of Fifth and Kiowa streets, is one of the largest church edifices west of St. Louis, and looms up with its two towers as a prominent landmark of the city. It was erected in 1863 at a cost of $150,000. Adjoining it is the palace of the Bishop, erected during the same year. The present value of the property is $200,000. The first mass in Leavenworth was said in 1854 by Bishop Meige, at the house of a Mrs. Quinn, who is still an honored member of the church. The diocese had been established in 1851, and in March of that year the Bishop was consecrated for missionary labors among the Indians. In 1855 the old cathedral was built where Father McCune's new parochial school now stands. In 1857 a priest's house was built. Father Heimann was the first pastor at the cathedral, and officiated until 1864, being assisted by Rev. James DeFouri and the Jesuit Fathers. Then came the following clergy, each one of whom held the pastorate from one to three years: Rev. Paul Ponsiglioni, S. J.; Rev. Father Coghlan, S. J.; Rev. Father Corbett, S. J.; Rev. Father Shultz, S. J.; Rev. Father Panken, S. J.; Rev. Ambrose Butler, Rev. William Fitzgerald; Rev. James DeFouri, V. G.; Rev. James O'Reilly, Rev. John B. McCune, and at present, Very Rev. John Cunningham; Rt. Rev. John B. Meige remained bishop of the diocese from 1853 to 1874. Rt. Rev. Louis M. Fink was appointed Coadjutor Bishop in 1871, and succeeded Bishop Meige in 1874. The membership of the Cathedral congregation is placed at 4,000 souls. Strong missions have been established throughout the county, at Fort Leavenworth, Rev. Thomas Downey, pastor; Hoge P. O., Rev. Michael Brown, pastor; Epiphany Church (colored), Rev. M. Huhn, pastor; Kickapoo, Rev. Louis Guenther, pastor, and at Easton, Rev. B. Vanderlage, pastor. St. John's Hospital, corner of Kiowa and Seventh streets, and the St. Vincent Orphan Asylum, on Kickapoo street, between Fifth and Sixth, are both conducted by the Sisters of Charity. The St. John's Hospital building, as originally constructed, was a very modest structure. But it was enlarged and improved about two years ago, until it is now quite imposing and entirely comfortable. At present (July, 1882,) it has forty inmates, who are carefully watched and nursed by eight Sisters of Charity. One year after the hospital was established the charitable field of the diocese was further enlarged by the founding of the St. Vincent Orphan Asylum. The six Sisters of Charity who conduct this institution make a home for sixty orphans.

In November, 1858, a day and boarding school for girls was opened on the north side of Kickapoo St., and a boys' school in connection with the cathedral. The former continued for ten years in charge of the Sisters of Charity, when the boarding school was discontinued and the erection of Mount St. Mary's Academy, Delaware Township, commenced. It was occupied in 1870, the day school for girls still continuing. The school for boys continued to be occupied until the structure now building near the cathedral was commenced.

St. Joseph's (German Catholic) Church was established in 1857. Its building was first occupied on the first Sunday of July, 1859. The corner stone of the present magnificent structure, corner of Broadway and Miami, was laid in 1868, and the church was consecrated June 17, 1871. Its cost was $45,000. The property is now one of the most valuable pieces of improved real estate in the city. The priest's house is a solidly constructed brick structure, adjoining the church to the east. The two school buildings built of wood, are situated to the west. The parochial school was first opened in 1860, Father Guenther, the present priest in charge of St. Joseph's Church, being the teacher. The boys' school is now in charge of Ignatius Inkman and two Sisters of Charity. The building occupied by the boys is the structure originally erected for the church. The daily attendance of both boys and girls is about 160. The membership of the church is 1,000 souls. This valuable church property was deeded by the Bishop to the order of Carmelite Fathers, and is, legally speaking, held by them in trust for the Catholic Church. Father Casimir, O. S. B., remained in charge of the church from 1857 to 1860; Father Fish from 1860 to 1863, having Father Aloys Meyer as his assistant; Father A. Kuhls from 1863 to 1864. The Carmelite Fathers then commenced their administration, so to speak, Father Cyril Kroll being the priest in charge from 1864 to 1866; Father Albert Heiman from 1866 to 1871, and Father L. Guenther from the latter year to the present time.

First Methodist Episcopal Church.—The first sermon delivered in Leavenworth County, was preached by Rev. W. G. Caples, presiding elder of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It was upon the occasion of a sort of out-door meeting held near where the Leavenworth company's coal shaft is now located, and was delivered October 8, 1854. No regular organization was effected until 1857. Occasional services were held, however, until 1856. Rev. W. Butt, of Indiana, preached during a portion of that year, but was fairly driven out of town by the Pro-slavery element. He was so fearful of his life that he hid a long time in a hazel brush before he dared to leave. All the Methodists were scattered abroad, at this time. It was not until May, 1857, that George H. Weaver, then one of the staunchest members of the society, and now deceased, obtained a charter from the Legislature providing for a regular church organization. Rev. William Butt was presiding elder of the district and Rev. M. M. Harm was called to the pastorate. The first quarterly meeting was held in the little church on Miami street, in May, 1857, and the following Trustees elected: George H. Weaver, Elijah Hughes, Jacob Sandes, Jerome B. Odell, Rufus Newland, J. C. Applegate, Joseph Evans. The building committee chosen consisted of Elijah Hughes, George H. Weaver, Jacob Sandes; Board of Stewards, J. B. Odell, Elijah Hughes, Jacob Sandes, George H. Weaver, Morris Roberts and Rufus Newland. The Sunday school was organized on May 31, 1857, and George H. Weaver was elected superintendent, in which position he continued for seven years. Rev. James Shaw was presiding elder of the district in 1858, and Rev. H. D. Fisher, pastor of the church. Mr. Fisher continued in charge until 1861. It was chiefly through his energy and perseverance that the present church edifice on Fifth street was erected. The basement was occupied in December, 1859, the audience room being completed in 1861. The church was dedicated during the succeeding year. Rev. G. W. Paddock, who succeeded Rev. H. D. Fisher in 1861, remained pastor until 1863. In January of that year he was succeeded by Rev. D. P. Mitchell, who continued until March, 1866, when Rev. A. B. Leonard assumed the pastorate. Rev. W. K. Marshall assumed charge of the church in the spring of 1868, and gave place in turn to Rev. John J. Thompson two years thereafter. In March, 1873, Rev. T. F. Houts succeeded Mr. Thompson, continuing with the church until the fall of 1875, when Rev. Thomas H. Phillips became pastor. Rev. William Smith was called to the charge in March of the next year, Rev. J. R. Madison in March, 1879, and Rev. A. E. Higgens during March 1881. The church building, corner of Fifth and Choctaw streets, was erected in 1860, during the pastorate of Rev. H. D. Fisher. This property is valued at $12,000, which with the parsonage ($8,000) would make the total value of the church property $20,000. The present membership of the church is 260, of the Sunday school about 200. Officers of the church: Stewards, William Dill, H. C. Fields, Robert McGinity, George A. King, George H. Weaver, Alfred Lake, John Butt, Daniel Easton, J. S. Harker; Trustees, William Fairchild, William Dill, I. N. Mitchell, J. B. Insley, Charles Franke, C. B. Pierce and James McGee.

The First Presbyterian Church was organized January 1, 1856, and was the first white Presbyterian organization in the State. Except the Southern Methodist Church, it was the first religious organization in the city. Rev. C. D. Martin, a home missionary sent out from Philadelphia, presided at the birth, and the following were the first members: George I. Park, Sarah Park, John I. Moore, Jane Moore, R. R. Kirkpatrick, Elizabeth A. Kirkpatrick, Margaret Doyle, John D. Ross and Auley McAuley.

Rev. A. W. Pitzer, of Danville Seminary, was the first elected pastor, the call being voted May 19, 1857. He accepted and began work at once.

The first church edifice was begun on Miami street, between Sixth and Seventh, in June, 1857, and in July was dedicated to the service of God, by the Rev. J. G. Fackler, of Liberty, Mo.

The first Sabbath-school was organized August 23, 1857, with six teachers and eighteen scholars.

Rev. Mr. Pitzer was ordained to the Gospel ministry, in January, 1858, and remained pastor of the church until 1861. He then resigned, to cast his fortunes with the South. From that time until 1863, the church was without any regular pastor, and in a very feeble condition. But on January 1, 1863, Rev. William A. Starrett became stated supply, and so remained for six months. He then left the little church as a flock without a shepherd. But on August 6, 1863, the Rev. George S. Woodward, of Parkville, Mo., was unanimously chosen pastor. He accepted and entered at once upon his labors. Under the guidance of this pastor, the church, by the blessing of God, began a course of great spiritual and temporal prosperity. Large numbers were added to its membership. It freed itself from debt and took its place as one of the leading churches of the city.

February 4, 1867, a proposition from the Westminster Presbyterian Church, of Leavenworth, to unite, was accepted, and on March 5, 1867, the union was consummated.

December 18, 1867, the Rev. George S. Woodward was compelled by failing health to resign his pastorate. It was very reluctantly accepted. December 30, 1867, the union of the two churches was broken, and the Presbytery of Topeka again placed them as separate organizations.

The original First Presbyterian Church resumed its former status in Odd Fellows' Hall, and on February 23, 1868, extended a call to the Rev. William L. Green, of Chenoa, Ill., to become its pastor. The call was accepted, and Mr. Green was installed pastor, May 24, 1868. He served the church with great acceptance until October 21, 1869, when feeble health compelled his resignation.

January 23, 1870, Rev. William R. Brown, of Georgetown, Ky., became pastor, and so continued until January 27, 1873, when his health also forced a resignation, which was very reluctantly accepted.

During Mr. Brown's pastorate, the present beautiful and commodious edifice on Delaware street was built, and dedicated October 22, 1871. Its cost, including ground, was in the neighborhood of $20,000. After Mr. Brown's resignation, the Rev. William Alford, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, supplied the pulpit for a time. The present pastor, Rev. W. N. Page, D. D., was unanimously called, June 29, 1873, and began his labors November 1. He was installed by the Presbytery of Topeka, December 7, 1873. In 1879, a large and beautiful chapel was built, holding 500 people. It is also arranged to accommodate the Sabbath-school, the largest in the State, consisting of 450 members, with Col. J. L. Abernathy, Superintendent. The present membership of the Church numbers about 350, also forming the largest Presbyterian church in the State. Its officers, July 1, 1882, were as follows: Pastor, William N. Page, D.D.; Elders, George M. Burrell, Edward P. Wilson, James L. Abernathy, William Merrell, D. C. Hawthorne, Alexander Kirk; Deacons, Edwin Varney, John Wilson, Robert Garrett, Lewis Mayo, James C. Lysle, Ed. L. Doughty.

Protestant Episcopal Church.—The first recognized missionary of this church in the Territory of Kansas was the Rev. Hiram Stone, who, in November, 1856, commenced services here, and on the 10th of December of that year organized St. Paul's Church. Dr. Bodine and Mr. Earle were wardens; H. Miles Moore, Dr. Dyer and Frank Palmer, vestrymen. This was the first organized parish in the Territory. Prior to that time, services had occasionally been held by rectors from Weston, Missouri, Revs. John McNary, Holmes, Irish and others. It was at first designed to build a church on the north side of the city, and the foundations were prepared on the northwest corner of Seventh and Ottawa streets. But the plan was changed and a small wooden church was erected on the south side of the city, on a lot east of the southeast corner of Fifth and Chestnut streets, which was consecrated by Bishop Kemper on the 7th of November, 1858. This was the first church consecrated in the Territory and diocese of Kansas. The location proved to be unfortunate for the growth of the parish, and in October, 1859, Mr. Stone resigned the rectorship and accepted the chaplaincy at Fort Leavenworth. From that time the rectorship remained unsupplied, and during all this period the services of the church were continued with more or less of regularity through the generous labors of Mr. Stone. The present parish of St. Paul was re-organized on the 6th of March, A. D., 1863, by the adoption of a constitution and the election of wardens and vestrymen. The Rev. John H. Egar, B. D., was called to the rectorship and accepted. Services were held for a time in the Congregational house of worship. Steps were soon taken to erect a building. Three lots on the northeast corner of Seventh and Seneca streets were purchased of A. J. Sterrett, of McKean, Erie County, Pa., for $600, and the plans for a church to seat 600 people were obtained of Messrs. R. Upjohn & Son, of New York. The building was commenced in June, 1863. At first only the chancel, first stage of the tower, vestry and organ room, and forty feet in length of the nave, were built. On Sunday, July 10, 1864, the part of the church thus erected was occupied for public worship for the first time. The sermon was preached by the Rev. A. D. Cole, D. D., President of Nashotah Theological Seminary, Wisconsin. Besides the rector there were present the Rev. Hiram Stone, of Fort Leavenworth and Rev. N. O. Preston, of Topeka. The first confirmation was administered in the parish by the Right Reverend Bishop Lee, of Iowa, in the Congregational house of worship on Sunday, April 19, 1863. The first confirmation in the new church was held by Bishop Lee on Sunday, September 11, 1864. The first Episcopal act performed by Bishop Vail, the first bishop of the diocese of Kansas, within the diocese was a confirmation in the church of St. Paul, on Sunday, January 10, 1865. The parish was admitted into union with the convention of the diocese in 1864, and in 1865 the convention was held in this church, September 13th and 14th. This was the first convention presided over by a Bishop of the diocese of Kansas. On Friday, January 5, 1866, a font was placed in the church, the offering of Mrs. Susan Kerr a memorial of two children deceased.

The number of communicants in the parish at its organization was 19. The Rev. John H. Egar resigned the rectorship in July, 1868, and accepted a call to St. Peter's Church, Pittsburg, Pa. The Rev. J. Mills Kendrick, of Fort Scott, was elected to the rectorship October 1, 1868. During his rectorship the nave of the church was extended and completed. St. John's chapel on the south side of the city was erected for educational as well as religious purposes. Mr. Kendrick resigned the rectorship July 1, 1874. The Rev. John Woart, United States Chaplain at Fort Leavenworth, officiated in the parish church until March, 1876, when the vestry called the Rev. Chas. Daniel, deacon, of the diocese of Pennsylvania, to the rectorship. Mr. Daniel resigned his charge October 1, 1877. On January 1, 1878, the Rev. Thomas W. Barry, B. D., of the diocese of Central New York, was called to the rectorship and began his labors at once. The outlook at first was discouraging, but Mr. Barry had come to stay. His first duty was to induce the scattered and disheartened members of the parish to come together again for worship. As chairman of the vestry he has always given close attention to the temporalities of the church. The quartette choir was dismissed and a volunteer choir substituted. The sexton was discharged and the duties of that office have since been performed by young gentlemen of the parish gratuitously. By the practice of such self-denial and wisely ordered economy, wonders in the way of church progress have been accomplished during the past five years. The mortgage of $2,000 which had been drawing ten per cent. interest for many years was paid in December, 1880. On January 26, 1881, the beautiful church of St. Paul was consecrated by the Bishop of the diocese amid the rejoicings and congratulations of hundreds of people. The Very Rev. Dean Hart, of St. John's Cathedral, Denver, Col., preached the sermon. In April, 1881, the vestry purchased five lots on the northwest corner of Seventh and Seneca streets, just opposite the church, for the location of a rectory. Ground was broken in May, and the work pushed rapidly forward under the personal supervision of the rector. On November 9, 1881, the Bishop of the diocese visited the parish again to perform the pleasant duty of opening the new rectory. The building is a large, handsome three-story brick of the Queen Anne style, and cost, including the lots, $6,000. At the last Diocesan Convention the rector's parochial report was said to be the best ever handed in since the formation of the diocese. The Episcopalians have now, (with one exception, the Roman Cathedral; the handsomest and most valuable church property in the city of Leavenworth. The church is the best specimen of Gothic architecture in the diocese. Built of dressed stone and walnut, with beautiful stained glass windows, carpeted, cushioned and heated by furnaces; with its large pipe-organ, excellent choir of twenty voices and sublime liturgy, it is indeed a temple of the true God. The Rev. T. W. Barry is still the rector.

United Presbyterian Church.—In the summer of 1857, the General Synod of the Associated Reform Church sent Rev. B. L. Baldridge to this western country, as a sort of prospector, or pioneer, in the work. He arrived at Leavenworth, July 15, 1857, and held religious services before the meeting at the house of J. M. C. Foster, September 4, 1857. At this time it was resolved to organize a church, and an organization was effected by Rev. Mr. Baldridge, Alex. McGahey and wife, Samuel W. Greer and wife, John Hamill and wife, Robert B. Craig and wife, John Hosack and wife, James L. McDowell, Mrs. Alice Phillippe and Miss Rebecca Phillippe, Dr. Thomas Hamill, Sampson McGahey, Turner McGahey, George R. Neely, and John Parks. The Congregational society was formed during the same year as the United Presbyterian, and, as it now exists, that organization is the result of a union of the Associate and the Associate Reform churches. Mr. Baldridge continued in charge of the church until the spring of 1866. Rev. W. P. McNary, who had been stated supply for a number of months, was regularly ordained in December of that year. For nearly three years, until December 4, 1869, Mr. McNary continued to act as pastor, when he resigned. Then, for over a year, the pulpit was supplied temporarily. In September, 1871, Rev. F. M. Spencer assumed the pastorate, and continued to guide and guard the interests of the church until the last Sunday in September, 1879. Rev. H. C. Marshall was then called to the charge, and regularly ordained February 15, 1880. He is the present incumbent, and the church membership is about seventy. The church building, corner of Arch and Fifth streets, was purchased from the Second Congregational society, August 6, 1873, for $5,500.

The First Congregational Church was organized March 14, 1858, when twenty-seven persons adopted its constitution and covenant. In 1860, its first and present house of worship, corner of Delaware and Fifth streets, was erected. It was enlarged and greatly beautified in 1868. Since then it has been improved and modernized, until now the audience room is one of the most attractive and home-like places of worship in the city. The Congregational Church, like the city, has had its history, its days of prosperity and adversity. Its first pastor was Rev. R. D. Parker, now of Manhattan, who was followed by Rev. J. D. Liggett. After ten years of faithful pastorate work, Mr. Liggett was succeeded by Rev. William Kincaid. He was followed by several others, of short terms of service. The present incumbent is Rev. W. H. Thomas, formerly of Kalamazoo, Mich. The church is prosperous, and connected with it are some of the foremost citizens of the place.

The Evangelical German Lutheran Church was organized in 1861, by G. Elbert, Peter Shott, George Lueders, Henry Shott, Henry Steinker, F. Scheer, —— Becker, and John Ulrich. Rev. Michael Meier assumed charge of the church, and continued in that relationship for twenty-one years. In 1882, the present incumbent, Rev. C. Hoffner, became Pastor. In 1864, the society erected a small edifice on Delaware street, but did not complete the building now occupied until 1881. It is of brick, cost $3,500, and is situated on Seventh street, corner of Miami. A comfortable parsonage is attached, the total value of the church property being $7,000. The membership of the church is sixty. Its parochial school, which has been in existence since 1864, has a membership of between sixty and seventy, and is in a flourishing condition.

The Baptist Church of Leavenworth.—In the fall of 1858 the Tabernacle Baptist Church was organized in Leavenworth, under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Kermott. The First Baptist Church was formed in 1860, by Rev. Mr. Barrett. These two organizations joined their forces, in 1864, to form The Baptist Church of Leavenworth. Among its first members, some of them being the original members of the Tabernacle Church, were J. C. Spring, R. W. Putnam and wife, C. P. Jenks, L. Chapin, J. M. Raymond and wife, Mrs. Dodd, Robert Murray and Mrs. Humphrey. Meetings were held for a time in the First Presbyterian Church building, and in Laing's Hall. In February, 1865, Rev. Winfield Scott was called unanimously to supply the pulpit. He remained until January, 1872. During his administration the edifice on Sixth street, between Seneca and Shawnee, was erected. With the site, it cost about $45,000, and is one of the most imposing and spacious religious edifices of the city. Rev. Dr. Butler became pastor during the early part of 1872, but remained only a few months, being succeeded by Rev. I. S. Kallock, who remained two years. Rev. Allan Kerr supplied the pulpit for the next six months, and in 1875 was succeeded by Rev. J. B. Hardwick. Mr. Hardwick remained until 1878, when Rev. E. Nisbett, D. D., served the society for three years. From November, 1881, to May, 1882, the church was without a pastor. Rev. J. A. Leavitt, the present incumbent, then assumed charge. The society at present numbers 159 persons, and is growing.

The German Church—(Evangelical Association)—was organized in 1861, when the religious edifice, corner of Sixth and Osage streets, was constructed. Bishop R. Dubs and Rev. Mr. Miller held the first services. They were succeeded by Rev. Messrs. Rashkop, Berner, Haas, Vogelein, Beck, Kern, Kurtz and the present incumbent, Rev. Jacob Schmidt, who has been in charge of the church over a year. The church has a membership of about forty, and owns the parsonage attached. The entire property is valued at $5,000.

The Fifth Avenue Mission Church.—The closing of the war found many soldiers at Fort Leavenworth waiting for a discharge. Unavoidable hindrances and unjustifiable delays detained them for months, crushing their spirit and inducing disease. The United States Christian Commission, with Rev. R. Brown as agent, to mitigate these evils sent large quantities of hospital stores and reading matter to the sufferers. The co-operation of the city churches was obtained, and in connection with the relief work, a revival was developed and extended from the fort to the city. The commission was disbanded, but to continue the work seven persons organized themselves into the Mission Church, by a council in the Congregational Church. This was upon May 27, 1866, and Rev. Robert Brown became pastor. The literary stores of the commission were turned over by the military authorities to this organization. Services and distribution of papers were continued every Sabbath in the penitentiary and county jail (then occupying the same premises in the city), in the poor-house, guard-house, hospital and barracks of the fort. Saloon visitations, Sabbath street meetings, and neighborhood prayer meetings were conducted. For the colored population a Freedman's school was conducted during the evenings of the week, a school and evening service on Sunday. These services were supported by the co-operation of many who did not identify themselves with the organization. But with the blessings of peace, the business tide ebbed from Leavenworth as a center. The mission work ceased to be a pressing necessity or was taken up by the regular churches. In 1872 a charter for a Conservatory of Music and Collegiate School was procured and the germ of a new religious organization was planted, having for its foundation the union of religion and culture. Of the original seven who formed the first organization, Rev. Robert Brown is still pastor, and with his brother, A. B. Brown, director of the conservatory. The property is pleasantly located on Fifth avenue, South Leavenworth.

Congregation Benai Jerushan—Organized in 1862. The first officers were, Simon Abels, president; J. Wollman, vice president. Present officers: A. Loria, president; M. Ettenson, vice president; M. Bernstein, secretary; N. Schloss, treasurer; J. Wollman, B. Fletcher, N. Schloss, trustees. Meets first Sunday in January, April, July and October, at Jewish Synagogue. In 1864 the society erected the present synagogue, corner of Sixth and Osage streets, at a cost of $13,000. When finished and dedicated the house was free from all incumbrance or debt. Present number of members, forty-five.

African Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1861, by Rev. John Turner. The first meetings were held in an old basement room, and the first building used for educational purposes was erected under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Wilkerson. The church now occupied, on Kiowa street, was commenced in 1865, by Rev. J. Turner, and completed by J. C. Embry, in 1870. Present membership of the society, about 300; Rev. W. L. Harrad, pastor.

First Baptist Church (Colored).—Organized by Rev. R. Colwell, in 1862, with seven members. He was followed by Rev. D. Jones, and he, in turn, by Revs. D. G. Zet, C. B. Murphy, T. Y. Jones, F. D. Ewing, W. H. Howard, J. Brown, and J. W. Miller, present incumbent. Present membership of the church, seventy. The church building is situated on the southeast corner of Seneca street and Broadway.

Mount Olive Baptist Church (Colored).—This society was organized in November, 1864. Rev. Abe H. H. Turner, who is its present pastor, had charge of the church when it was first organized. A few years ago the society purchased a small building, corner of Sixth and Spruce streets, from the German. This is the house of worship which they now occupy. The membership of the church is about twenty, the attendance much larger.

Independence Baptist Church (Colored).—This is one of the most flourishing colored congregations of Leavenworth. The church building, corner of Sixth and Pottawatomie streets, was erected in 1879, at a cost of $3,700. With the site, the total value of the property would reach $6,000. Rev. T. H. Ewing is pastor of the church, which numbers nearly 250 members. The Sunday-school is attended by nearly 200 scholars, being in charge of R. J. Smith. The Independence Baptist Church, or, as it is sometimes called, the Mount Gilead Baptist Church, is, in fact, a religious power among the colored people of Leavenworth.

The Holy Epiphany Church (Colored Catholic).—The church edifice is situated on Pottawatomie street, between Sixth and Seventh streets. Its corner stone was laid September 29, 1878, and the building erected during the same fall. The dedicatory services occurred August 20, 1879, and the first confirmation was given by Rt. Rev. L. M. Fink, on the 15th of November of that year. The cost of the property, including grounds, was $8,500. Membership of the church, sixty. Rev. Martin Huhn is pastor.

There are also a small Baptist society, which worships on Chestnut street, and a Congregational society, whose church is on Sixth street. The colored people form a large proportion of the population of Leavenworth, and they are nearly all church-goers.

SCHOOLS.

During the early part of 1855, a small building was erected near the Levee, for a tin shop. In May, it was purchased for educational and religious purposes. Rev. J. B. McAfee, the Lutheran minister, moved the building to the southeast corner of Shawnee and Fifth streets, upon a lot then owned by George Russell, the tin and hardware dealer. This little building gave place to a two-story frame structure, erected for the church, but was afterward purchased by the city for school purposes. This was the first public school. In March, 1859, H. D. McCarty, who, for over a year, had been teaching a private institution, assumed charge of what was known as the Second District School, and was afterward elected City Superintendent.

The first Board of Trustees for common schools met on the 3d of July, 1858, and consisted of S. A. Marshall and Jared Phillips, from the First Ward, and Levi Houston and Nelson McCracken, from the Second. The last-named was chosen president. The board rented N. Z. Strong's house for ten weeks, and hired as a teacher, for the same length of time, George Wetherill. Soon afterward, Miss J. Howard was employed. In August, more school accommodations were required, and J. Robertson was induced to teach in his own house by $55 per month and $16 rent. In October the city was districted as follows: From Seneca street to the Government Reserve was the First District; from Seneca to Three-Mile Creek, the Second; all south of Three-Mile Creek, the Third. The building for the First District was the Christian Church, between Osage and Pottawatomie streets. Mr. Robertson's house, in South Leavenworth, was the Third District building, while a room formerly used as the Register's office, corner of Third and Delaware, was rented for the Second District.

In November the following text books were adopted for use in the city schools: Sander's series of Readers and Spellers; Webster's Dictionary; Cornell's Geography; Colton's Outline Maps; Ray's Arithmetic; Weld's Grammar; Wilson's United States History.

During the winter, a bill was passed in the Legislature creating the Board of Trustees into a body independent of the City Council, and providing for a regular City Superintendent of Schools. At this time the attendance of the three public schools was about 500. A graded system, proposed by the new Superintendent, H. D. McCarty, was adopted. Both city and county schools, however, were in a very disorganized condition, up to the time of the adoption of the State system in 1861. Mr. McCarty served his country in the war for three years, and then returned to Leavenworth to devote his time to education, notwithstanding the unpromising and unsettled condition of society.

In 1862, while Judge D. J. Brewer, County Superintendent, had charge of the city schools, the act authorizing the expenditure of $25,000 for the erection of school buildings in Leavenworth, received the signature of Gov. Thomas Carney. In pursuance of this act, the first regular public school building was erected—the Osage Street School. It cost $12,000, and is situated on Osage street, between Sixth and Seventh.

In July, 1868, M. McVicar became City Superintendent. He was formerly the Principal of the Brockport State Normal School, N. Y., and an experienced educator. His coming was the signal for a new departure in Leavenworth's system of public education. Heretofore the schools had been small, and somewhat loosely conducted. The year before, the first city school building for colored pupils had been completed in South Leavenworth, corner of Fourth avenue and Prospect street. Colored schools had been temporarily established as early as 1863, in the Christian and Baptist churches, but the brick building erected in 1867 was the first permanent structure built by the city. In 1868-'69, the colored people of North Leavenworth were accommodated by the erection of a second building, corner of Cheyenne and Fifth streets. As was stated above, the coming of Superintendent McVicar was the commencement of a new educational era here. The board had been thoroughly reorganized, the magnificent three-story brick structure, corner of Fifth and Dakota, called the "Morris School," was in process of erection, and every thing seemed ready to be shaped into a regular system. Mr. McVicar commenced a systematic course of grading in September, 1868, and though the opposition to him was of so unpleasant a character that he resigned in March, 1869, the credit of laying the foundation of the present admirable system is accorded to him. Mr. McVicar resigned to take charge of the Potsdam State Normal School, New York.

The Morris school building was completed during the early part of 1869, at which time P. J. Williams succeeded Mr. McVicar in the superintendency. It was during his incumbency, in 1871, that the State Normal School was established here, with himself as principal; J. Wherrell, professor of physical science, and Miss L. T. Allen, preceptress. Appropriations were received from the State, for four years, amounting to $26,900. In 1875, they were discontinued, and the Normal School died of starvation. Since 1872, the city had felt a growing need for a high-school building. For some time its sessions had been held in the Morris school building, but in 1875 the fine brick structure, corner of Walnut and Seventh streets, was completed, at a cost of $30,000. Since then this has been known as the High School Building. Prof. P. J. Williams held the office of City Superintendent about six years, and was succeeded by Prof. John Wherrell. Prof. F. A. Fitzpatrick, the present incumbent, has held the position three years. Besides the High School, the Morris School, the Osage Street School, and the North and South Leavenworth (Colored) Schools, there is the Shawnee Street School building (wood) and the Third Avenue School (brick), the latter being built in 1862, at a cost of $18,000, and greatly improved in 1865. During Prof. Fitzpatrick's administration, the change in grading schools, which has been made all over the country, was adopted in Leavenworth. The system is now divided into the High School, Grammar and Primary departments. The Grammar Department is divided into three grades, and the Primary into four. During the eleven years that the High School has been in existence, about 1,200 pupils have been enrolled. Of the 6,796 children of school age in the city, 3,158 are enrolled in the public schools, and 856 in private institutions—a total of 3,914, a little over 50 per cent. The value of school buildings, sites, furniture, etc., is $177,000. The educational system and public school buildings of 1882, as contrasted with the condition of affairs in 1858, is but another index of Leavenworth's growth.

CITY INSTITUTIONS.

Leavenworth City and Fort Leavenworth Water Company—Chartered March 16, 1881. In January, 1882, the company received the contract from the city for building the reservoirs, putting in necessary machinery and laying twelve miles of pipe. The Water Works of Leavenworth are being constructed on the gravitation system. The pumps and the settling reservoir are situated just north of the city, near the river, while the distributing reservoir is located on the high land of "Pilot Knob," two miles in an opposite direction. After being pumped and thoroughly settled the water is carried to the distributing point, situated 350 feet above the low-water mark of the Missouri River, or 190 feet above the highest point within the city. The beauty of the system is that, should either one of the reservoirs be disabled, the water supply would not be shut off. In March, 1882, work upon the reservoirs and machinery was commenced and completed in October. The capacity of the distributing reservoir is 5,500,000 gallons, and of the settling reservoir 5,000,000 gallons. The machinery consisting of two engines and two pumps, was made by the Great Western Manufacturing Company, of Leavenworth, at a cost of $24,000. The twelve miles of pipe, called for by the contract, will be laid by the middle of October—the entire system to be carried out requiring nineteen miles, as it is proposed to bring the supply to the State Penitentiary and Fort Leavenworth. The work contracted for this year will amount to $250,000, and the sum to be expended in completing the system, $300,000. The principal mains, north and south, will run down Second and Fifth streets and Broadway; those running east and west, down Kiowa, Pottawatomie, Shawnee, Delaware, Walnut and Arch. The works are now complete and in excellent working order.

Present officers of the company: L. T. Smith, president; H. D. Rush, vice-president; D. M. Swan, secretary; M. H. Insley, treasurer; G. W. Pearsons, chief engineer; T. A. Hurd, attorney.
